Berlin Suggests Roosevelt Call Parley; Britain Deems Hitler Pledge Worthless

Dies Seizes Data Here on Communists In U. S. Jobs

Document Discloses Navy Yard and G. P. O. Activities, Chairman Says

By John B. Oakes.
Post Staff Writer

A report on Communist activities in the District of Columbia, including the Navy Yard and the Government Printing Office, has been seized at local Communist headquarters by agents of the House Committee on Un-American Activities, Chairman Dies revealed last night.

After Martin Chancey, secretary of the District Communist Party, allegedly admitted in executive session of the committee that the report was genuine, Dies declared that it was "a valuable document in connection with membership of Government employes in 'front organizations.'"

Dies said the report mentions one name that will be "very important" in tying up the various "front" groups supposedly used by the Communist Party. The document was drawn up "within the last few months," Dies asserted. He added that some pages were missing.

Protest Follows Raid

The raid on local Communist headquarters took place Thursday and was immediately followed by a protest from Chancey that the Dies committee was making a "doormat" of the Bill of Rights.

Called up before the committee yesterday on subpena, Chancey protested that he had not had time to consult an attorney. He said he was given only a half hour's notice to appear.

After the secret questioning, he told reporters that Dies had asked him about local membership in the party. Chancey declared that he knew of not a single Government employe who is a member of the Communist Party—a statement contrasting with Dies' previous assertions that there are over 2,000.

Chancey said he told the committee the local party has 325 members, one-third of whom are colored. He said he had no membership list. The District party works on an annual budget of $2,500, he asserted.

About 20 per cent of that sum comes from dues payments, he explained. His own salary, he said, was "17 bucks a week."

Says Sabotage Was Discussed

In answer to further questions, Chancey said he had told the committee that the party's chief activities here were among colored persons "against police killings," of which he said there had been 60 in the past few years, working for suffrage for District voters and conducting a "fight for more adequate relief appropriations."

In testimony given at an open hearing yesterday by Neil Howard Ness, one-time writer for a German-American Bund periodical, the committee heard that plans "to paralyze the Pacific Coast from Seattle to San Diego" in case of a German-American war had been discussed at meetings of the Nazi Bund in Los Angeles.

Charging that the bund "is an arm of the German government," Ness

Truck Drivers Will Strike on Building Jobs

Walkout Called to Settle Jurisdiction Row With Engineers

The District Truck Drivers Union last night announced its determination to strike Monday on construction jobs here in the face of a ban issued by the A. F. of L. building trades department.

Local 639 of the Drivers, Chauffeurs and Helpers Union called the strike to force a showdown with local 77 of the Operating Engineers Union with which it has been disputing over membership of concrete-mixing truck drivers. The walkout will be called on six major building jobs unless the engineers give up some 70 truck operators to the driver's union, according to an ultimatum by the latter organization.

The impending strike places the Washington Building Trades Council in a delicate situation. The council last week voted its support of the drivers' union and was ready to back its strike. The council's parent body, the A. F. of L. building trades department, then ordered that the strike be prohibited. Perplexed by the flat decree, the council has asked the truck drivers to hold up their walkout, planned last week, and urged national officials

The S. S. Iroquois continued toward New York last night, her 584 American passengers—14 of them Washingtonians—serenely unaware that thousands of relatives were worried about them.

Among the passengers are:

Michael Brown, of 1004 Massachusetts avenue northwest, who had been visiting his five brothers in Ireland.

Thomas Flood, of 3217 Seventh street northeast, retired examiner with the Bureau of Lighthouses, who also had been visiting relatives in Ireland.

Harrison H. D. Walker, 2016 R street northwest, photographer with the National Geographic Magazine, had been making an eight-month tour of Europe on assignment.

Daniel J. Broderick, 1513 V street southeast, employe of the Census Bureau, left six weeks ago to visit his parents at Abbey Feale, Ireland, and was due at work Monday.

Peter and Helen Henderson, 412 First street southeast.

Planless Model:

Architects to Send Exhibit Of Capital—With Criticism

By Gerald G. Gross

Is Washington a "model city" or an architectural hodgepodge built to order for the sightseer without regard for the citizen who lives here?

A group of architects whose answers to the above are "no" and "yes," respectively, yesterday stirred a tempest which has split the Washington Chapter, American Institute of Architects, into two schools and threatens to take some of the sheen off the "Washington, the City Beautiful" tradition.

The American Federation of Arts yesterday revealed that it was planning a national tour for the exhibit, "Washington, the Planned City Without a Plan," which is the cause of the controversy. Just as soon as the display can be enlarged and made shipshape, it will be sent on a tour of 20 to 25 American cities, the A. F. A. disclosed.

Opposition to giving the disputed exhibit national circulation was emphatically expressed Thursday night at a meeting of the local A. I. A. chapter, The Post learned. However, a resolution was passed indorsing the display in principle and sanctioning the tour, on condition that its critics be permitted to send along a dissenting statement.

Property of the Washington A. I. A. chapter, the exhibit was prepared by its committee on housing and city planning. Including photographs, maps and written matter, it derides the L'Enfant and McMillan plans, upon which the physical development of the District is based, and implies that the National Capital Park and Planning Commission is incapable of guiding the city's physical progress.

Among those who pleaded at the architects' meeting against sending the exhibit on tour was Charles W. Eliot, 2d, executive officer of the National Resources Committee and former planning director of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

"The point I wished to make," he told The Post yesterday, "is that if these fellows want to get something done, let them get the assistance

Repealists Seeking Test Vote Monday

Isolationists Will Offer Their Own Cash-Carry Bill After Week-End Recess

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

The Senate last night called a week-end halt in neutrality debate as Administration leaders determined to seek an initial test of strength on the embargo repeal issue Monday and isolationists put forward a compromise "cash and carry" offer.

A recess was taken after only four days of debate, when it became apparent that a quorum was doubtful today. A leadership motion to meet today was amended when some Senatorial combatants protested "weariness" and others pointed to the large number of Senate absences.

Over objections of some isolationist leaders, neutrality bill managers determined to put to a vote when the Senate next meets the proposal by Senator Tobey (Republican), of New Hampshire, to divide the bill and act immediately on cash and carry features.

Administration Confident

Administration forces voiced confidence that the motion would be routed, and embargo repeal retained along with cash and carry in one Senate bill. Some opposition spokesmen opposed a vote at that time, contending it would not marshal full antirepeal strength and might be construed as weakness and division in their ranks.

Meanwhile, 12 stand-pat isolationists drew up in conference a statement of the type of bill they would be willing to support. Senator Borah (Republican), of Idaho, announced they would accept the Administration bill, if the arms ban was retained, and no credits extended to belligerents for purchase of commodities. Administration leaders reiterated that no such compromise would be acceptable

Committed support for the President's program continued to grow, as Senator Bailey (Democrat), of North Carolina, making his first formal declaration on the issue, declared for embargo repeal in a statement "to the people of North Carolina."

Bailey Plans Speech

"I have decided that the new legislation, as reported by the Committee of the Senate on Foreign Relations, will tend more to make for the peace and security of our country than the existing law," Bailey said. He plans a speech for the bill in the Senate on Monday.

Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, returned to the Capitol from a tour through the country to announce he would fight the repeal section.

"This is not our war and I'm going to vote against repeal of the embargo because I think it is a step toward getting this country into war," said Wheeler. "I want to see the embargo remain and then I want to see a strict cash and carry with reference to everything else."

Gold Saved From Nazi Invaders, Poles Report

Copyright, 1939, by New York Tribune, Inc.

Paris, Oct. 6.—Poland's gold, the total of which is not known but has been estimated at $50,000,000, has been rescued from the Germans up to the last zloty, according to Col. Adam Koc, minister of finance in the new Polish government formed in France.

Koc was unwilling to disclose either the amount or the whereabouts of the bullion. It is understood, however, that part of it is in Rumania and that most of it has been taken from Constanza to Alexandria on an English boat. It has most likely been transported to England.

The bullion was taken out of the Bank of Poland September 3 and 4, on Koc's orders. The ingots were loaded on city buses and sent to Brest-Litovsk, Lublin and Luck. Lorries then transferred the gold at night to the Rumanian frontier.

London Cites Nazi Failure To Keep Faith

Fuehrer's Program To Be Submitted to Dominions and France, However

By Raymond Daniell.
Copyright by New York Times

London, Oct. 6.—Adolf Hitler, in British eyes, was unconvincing in the role of Europe's pacifier in the tableau he staged before the Reichstag today, to boast of the success of Nazi arms in the east and to urge the democracies to let him call off the war in the west. It was the general feeling that Hitler's oratory had done little to restore European peace, which was destroyed when his generals invaded Poland.

An official British statement dismissed Hitler's survey of past events with the assertion that it "abounds in perversions of the truth which will be readily recognized by the people of this country and, indeed, of the whole world."

Of his "last" peace bid, the statement said:

"In their present form these proposals are in many respects vague and obscure, but it is noted that they contain no suggestion of reparation for the wrongs done by Germany to other peoples. Nevertheless, they will, as has been declared by the prime minister and the foreign secretary, be subjected to careful examination, in consultation with the governments of the dominions and the French republic.

Two Defects Cited

"But is is necessary to remember two things. First, that no peace proposals are likely to be found acceptable which do not effectively free Europe from the menace of aggression; and second, that assurances given by the German government in the past have on so many occasions proved worthless that something more than words will be required today to establish the confidence which must be the essential basis of peace."

Hitler's peace plan, it was pointed out, contained two major defects. The chief one was the source from which it emanated. Something more than the unsecured promises of the head of the German government, which in the past proved worthless, is needed to induce the French and British to lay down the arms they have taken up reluctantly, an official government statement said.

No Reparation for Wrongs

The second fault of Hitler's scheme to dictate a peace before the war is really begun on the Western Front, where British armies are gathering now, it was emphasized, was the utter failure to make any suggestion of reparation for the wrongs to Poland and Czecho-Slovakia.

While Hitler declared he was making a final effort to spare the democracies and his own country from the horrors of war, the belief existed here that the last word is yet unsaid in the cause of peace.

It was inconceivable to many that even Hitler could be so unaware of

4 Held in Plot To Kill Carol, Other Leaders

By the Associated Press

Bucharest, Oct. 6.—A plot to assassinate King Carol and other government leaders was declared broken up today with the arrest of two men and two women alleged to be members of the outlawed Nazi-inclined Iron Guard.

Police declared they held a professor, his daughter and another woman, who had just returned from Berlin, and the nephew of a retired chief justice of Rumania's highest court.

Police declared they found a prepared list of victims including King Carol, Premier Constantine Argetoianu, Minister of War Gen. Gabriel Marinescu and Victor Iamandi, the new minister of justice.

The police said they had evidence indicating the group had planned to poison Calinescu.

The judge's nephew, said the police, stole court documents concerning earlier guardist arrests.

Hitler Offers Peace Strictly on His Terms

Berlin, Oct. 6.—Fuehrer Adolf Hitler made his expected "peace offer" to the world today in his speech to his uniformed Reichstag at noon in the Kroll Opera House. He offered peace in words more ...ttle than the Reichstag has heard from him in many sessions, but it was peace on strictly German terms.

He proposed a conference to give Europe "a sense of security, of calm—in short, of peace." He renewed his earlier blessing on the ideals of disarmament and unrestricted foreign trade.

He announced that a new "rump Poland" will be set up, and that the nationality problem in eastern and southeastern Europe now calls for extensive resettlement of minorities—chiefly German. Finally he suggested that Germany desired the final solution of the Jewish problem.

Around these suggestions Hitler built a speech which was all things to all men. It lasted 1 hour 15

Analysis of Hitler's Speech Shows Menace to Americas

By Walter Lippmann.

HITLER'S PEACE proposal is that east of the Maginot Line the destiny of Europe shall be determined by Stalin and himself, that outside of Europe the former German colonies shall be restored to him.

LIPPMANN

If the proposal is seriously considered, the United States would, of course, have no standing in and could have no position on the question of eastern Europe. It has no direct interest. But in the discussion of the colonial question the United States would have a very important interest. For the return of the German colonies on the west coast of Africa would place Hitler's navy nearer to South America, and particularly to Brazil, than our own Navy. The matter would concern us all the more since, for as long as we can now see ahead, the Navy must remain in the Pacific, and it would require many years to construct another Navy capable of defending our communications with the great countries of South America.

OUR CONCERN would be dictated by elementary considerations of national defense: For our supplies of rubber and tin we are entirely dependent upon the safety of sea communications with the British and Dutch possessions in the Far East and with Brazil; for manganese, which is a critical raw material in the manufacture of steel, we are dependent on Brazil, on British West Africa and India, and on Russia. As Maj. Eliot has pointed out, the distance from our outermost base at St. Thomas to the Brazilian manganese mines in Minas Geraes is 3,700 miles. That is considerably farther than the distance from the United States to Europe. The

Lasting Place In History Offered to Mediator

Associated Press Staff Writer

Berlin, Oct. 6.—The head of any neutral state, preferably President Roosevelt, could achieve a lasting place in history by mediating the European war now, informed sources said tonight after Adolf Hitler offered peace or a fight to a finish.

Hitler's Reichstag speech today, in which he made his peace overture to Britain and France, these sources said, really was intended for neutral powers.

His words near the close of his hour and 20 minute address, "may those peoples and their leaders who are of the same mind now make their reply—and let those who consider war to be a better solution reject my outstretched hand," were a direct appeal to neutrals.

It was emphasized tonight that now is the time for any potential peacemaker to step in and mediate before, rather than after, what promises to become the bloodiest contest in history has begun in earnest.

Roosevelt to Be Wary

(Informed circles in Washington said Mr. Roosevelt was unlikely to propose an armistice in the European conflict unless he was assured Great Britain and France would accept.

(Mr. Roosevelt has sent five appeals to Hitler in one year, the third of which was rejected by the fuehrer in a bitter speech. It was said in Washington also that the German press and some Nazi officials have accused the President of warmongering and unneutrality.)

There has been a marked tendency since beginning of the war to forget all the derogatory things said in Germany about Mr. Roosevelt. This ostensibly resulted from a desire to win his and the American peoples' sympathy by "correct" conduct of the war and scrupulous observance of prize laws on the part of submarine and other naval commanders.

Grand Admiral Erich Raeder's warning to the American naval attache here that conspirators had plotted the sinking of the United States liner Iroquois, now en route to New York with American refugees, was taken as further evidence of a desire to appease American public opinion.

Jewish Offer a Bid to U. S.

Hitler's offer in his speech today to attempt to find a solution to the Jewish problem likewise was considered a bid for the favor of Americans.

Rightly or wrongly, official Germany believes France would welcome mediation at this time.

The reaction of neutrals and Germany's friends such as Italy and Soviet Russia to Hitler's "peace speech" was considered more important than the reaction of Britain and France, although the first reports as to how the British government took the speech were regarded as "optimistic."

(Britain promised a careful but wary examination of the speech. Premier Daladier of France said the war would continue until "the

Text of British Comment on Hitler's Talk

Fuehrer's Peace Bid Held Vague; Attention Called to Untruths

By the Associated Press

London, Oct. 6.—The text of the British government's comment on Adolf Hitler's Reichstag speech today follows:

Herr Hitler's Reichstag speech in its full text was only available in London in the course of the afternoon, and it has, therefore, not been possible to give it more than a preliminary examination.

The speech is divided into two parts.

The first, which is mainly a survey of past events, abounds in perversions of the truth, which will be readily recognized by the people of this country, and indeed of the whole world. Thus the claim that humane methods of warfare have been employed in Poland has been refuted by statements in Parliament and by the report of the United States Ambassador in Warsaw.

The world has already formed its own judgment about the alleged request of the Czechs to be incorporated in the Reich, while Herr Hitler's statement that he has never broken his promise only shows that words have for him a meaning totally different from that commonly attached to them.

Herr Hitler says that in the year 1598 an Englishman spoke of the cruelty and moral licentiousness of the Poles, and claims that recent events show that the Polish state was lacking in any national, historical, cultural or moral foundation.

Not View in 1935

This was not Herr Hitler's view when he said in his Reichstag speech on May 21, 1935 "We recognize the Polish state as the home of a great patriotic nation with the understanding and cordial friendship of avowed nationalists."

In a further passage Herr Hitler complains that "for many years aims have been attributed to German foreign policy which at best might have been expected from the imagination of a schoolboy."

If misapprehension there has been it can only be attributed to Herr Hitler's open aspirations for world domination in "Mien Kampf," to his utterances since he came into power and still more to his acts.

Finally the repeated suggestions that Great Britain is responsible for the war have no foundation in fact. On the contrary the efforts of His Majesty's government to preserve peace during the successive crises brought about by Germany during the last two years are well known and recognized by the whole world.

Proposals Held Vague

The second half of the speech contains what Herr Hitler describes as a few more proposals for peace. In their present form these proposals are in many respects vague and obscure, but it is noted that they contain no suggestion for reparation for the wrongs done by Germany to other peoples.

Nevertheless they will, as has been declared by the prime minister and the foreign secretary, be subjected to careful examination in consultation with the governments of the dominions and the French republic.

But it is necessary to remember two things:

First, that no peace proposals are likely to be found acceptable which do not effectively free Europe from the menace of aggression.

And second, that assurances given by the German government in the past have on so many occasions proved worthless that something more than words will be required today to establish the confidence which must be the essential basis of peace.

Trust Inquiry Studies Letter On Oil Scheme

Plot on Independent Dealers Is Laid to Major Companies

By the Associated Press

An oil company executive told the National Economic Committee yesterday that, "to be perfectly honest about it," not many automobiles really need so-called "high-test" gasoline. The witness, Sidney A. Swensrud, vice president of the Standard Oil Co. of Ohio, asserted, however, that cars which do need it—those with high compression engines—give very much better performance when "high-test" gasoline is used.

During exhaustive testimony on marketing phases of the petroleum industry, Swensrud conceded with reservations that independent dealers are chiefly responsible for gasoline price reductions, explaining that he felt they probably responded more quickly than the large, integrated companies to the conditions which produce the reductions.

He would not concede, however, that there would be no reductions if it were not for the independents and insisted the industry had passed on to the consumers most of the savings it had effected in the cost of producing motor fuel.

The committee, after an executive session yesterday, said it would take steps to determine the authenticity of a letter which a witness said disclosed a plan of major oil companies and railroads to damage independent Southeastern oil dealers and truckers.

The committee instructed its executive secretary to communicate with J. J. Pelley, president of the Association of American Railroads, concerning the letter which Eugene L. Orvis, Jersey City transportation lawyer, testified Thursday that Pelley had sent to officials of 13 major oil companies in 1935.

The letter purported to confirm an agreement under which the oil companies would discontinue the transportation of petroleum products by trucks in certain cases and that the railroads in the Southeastern territory would in turn endeavor to readjust oil freight rates and revise their system of leasing railroad property for filling station purposes.

Pelley said in a statement such proposed arrangements "were not consummated, however, and were never put into effect."

FHA Director Reports Gain In Building

McDonald Notes 30 Pct. Increase in Week and 2,000 During Month

Stewart McDonald, Federal housing administrator, said last night applications for construction of new houses under the FHA program were 30 per cent greater in the last week of September than in the week in 1938.

During the month, he said, in a broadcast, more than 10,500 new small homes were started under FHA inspection, 2,000 ahead of the same month last year.

Home building, which he termed one of the most vital factors in the Nation's business, is "going ahead with vigor," he said.

McDonald expressed the opinion that this was a good time to build or buy.

Reductions Not Expected

"While our studies do not indicate any marked increase in prices in the near future, nevertheless we do not look forward to any reductions," he said.

In another business development, the Federal Reserve Board announced that department store sales bomed in the week ending September 30, increasing 14 per cent above the same week a year ago.

Above Previous Week

Based on reports from 265 stores in all parts of the country, the report said the sales were 3 per cent above the previous week.

All Federal Reserve districts showed increases.

The Commerce Department announced that toy exports from the United States in the first eight months of 1939 were valued at $1,892,140, a 17 per cent increase over the same period last year. Largest sales were in metal toys, except mechanical, which amounted to $501,896, an increase of 46 per cent.

Anti-Repealists Advance Bill

on both sides appeared to have established a Senate majority for the Administration bill in excess of 2 to 1 before debate had rounded its first week. This was privately conceded yesterday by one prominent antirepeal leader, but extreme isolationist spokesmen continued to challeng the validity of any count at this time.

From now on Administration strategists plan to send fewer repeal advocates into the debate, in an effort to shorten the struggle and reach a final vote. The opposition continued to schedule a long list of speakers, and it appeared likely the fight would continue at least another two or three weeks.

One repeal polled yesterday predicted that only nine Senate Democrats in the end would vote against the bill, and said these would be mostly offset by "7 or 8" Republican votes for the bill. He listed the following Senators as the maximum Democratic opposition: Bulow, South Dakota; Clark, Idaho; Clark, Missouri; Downey, California; Holt, West Virginia; McCarran, Nevada; Overton, Louisiana; Walsh, Massachusetts, and Wheeler, Montana. Senator Bone, of Washington, probably also would oppose the bill, but he has been absent and seriously ill.

Thomas Answers Borah

Chief advocate of repeal sent into yesterday's debate was Senator Thomas, Democrat, of Utah, who aided in drafting the legislation. Thomas answered in detail Senator Borah's opening-day speech against repeal and challenged Borah's assertion that lifting the embargo means war intervention. Thomas said "we are considering this legislation with but a single objective, and that is to keep the United States out of war."

Opposition strategists selected a Democrat, Senator Downey, of California, as their fourth-day speaker against repeal. Downey argued that removal of the embargo on arms "must help to develop a greater war trade and war boom with most disastrous consequences to the American people." Resulting inflation of commodity prices and establishment of a "seller's market," Downey charged, would be tantamount "to a tax upon the American people equal to 25 per cent to 50 per cent of their incomes."

Borah Speaks for Group

At yesterday's isolationist conference, 12 repeal opponents discussed the Tobey "split bill" motion and a possible substitute measure, but agreed only to limit their fight to repeal. Following the conference, Borah issued this statement for the group:

"We are still willing, as has been our position from the beginning, to accept the Administration bill if the Administration will leave in the law the embargo of arms, ammunition and implements of war and provide for cash instead of credit on other commodities. But we will not yield to the repeal of the arms embargo and it is not necessary if neutrality is the sole objective."

Concurring in the statement, besides Borah, were Downey, Bulow, Overton, McCarran and Holt (Democrats), Johnson, of California; Danaher, of Connecticut; Vandenberg, of Michigan, and Nye, of North Dakota (Republicans); LaFollette, of Wisconsin (Progressive), and Shipstead, of Minnesota (Farmer-Labor).

Connally Launches Attack

Senator Connally (Democrat), of Texas, who helped draft the Administration bill, used the isolationist statement as the basis for a Senate attack. The Texan said a main opposition argument against embargo repeal had been "you cannot change the rules after the game has started." He said bill opponents apparently were willing to "change some of the rules" since they now accepted cash and carry and opposed embargo repeal.

"I want to inquire why it is wrong to change the embargo on the ground that would be unneutral, if it is all right to change the shipping laws?" Connally asked.

Senator Bailey's statement said the Administration bill "is in accord with our historic policy and with the historic standards of the international law of neutrality, and . . . will, without risk to our ships and without risk of money or men, tend not to deprive England and France and their allies of the means of defense and of sustenance."

Raps Hitler

Bailey assailed Hitler and said he was chiefly influenced by "a moral consideration" in making his choice for repeal.

"What may be said on behalf of the German leader," said the North Carolina Democrat, "it must be said that he has shown to the world that no obligation is binding upon him, and that there is no way to deal with him by way of covenant or agreement."

He nonetheless warned against lending "money to England or France" or engaging "our country or its sons in this war."

Senator Thomas, of Utah, in his Senate speech yesterday for the bill, offered rebuttal of each of Senator Borah's points against repeal.

"Neither one of his (Borah's) conclusions, namely that repeal is a violation of international law and, secondly, that it would constitute an affirmative act of intervention, may be granted," said Thomas. "Those two arguments I deny."

U. S. Asked to Find Chicago Woman Lost in Europe

Friends in Washington yesterday sought State Department help in locating Josephine Kroll, 28, Chicago accountant, believed "somewhere in Poland."

Since the war started, her parents, Joseph and Anna Kroll, of Chicago, have received only a note, written in German, sent from Hindenburg, Germany, by a stranger. The letter said Miss Kroll was safe, and as evidence she was given permission to print a note at the bottom.

"Quiet here now, feeling fine, love, Josephine Kroll," the sprawling printed letters said. Below appeared "Heil Hitler," in the stranger's hand, and his signature.

But the printing was not Josephine's.

Robert W. Farrell, of 1726 Uhle street, Arlington, Va., carried the message of Miss Kroll's parents to the State Department.

CAA Chairman Sets 20,000 as Goal in $7,500,000 Program

Expansion of the civilian pilot training program to permit instruction of approximately 20,000 fliers will be undertaken next year, Chairman Robert H. Hinckley, of the Civil Aeronautics Authority, said yesterday.

Hinckley also revealed the authority shortly will begn a $100,000 research program, whereby a special committee of eminent psychologists will be appointed in the next few days. They will ascertain qualifications of prospective pilots.

Hinckley said the training program is intended to stimulate interest in civil aviation. He added the expanded activity had been worked out "in co-operation with the Air Corps" and would provide a "reserve should a national emergency arise."

$7,500,000 a Year

The enlarged schedule of training, officials said, would cost approximately $7,500,000 a year. Advanced instruction will be added to the present primary flight education now being received by nearly 8,500 young men and women in 335 schools, with 25 to be added next year.

The research investigations he explained, will be carried out by the colleges and schools maintaining scholastic faculties fitted for the work.

Other Problems Cited

Hinckley said ground school work already had started at most of the colleges and universities which had undertaken the training work and said flying experience would begin late this month and early in November.

Officials said other problems to be studied in co-operation with the Army School of Aviation Medicine and the National Research Council will include adequacy of the physical examination given applicants for training; differences between physical examination and variations among instructors; characteristics and psychological makeup needed for fliers; senses and muscles used in work and flying ability, and the capacities of women as fliers.

asserted that American members were "decidedly" loyal to Germany. The witness, who ceased active work with the bund in 1936, said that "we always discussed what we could do toward helping Germany (in a war), such as blowing up powder plants, water works and docks," and doing espionage work.

The witness stated that "at one time we had 100 members on the Pacific Coast whom we could depend on to paralyze defense."

Nazi agents on the Coast received "fullest co-operation" from bund officials, Ness averred.

"Did you see many agents you had reason to believe were over here for espionage purposes?" queried Dies.

"Yes," was the reply.

"This sort of thing goes on all the time?"

"Yes."

"There is no question in your mind but that the bund is an arm of the Nazi government for espionage" pressed the chairman.

"That's true."

Ness stated that he and Herman Schwinn, whom he had previously described as "Fuehrer of the West," had taken one of these Nazi agents to "see the position of the American Fleet at San Pedro and the naval base at San Diego." The agents, he said, were shown "every consideration" by bund officials, and took photographs of "strategic points" along the coast.

Ness said the "majority of bund members were "skilled workmen," at least one of whom was employed in the Douglas Aircraft factory.

At one bund meeting, said Ness, Schwinn read a letter which was "personally signed by Adolf Hitler," praising the organization for "good work and effectiveness in southern California."

Follows Hitler's Program

Ness told the committee that Schwinn said the bund would follow "the same policy and program" as Hitler, beginning with attacks on the Jews and proceeding to action against the Catholics. Members of the bund, he said, "often referred to taking over the United States Government."

The name of a Count von Bulow was introduced into the testimony when Ness said that "we thought he was the head of German espionage and a friend of the chief of naval intelligence for the district—but our suspicions were allayed."

Ness said that Prince von Lippe, who had been given a scholarship at the University of Southern California, was "an active member of the bund" and had attempted, with some success, to arrange lectures on the Nazi government in California high schools.

Senators Find Little Sincerity In Hitler's Talk

But Most of Them Say It's Not U. S. Place To Answer for Allies

By the Associated Press

Some Senators indicated yesterday that they had little confidence in the sincerity of Adolf Hitler's speech to the Reichstag.

"I don't see how England and France can put any faith in Hitler's promises," said Senator Norris (Independent), of Nebraska. "I don't have any confidence in him. He has lied so often.

"Every time he takes a country he says he has no further territorial ambitions. But our part in all of this is merely that of a spectator. We should neither insist that peace terms be accepted nor insist that they be rejected."

Won't Affect Us, Says Nye

Senator Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, a leader of the opposition to the Administration neutrality bill, told reporters that Hitler, like Presidents, Kings and premiers, talks for his folks back home.

Nye said Hitler's statement would not affect the neutrality fight in the Senate and added "no matter what they do (in Europe) we must stay out of it."

"I think that we should beware of the Greeks when they come bearing gifts," said Senator King (Democrat), of Utah. "I don't believe in Hitler's sincerity. It is hardly to be expected that the Allies will give serious consideration to his proposals until and unless he gives additional evidence that he will cease making war and will make some adequate amends to the cruel conquest of Poland."

Bloom Gloomy For Peace

Chairman Bloom (Democrat), of New York, of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, described Hitler's speech as "just another threat." Bloom said he "heard nothing in it that would indicate there was any chance of the other nations getting together with Hitler to discuss peace."

Senator Capper (Republican), of Kansas—"He was trying to frighten Britain and France into peace on German terms, also he was bolstering up the spirit of the German people, but it is up to Britain and France and not to the United States to give the answer."

Senator Herring (Democrat), of Iowa—"The speech of Hitler impressed me as the plea of a guilty soul which is finally beginning to recognize its own crimes."

Arthur L. Schoenthal, vice president of the Washington Building Trades Council, revealed last night that John P. Coyne, president of the A. F. of L. building trades department, had not yet answered the request for a decision.

At council headquarters here it was pointed out that while the strike ban order would keep the 27 member unions of the District Building Trades Council from joining the strike Monday by refusal to pass pickets, the truck drivers' strike might "strangle" construction activities through blocking delivery of materials.

S. M. Keyser, business agent for the drivers, declared he believed the entire membership of the council here would back the projected strike and estimated the walkout might affect as many as 5,000 workers. The strike of 200 truck drivers, he said, would immediately halt or cripple work on the Bowen Building, Fifteenth and I streets northwest; the Lafayette Building, across the street; a parking lot and filling station at Tenth and E, a building at St. Elizabeths Hospital, and sewer jobs at Twenty-second and M and at Twenty-sixth and Pennsylvania. No Federal buildings were involved, Keyser said.

Carpenters Won't Join

A statement issued by Walter Dunn, general representative, asserted the Washington Carpenters Council would not join any general strike called "because of jurisdictional disputes."

Meanwhile the Labor Department Conciliation Service announced its decision in the dump-truck drivers' controversy. A two weeks' strike, also affecting building construction, was ended recently when the matter was laid before the Conciliation Service for arbitration.

The decision fixes and 8-hour day, 40-hour week and wage rate of 70 cents per hour for drivers of trucks 3 tons or less in capacity; 80 cents in excess of 2 tons. The terms cover building operations on all work contracted for on or after September 27, and is effective December 31, 1939, for work previously under contract. Drivers in street operations are to work and 8-hour day, 44-hour week and will receive 10 cents less per hour. Holidays, holiday work and overtime are provided for. Two hundred and eighty drivers are affected by the arbitration.

Czechs May Try Exiled Regime

Paris, Oct. 6 (AP).—Former President Eduard Benes of Czecho-Slovakia arrived in Paris from London tonight and was expected to confer with officials of French and Polish governments on what diplomatic circles reported would be an effort to establish a Czecho-Slovak government in exile similar to Poland's.

Benes was accompanied by Gen. Viest, one-time ranking commander in the Slovak army under the German protectorate, who fled Slovakia when he saw war was inevitable. He was said to have left Slovakia to serve with the British-French forces.

White House Gets Its Fall Cleaning

With President and Mrs. Roosevelt away for the week-end, the White House yesterday was in the throes of one of the biggest fall cleaning jobs in America. The grounds, closed to tourists for more than two weeks until recently, were thrown open and the gates left ungarded.

The White House itself still is closed to tourists.

Hull Gets Medal For Hemisphere Unity Endeavors

Secretary of State Hull yesterday was presented with the Pan American League Gold Medal "for the greatest service of his time to the cause of unity in the Western Hemisphere, and thereby to an improved world today."

The award, made once each three years, is for the greatest contribution of a personal kind to the cause of Pan-Americanism.

Mrs. Clark Stearns, president of the league, made the presentation. She was accompanied by Mrs. J. D. Young, director of the National Student League, and Mrs. George Roberts, secretary of the Pan American League.

The citation added that Hull had introduced "a new ideal of statesmanship of the highest merit" and had adhered "to a diplomacy of truth."

Marines to Lose Fancy Uniforms

The Marines are due to lose their reputation as America's best dressed fighting men. Their uniform factory cannot turn out both dress and field uniforms for the 7,000 new recruits. So only the latter are to be made, and most of the 18,000 Devil-dogs now in service will have to put their "blues" away.

Marines on duty here at the barracks, Navy Yard and Navy Department, and those attached to the fleet, will keep their blues, it was said.

Meeting Planned

The Biological Society of Washington will hold a public meeting at 8 p. m. today at the Cosmos Club. Speakers will be Frederick J. Stevenson, of the Bureau of plant industries in the Department of Agriculture, and Victor Cahalane, of the National Parks Service.

(A detailed story on the controversy, covering the events which led up to it, will appear in the special articles section of The Sunday Post.)

and advice of existing agencies before springing their plans on the public."

Eliot, grandson of the famous Harvard University president, said he was "frankly surprised and somewhat shocked" that the group of "insurgents" had not consulted the District Commissioners, Park and Planning Commission or Fine Arts Commission before preparing such a critical exhibit and arranging for its national tour.

Alfred Kastner, Washington architect and leader of the anti-L'Enfant bloc, countered that data for the exhibit was obtained from Federal and District agencies.

Horace W. Peaslee, secretary of the Central Housing Committee and the architect who designed Meridian Hill Park, deplored the "rebels'" lack of "civic consciousness," while commending them for their interest in the development of the Capital.

"But their exhibit states only one side," he protested. "It does not show what has been accomplished by the planning commission. If it goes out over the country, it may do much more harm than good."

Five Days for Report

The resolution adopted by the A. I. A. chapter gives the opposition five days in which to file a minority report, which would accompany the exhibit on tour. The deadline is Tuesday. That is too little time in which to prepare a rebuttal, Peaslee declared.

According to Kastner and Miss Chloethiel Woodard, who wrote a statement to accompany the exhibit, "the plan of Washington in 1939 is obsolete and inappropriate."

The L'Enfant plan, they say, was a bold scheme in 1791, but "viewed from the distance of a century and a half it lacks the elements of what we would define today as the basic physical requirements for a democratic city."

Other members of the A. I. A. chapter's housing and planning committee, which created the challenging display, are Norman Hansen, Allan Jacobs, Harry Ormston, Francis Palms, jr., Arthur Riehl, Stanley Reese, Allan Squire and Lewis Stevens.

A. F. L. Loses Court Fight Over Drivers

Justice Rules Union Usurped Authority In Beer Truck Case

The American Federation of Labor "usurped authority" in transferring 25,000 beer truck drivers to the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, Justice T. Alan Goldsborough ruled yesterday.

Justice Goldsborough found the federation violated contracts in the move and was supported by its teamster affiliate with "violence, coercion and intimidation." He granted the beer drivers an injunction to prevent the transfer and set a bond of $15,000.

Joseph A. Padway, federation chief counsel, announced in Cincinnati he would recommend an appeal, the Associated Press reported.

"That unsound and illegal doctrine," he said, "cannot stand, and I must advise an appeal so as to protect the rights of every international union affiliated with the A. F. L."

Justice Goldsborough said that "whenever usurped authority comes in contact with the jurisprudence of a democracy it then and there ceases to exist. There is no such thing as a benevolent despot."

The opinion reviewed nearly 40 years of jurisdictional strife within the A. F. L. and included liberal quotations from union records.

Goldsborough found:

The A. F. L. and its unions are bound by their contracts and the courts will intervene when they fall out among themselves over what the contracts mean.

Membership in a union involves property rights which will be protected by the courts.

Decisions of union tribunals will be respected by the courts, even though the courts do not agree with them, so long as the tribunals act within their rights.

No organization has a right to pass on what union a worker shall join or to support its ruling with "coercion" of any kind.

The International Union of the United Brewery, Flour, Cereal and Soft Drink Workers of America, which won the case, joined the A. F. of L. in 1887. In 1900 the Teamsters Union joined the A. F. of L. and claimed the right to organize the brewery drivers. In 1935 the parent union ordered the transfer. Two years later the brewery drivers brought suit.

Vessel Put On Spot

They did not know that the Iroquois was the cause of an international name-calling furore; that Admiral Erich Raeder, head of the German navy, warned the United States Government that the vessel had been put on the spot—presumably by the British.

And it was just as well that they didn't know. Like thousands in Washington and millions elsewhere, people who want a logical answer to everything, the passengers probably would have been asking, "Why?"

And, like those ashore, they would get no answer. There didn't seem to be any answer—at least any logical answer.

A Nazi spokesman in Berlin explained to the Associated Press that Admiral Raeder's warning was "merely an act of comradeship." He said that Admiral Raeder informed the American naval attache, Commander Albert Schraeder, about the Iroquois' danger "as a friendly gesture so the United States could take measures to save the lives of Americans aboard."

That being the case, it appeared that if the Iroquois got home safely, the German Admiralty would expect the United States to be grateful in a comradely way.

The British admiralty blew up as if a torpedo had hit its austere headquarters. It issued the following statement:

"The attention of the admiralty has been drawn to the suggestion emanating from Berlin that the United States ship Iroquois is to be sunk 'through a repetition of the circumstances which marked the loss of the steamship Athenia.'

"The Athenia was, of course, sunk by a German U-boat which was plainly seen by responsible survivors, no British submarine being within several hundred miles. The fact that such suggestions should be made by the German Government enables us once again to realize and measure the criminal mentality of Nazi Party leaders, but it is surprising that an officer of the former imperial German navy like Admiral Raeder should bemean his uniform by lending himself to such baseness."

Capt. A. E. Chilton, master of the Iroquois, wirelessed that he had not found any explosives in the vessel. He did not tell the passengers about Admiral Raeder's warning because he was fearful that some of them might get hysterical.

Four Navy destroyers and a Coast Guard cutter, ordered to meet the Iroquois after Admiral Raeder's tip had been turned over to President Roosevelt, were speeding toward the "imperiled" vessel, which left Cobh, Ireland, Tuesday.

Stephen Early, who after making public the White House statement on the warning late Thursday, gave reporters a verbal postscript expressing incredulity, said yesterday that the German admiralty was so anxious to get the Iroquois information to this country that Naval Attache Schraeder in Berlin was required to sign a statement acknowledging Admiral Raeder's information.

Secretary of State Cordell Hull told reporters yesterday that this Government was seeking the fullest available facts as to who was the author of what he termed the dastardly act of sinking the Athenia.

Hull said that American warships had looked into reports that the Dominican Republic was refueling German submarines in the Caribbean, but that the State Department had every reason to believe in the little republic's neutrality.

Von Bernstorff, Kaiser's Envoy Here, Dies at 77

German Diplomat, Refugee From Nazis, Almost a Recluse

By the Associated Press

Geneva, Oct. 6.—Count Johann Heinrich von Bernstorff, one-time gay German Ambassador whose diplomatic assignment in Washington ended with the United States' entry into the World War in 1917, died today of heart disease, a refugee from his own country since the rise of the Hitler regime.

BERNSTORFF

Von Bernstorff, the last Ambassador to represent imperial Germany in the United States Capital, would have been 77 years old November 14.

At his bedside when death came was the count's American-born wife, the former Jeanne Luckemeyer, of New York. She had gone to the United States only last February to regain the American citizenship she renounced upon her marriage to Von Bernstorff 52 years ago.

Von Bernstorff, a leading figure in the brilliant life of pre-war Washington, and an object of American hatred in the war-impassioned days of 1917, had lived almost as a recluse for the past five years.

He saw few old friends and kept strictly out of politics, working on the memoirs which he published in 1936, and pottering about in his garden. For the past 18 months he had been ill.

Von Bernstorff's death-in-exile was in marked contrast to his busy, headline-crowded years in America.

He came of a noted German diplomatic family. His father was ambassador to Great Britain when Johann was born in London in 1862. The younger Bernstorff served successively in Belgrade, Dresden, St. Petersburgh, Munich, London and Cairo before being sent to the United States in 1908. He served in Washington until he was given his passport February 3, 1917, two months before the United States declared war.

As Ambassador to the United States he was much in demand as a speaker and received honorary degrees from several universities.

With the outbreak of the World War, his task became increasingly difficult. He often warned his government that its course was leading the United States into the war.

"My task was done when the Lusitania incident was disposed of without America's entry into the war," he once remarked.

"After that, the question of peace or war depended not on me, but upon the Wilhelmstrasse and the great army headquarters.

"They knew exactly that a repetition of the Lusitania incident or the unlimited extension of submarine warfare would automatically mean war with the United States. But they would not listen."

Despite his warnings, it became Von Bernstorff's duty on January 31, 1917, to advise the American Government of the German submarines' "sink-on-sight" campaign against merchant ships.

Three days later, President Wilson announced to Congress that diplomatic relations with Germany had been severed.

Returning home, Von Bernstorff was given a new assignment as Ambassador to Turkey. When the German revolution broke out he quit the diplomatic service, but in 1921 he returned to public life as a member of the Reichstag of the new German republic.

In 1924 Von Bernstorff quit the Reichstag and retired with his wife to his estate on Lake Starnberg in Upper Bavaria.

Barrel Saves Virginia Girl Flung Into Sea as Ship Sinks

Ronda Survivor, 19, Tells Gripping Tale Of Rescue

Hoboken, N. J., Oct. 6 (AP).—Joy Allan Duncan, 19-year-old student of Richmond, Va., returned from the war zone today with a gripping tale of how she and her aunt survived the sinking of the Swedish freighter Ronda in the North Sea September 13.

One of 591 passengers arriving on the Pennland of the Holland-American Line, Miss Duncan said the Ronda apparently hit a mine and went down almost immediately, taking the captain and his wife with it.

Miss Duncan, a tall, attractive blonde, said she was thrown into the icy sea when the Ronda sank, and was sucked under water several times by eddying whirlpools.

The girl, who resides with her aunt, Mrs. John Etchison, in Richmond, had no life preserver and was barely able to flounder about until an empty barrel floated by. Two sailors swam to her and began making a raft from the debris.

Finally, she said, the ship carpenter picked them up in a small dinghy into which 20 persons were hauled. Eighteen others were lost.

Miss Duncan and Mrs. Etchison, who arrived with her niece today, were the only women in the boat which was built to hold six persons.

Miss Duncan, whose parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Scanes, reside in London, said several German planes flew overhead, but none offered assistance. On the third night the Italian freighter, Providenz, rescued them when they were 6 miles from the coast.

Congress Should Determine Thanksgiving Date, Says Case

Administration leaders may have the votes to repeal the arms embargo, but they had better test sentiment on the President's proposal to move up Thanksgiving a week, according to Representative Case (Republican), of South Dakota.

The author of one of two House resolutions proposing that Thanksgiving be fixed by law on the last Thursday of November, Case said yesterday he thought the issue should be settled at the extra session "or it will be too late to avoid national turmoil and confusion."

With the States split about half and half over Thanksgiving dates, Case said the "confusion rivals only the European war in public interest.

"While the Allies quarrel with the Axis powers over who shall have Turkey," he added, "Americans wonder which day is proper for them to eat turkey in their homes."

Texas has chosen the safest path, he said, by deciding to observe the third and fourth Thursdays.

Case's resolution would make the fourth Thursday of November a legal holiday in the District of Columbia and all Federal territory. The author explained that a Federal law cannot impose a legal holiday on the States, but he expects the latter would follow the precedent should Congress adopt his resolution.

The South Dakotan said he doesn't care whether Congress adopts his resolution or the one offered by Representative Reed (Republican), of Illinois, but it ought to settle the issue.

He has prepared statistical tables to show that, if the President's idea prevails, Thanksgiving and Armistice Day will be only from six to nine days apart during the next decade, whereas the intermission has been 13 to 18 days.

Case admitted Thanksgiving has not always been on the same day of the month, nor even in the same month. George Washington, however, selected the last Thursday of November. Abraham Lincoln issued the first proclamation.

"And so it has remained undisturbed until the year of our Lord 1939," he said, "when President Roosevelt, without advance notice to church leaders, calendar makers, football coaches, college term registrars or Congress, moved it up a week."

Killer Flees Guards With Blonde Bride

Mother Also Forced at Point of Gun to Quit Car on Way to Prison

Atlanta, Oct. 6 (AP).—State police reported tonight that Richard Gallogly, wealthy Atlanta thrill slayer, overpowered guards taking him from Atlanta to the State Prison tonight and escaped.

The former Oglethorpe University student was serving a life term for the slaying in 1928 of an Atlanta drug store clerk in company with George Harsh, of Milwaukee. Gallogly forced the guards out and drove off in their automobile, the patrol announcement said.

Mann said Gallogly was traveling with two guards in Mann's automobile in company with his pretty blonde bride of a few months and his mother, Mrs. W. E. Yankey, of Atlanta.

Forced Mother Out, Too

The penal board official said Gallogly pulled a pistol on the guards and forced them and his mother to leave the car. His bride accompanied him in the escape, Mann said. Where Gallogly got the pistol, Mann said he did not know, but added "there are plenty of ways he could have got one."

Gallogly left for the State prison shortly after the withdrawal of a clemency appeal before Gov. Rivers.

The Harsh-Gallogly case attracted nationwide attention.

Harsh testified last May at the clemency hearing for Gallogly, that he and Gallogly planned and executed a series of hold-ups that resulted in two killings.

Serving Life Term

Harsh and Gallogly were serving life sentefices for killing Willard H. Smith.

Harsh said that he, with Gallogly's cooperation, also had killed S. H. Meek, a grocery clerk, in an attempted holdup 10 days before the Smith killing.

Gallogly is 29 and his bridge 23. The Harsh and Gallogly escapades occurred while they were students at Oglethorpe.

Letts to Permit Soviet Maginot

Copenhagen, Denmark, Oct. 6.—Stockholm reports that a Lithuanian delegation has been empowered by the Kaunas government to fly to Moscow tomorrow evening and conclude a treaty with Russia. The delegation will be headed by Foreign Minister Juozas Urbsys and will include Vice President Gen. Stasys Rastikis.

The treaty will be far-reaching, it is understood, permitting the Russians to build a "Maginot line" along the Lithuanian-German frontier.

First Blood Test Ever Ordered Here Is Set for Monday

Justice Adkins yesterday designated Dr. Oscar B. Hunter to perform the first paternity blood test ever ordered by the District Court.

The test was ordered for 10 a. m. Monday, on Mrs. Mary E. Beach, 18, and her two-months-old baby, of 1048 Bladensburg road. Mrs. Beach sued her husband, James E. Beach, 21, of 905 F street northeast, for maintenance. He retorted that he was not the child's father and his lawyer, John Paul Jones, asked for the blood test.

The test may not be made, as John T. Bonner, Mrs. Beach's lawyer, plans to file an appeal Monday. He denies the blood test is reliable.

Bailey Dismisses Suit Over Library

Justice Bailey yesterday dismissed the action of Attorney Huver I. Brown, of 811 Florida avenue northwest, to eject the library of the District Bar Association from its courthouse quarters. Brown said the tenancy was unlawful, because it forbade colored lawyers to use the library.

Bailey said control of the courthouse was vested in the Attorney General and the courts had no right to interfere with it.

Plane Stowaway Steals Motorcycle Of Cop and Flees

Their first stowaway rode a plane from Washington to Pittsburgh and escaped on a policeman's motorcycle early yesterday, Pennsylvania Central Airline officials reported.

The youth popped out of the rear baggage compartment when the plane landed and challenged:

"Where are we?"

He claimed he was tired and crawled into the plane to sleep. Doubting his story, Raleigh Johnson, transportation agent, collared the youth but he broke away and fled.

Boys Club Leaders Plan for Season

The Board of Directors of the Metropolitan Police Boys Club gathered for the first fall dinner meeting at the Ambassador Hotel last night to hear committee reports and discuss plans for the season.

One report was the record for the past summer showing 1,004 boys in attendance at the summer camp at Scotland, Md. This report, submitted by Maj. Ernest W. Brown, first vice president, was prepared by Club Director Forrest L. Binswanger.

Binswanger reported membership of the organization exceeds 12,000.

750,000 See Mundelein Borne to Grave

Cardinal Buried in Suburb; Procession Down Michigan Ave.

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Oct. 6.—George Cardinal Mundelein's faithful followers, friends and fellow citizens—750,000 of them—saw his body borne to the grave today.

Some 2,000 attended a solemn pontifical requiem mass for the prelate in Holy Name Cathedral.

Legions of others stood in respectful silence while his magnificent funeral cortege wended slowly through the streets.

Thousands, gathered behind police lines, saw a colorful procession of clergymen move into the church for the services. Five hundred monks and priests in black cassocks and white surplices led the retinue. Behind them came 70 monsignori, 50 bishops and 13 archbishops in purple robes.

Nave and chancel were filled with churchmen and civic leaders. Postmaster General Farley, United States Senators Lucas and Slattery, Gov. Horner, judges, aldermen and other public officials were in the congregation as Archbishop Amleto Cicognani and his four assistants ascended to the altar.

The mourners, representing all faiths, listened to the reverberating responses of a choir of 185 voices as they looked with reverence on the body of Cardinal Mundelein which faced the worshipers on a light-flooded catafalque near the communion rail.

In the van of the 2,000 marchers down Michigan avenue came 28 khaki-clad State motorcycle policemen. Behind them moved 20 mounted officers, eight platoons of city patrolmen and firemen, the Black Horse military troop in the black and white regalia of Hussars, Federal, State and city officials, including Mayor Kelly, and delegations from Catholic societies, Boy, Girl and Sea Scouts in uniform.

In their wake traveled the hearse and 50 automobiles carrying clergymen. At the Outer Drive the funeral column halted and the cars bearing the clergy proceeded north over a 38-mile route to St. Mary of the Lake Seminary in suburban Mundelein.

There the man who came out of New York's lower East Side to become the first prince of his church in the Middle West was laid to rest—virtually enshrined—in a crypt beneath the altar of the Immaculate Conception Chapel.

Russia, However, May Prove Double Peril To Hitler in the West

Copyright by New York Times.

Paris, Oct. 6.—Adolf Hitler's Reichstag speech terminates as far as Germany is concerned the first of the war period, which has brought a realization of Germany's plan in the west. Everything did not, however, go according to the fuehrer's wishes.

Undoubtedly Poland was submerged by the enormous mass of 50 powerfully equipped German divisions, and Berlin church bells yesterday rang out as if to celebrate a great victory. But in reality Germany has had to share with the Soviet Union, which, without any losses, has easily obtained for themselves an empire in eastern and central Europe.

By their progressive penetration of the Baltic states and by their advance along the Carpathians, all the way to Lemburg, Soviet Russia today becomes an essential factor in the European status in the east.

She has expelled the German hegemony from the Baltic Sea and she has barred Germany on the road to the Balkans and the Black Sea; she has conserved her ascendancy over Turkey, placed on the extreme fringe of Europe like a shock absorber between two coalitions.

May Become Peril

If Germany by her immense concessions to the Soviets had at least insured for herself a perfect peace of mind as regards her rear to permit her to pursue calmly her war against the western powers her plan would strike one as of great depth, although connected with a great many risks. But this is not at all the case. The Reich is far from relieved of all worries in eastern Europe. To have associated herself with an empire like the Soviets and to have strengthened it by making it a present of a victory, and at the same time to expose herself to its propaganda and its imperialism will cause fear at all times that its appetite will grow so as to become a new peril, is not a state of mind to be invited.

In view of Great Britain's growing force, Germany will be obliged to engage most of its forces, if it wants to undertake decisive action on the Western Front, not permitting her to keep in the east more than the slimmest line of troops, which would be possible only in the presumption that there is no likeliness of any surprises on that side. But in the east she must be prepared for every surprise and in eastern Europe there is nothing even vaguely resembling the Siegfried Line or the Maginot Line.

No Siegfried Line

Here are only open, rolling plains, and if tomorrow Communist propaganda, preceding a political advance, should attack the Polish peasantry in the region Germany has reserved for herself, if the Russian flood should begin to rise, Germany will be obliged to reckon with a double peril, so that it is well understandable that Hitler should be trying with all arguments and with all oratorical means at his command to bring forth in the west an armistice and peace negotiations, after having vainly asked Italy to aid him in doing it.

One cannot say he has gone at it with much cleverness.

Vehement affirmation of the affairs of eastern Europe which regard only Russia and himself is the premise which renders negotiations impossible. How could the French and British governments, without totally abdicating, admit that they have no voice in what happens in eastern Europe? They would not dream of it. If Hitler sincerely wishes to talk peace he must begin by giving up the pretension of not being willing to dispose of sovereignty of that part of Poland conquered by him. Moreover it would not be surprising if Italy has not already let him understand to what extent similar pretension is incompatible with any negotiation whatever.

Calculations Wrong

As to his other conditions they are, so to speak, classics, and they are advanced in such a vague shape that it is difficult to imagine that, given the actual state of affairs France and Great Britain, thereby consecrating German supremacy which is only limited by Soviet ambitions, would discuss disarmament or world economy and the problem of European currencies, or the colonial problem, not to mention the Jewish problem, of which Hitler also talked.

It is possible that the war will continue in the west in just the same way we have seen it carried on in recent weeks, in other words, in the shape of a German naval reaction as strong as possible against the British blockade, and by adoption of purely defensive tactics against the land forces of France and England. It is possible that no neutral nation will object to direct aggression and that meanwhile Hitler counts on Communist propaganda to shake the French morale. His calculation will prove doubly wrong.

Independence Respected

Moscow, Oct. 6.—Soviet press editorials on last night's mutual assistance pact with Latvia make a particular point of emphasizing the Soviet's generous attitude towards the smaller states and its respect for their independence.

"The Soviet-Latvian mutual assistance pact," writes Izvestia, "is the outcome of friendly relations based on mutual trust wherein the Soviet Union's respect for the independence of other states was a model. The Soviet Union never exploited its position of being a great and strong power confronted by small countries."

Pravda says "All peoples will greet the treaty as a new guarantee of peace. The Soviet Union has not overlooked a single chance of supporting peace and avoiding war, even trying to use such a feeble and inadequate instrument as the League of Nations."

Hitler May Have Polish Helium

By the Associated Press

Has Germany finally obtained some American helium, despite the opposition of Secretary Ickes?

The State Department authorized export of 220,000 cubic feet of helium to Poland last June for a stratosphere flight. No word has been received here as to whether the helium fell into German hands.

minutes. The deputies cheered and shouted "Heil" each time he proudly mentioned the results of his war against Poland, or threatened a far more terrible war against the west.

Foreign office and propaganda ministry officials pointed instead to his repeated protests that revision of the Versailles Treaty has now been completed—except for colonies—and that he has no more territorial aims in Europe.

Neutral observers who heard him speak waited for the reaction from Paris and London. As it filtered in during the afternoon and tonight, German officials refused to be discouraged about peace, and predicted at least a short period of waiting before Hitler himself decides between the soft tone and the harder content of his own proposals.

Discards Uniform

Hitler walked into the Reichstag this morning without his army uniform, which he had promised five weeks ago to take off only after victory had been won. He spoke no words of hate for any nation except Poland, and he painted at the end of his speech a picture of horrors of modern war. But he made no single concrete concession from Germany's announced war aims, and declared bluntly that this proposal for peace by surrender would be his last offer. If it is refused, he said, "then we shall fight."

In one significant respect Hitler raised his claims today. He said he has taken an oath "on the welfare of my people who gave me my mandate and on the welfare of those whom destiny has placed within our living space, thus inseparably binding them to our own welfare. To guarantee the existence and thus the life of all of them is my sole concern."

Polish Plan Offered

This is the first time the German chancellor has officially claimed to represent the different races and nations which live within the undefined frontiers of Germany's "Lebenaraum" or living spaces.

His suggestions for a "rump Poland" today made it clear that whatever state emerges for the Poles will be under "an absolute guarantee of security for the entire German sphere of interest." Hitler did not mention the western frontier of this protectorate. But he referred to Germany's total need of 800,000 square kilometers (300,000 square miles). This figure indicates that he plans to incorporate inside Germany proper roughly those portions of Poland which were ruled by Germany or Austria before 1914.

Besides herding the Poles into some kind of protectorate, Hitler now plans to resettle the "splinters of German nationality" throughout southeastern Europe. He said, "In their very existence lies a reason and cause for continued international disturbances."

Proposes Resettlement

Here, too, his plan was left vague. German estimates places the number of Germans in Hungary at nearly half a million; in Rumania at three-quarters of a million, and in Yugoslavia at half a million. Where these Germans are to be resettled without further changes in the map of Europe was a mystery in Berlin tonight.

Hitler reviewed in his speech the present state of Germany's relations with all its neighbors, and drew the conclusion that he has brought order and not chaos into Europe. He denied again any territorial claims against France and England—except for colonies. He mentioned the United States only once in his speech, and then in passing. He summed up his relations with his new Bolshevik ally in the phrase which has already become orthodox in Berlin. "The Soviet Union is the Soviet Union, and National Socialist Germany is National Socialist Germany."

694,000 Poles Taken

German casualties in the Polish campaign were less than 5 per cent of what was expected, Hitler said. He put the dead at 10,572, the wounded at 30,322, the missing at 3,404. He said 694,000 Polish prisoners had been captured.

When he reaffirmed his belief in disarmament, which he has stated many times before, Hitler urged a "clear definition of the legitimate use and application of certain modern arms." He added, "In previous speeches in the Reichstag I made proposals with this end in view. At that time they were rejected—maybe for the simple reason that they were made by me."

Most of the Fuehrer's indignation today was reserved for Poland—"that pet lap dog of the Western democracies," "that structure purporting to be a state." His voice also rose in pitch when he spoke of Winston Churchill, the Versailles Treaty and foreign journalists. But most of his speech was keyed in lower tones than usual. His voice sounded hoarse when he began and he coughed during the reading of his manuscript.

Press Chief at Side

Hitler's press chief, Dr. Otto Dietrich, sat right beside him, following every word of his speech on a duplicate manuscript. He had earlier summoned the neutral reporters in Berlin to hear an advance digest of it. Today was believed to be the first time since the Nazis seized power that copies of a speech by Hitler have been available even a few minutes before his speech was delivered, and the reason was clearly that the Nazi desire to have the climax of their "peace offensive" resound throughout the world.

This change in the usual procedure required the official news agency to issue later instructions to editors about the insertion of "wild applause," "jubilant cheers," "stormy cries or pfui" in their printed versions of the speech that filled three solid pages.

Goering Presides

Air Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering presided over the Reichstag session which followed precedent in adjourning as soon as Hitler had finished reading, and Goering had pledged the German people to support their leader through any crisis.

There was one empty seat among the deputies—with a wreath to show that its occupant had been killed in Poland.

Perfect autumn weather helped to swell the crowds who watched the Reichstag members arrive at the Opera House.

Although today was a meatless day, the puset in the Opera House did a land office business selling pork and "English rostbif" to the deputies and their guests, without even asking for ration tickets.

Pope Reported Impressed by Hitler Address

Copyright by New York Times.

Rome, Oct. 6.—Chancellor Hitler's speech is understood to have created a favorable impression, according to some prelates close to the Vatican.

Pope Pius, who knows German thoroughly, listened to the speech on the radio and instructed his secretaries to take it down in shorthand so as to be able to study the text immediately. In order not to be disturbed, the Pope canceled all audiences.

Pius is described as being favorably impressed by the moderate tone of the speech and especially by the fact that Hitler did not utter drastic threats or set a time limit.

Hitler's announcement that he will create a new Polish state based on ethnic lines is said to have cheered the Pope, who has been very anxious concerning the fate of the 20,000,000 Polish Catholics now under German domination.

50 Americans Safe in Warsaw, But One Is Hurt

By the Associated Press

Fifty Americans in Warsaw are safe, but one has been hurt, the State Department was informed yesterday in a telegram from American Vice Consul Thaddeus H. Chylinski.

The telegram gave the injured American's name as Rakov. A check of passport files indicated he was Harry Rakow, of Brooklyn.

Alexander C. Kirk, American charge d'affaires at Berlin, reported to the department he had been informed by the German foreign office that the embassy chancery in Warsaw was intact, although bombs fell into the courtyard and garden, but that the ambassador's residence and the consulate general had been destroyed. The American government does not own the buildings it occupied in Warsaw.

The ambassador's residence was one of the most famous old palaces in the Polish capital. It belonged to Count Raczynski, now Polish ambassador to London, and until Ambassador Biddle moved into it two years ago was the residence of Foreign Minister Josef Beck.

victory which alone will permit assurance of a regime of real justice and lasting peace in Europe.")

There was even a hint that the German government might consent to the holding of a peace conference in Washington or somewhere else in the Americas, far from the scene of the European strife.

May Wait Ten Days

Hitler was represented as willing to wait from eight to ten days—longer than originally expected—for world opinion on his peace plan to consolidate.

Failing a reply through neutrals or directly from Britain and France, the sinking of a submarine or a ship or the shelling of a city would be taken as a negative answer and the "expectable German reply would follow," the authorized source said.

If, however, he went on, it becomes clear that Hitler's "peace efforts" are taken as a sign of weakness, his "reply" will come swift and fast. This source added that "our readiness for peace is just as great as our readiness for war."

Germany's present plan as stated by Hitler, it was said, includes proposals which democratic countries had been making for years but which Germany then felt she could not accept.

Might Accept League Ideals

She rejected such proposals as collective security, freer trade, solution of minority problems and other ideals associated with the League of Nations' activities because, it was asserted, "the fundamental conditions which would permit Germany to have accepted them were not present."

Now, however, with revision of the Versailles treaty considered virtually accomplished, Germany was represented to be in a position to accept many of the things which Britain and France themselves formerly advocated.

It was stated flatly that Hitler did not intend to create a Polish protectorate, but beyond that it was asserted the Fuehrer has not made up his mind as to the exact form the new Polish state would have.

The degree of independence the state would have, this source said, would depend largely on the attitude of the Polish people toward Germany.

Although Hitler said Germany and Russia alone would decide Poland's fate, this, however, does not eliminate the possibility of discussing the Polish future in an international conference.

Germany and Russia, nevertheless, would reserve the final decision to themselves, it was said.

As for the solution of the Jewish question, which Hitler also raised in his speech, this source asserted the Fuehrer was thinking about a Jewish reservation within the Polish state where not only Polish and German Jews could live, but Jews from other lands.

It was pointed out this reservation, which would be modeled somewhat after the American Indian reservations, would be larger than Palestine and have at least 3,000,000 inhabitants at the beginning.

Salient Points of Hitler's Address

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Oct. 6.—Highlights of Adolf Hitler's address:

Continuation of the present state of affairs in the west is unthinkable. Each day will soon demand increasing sacrifices. One day, however (if the war continues), there will again be a frontier between Germany and France, but instead of flourishing towns there will be ruins and endless graveyards.

I believe that a sense of national security will not return to Europe until clear and binding international agreements have provided a comprehensive definition of the legitimate and illegitimate use of armaments. It is only when this is achieved that peace can reign, particularly in our densely populated continent — a peace which, uncontaminated by suspicion and fear, will provide the only possible condition for real economic prosperity.

To achieve this great end, the leading nations of this continent will one day have to come together . . . It is . . . impossible that such a conference . . . could carry on its deliberations while cannon are thundering or mobilized armies are bringing pressure to bear upon it.

Why should this war in the West be fought? For restoration of Poland? Poland of the Versailles Treaty will never rise again. This is guaranteed by two of the largest states in the world (Germany and Russia).

But if this war is really to be waged only in order to give Germany a new regime, that is to say, in order to destroy the present Reich once more and thus to create a new Treaty of Versailles, then millions of human lives will be sacrificed in vain, for neither will the German Reich go to pieces nor will a second Treaty of Versailles be made.

One thing only is certain. In the course of world history, there have never been two victors, but very often only losers. This seems to me to have been the case in the last war.

According to the casualty list of up to September 30, 1939, which won't change materially, the total losses for the (German) army, navy and air force, including officers are as follows: Killed, 10,572; wounded, 30,322; missing, 3,404.

German soldiers have once more firmly established the right to wear the laurel wreath of which they were meanly deprived in 1918 . . . But the blood which they shed in a common cause will form a closer bond of union than could be forged by the mere structure of a state.

Versailles was the cradle of a Polish state which had emerged from the untold sacrifice of blood—not of Polish but of German and Russian blood. Poland, who for centuries past had proved herself incapable of existence, was in 1918 artificially begotten and in 1919 no less artificially borne by a German government just as incapable of existence.

. . . Since it became clear that (Josef) Stalin found nothing in the Soviet Russian principles which should prevent him from cultivating friendly relations with states of a political creed, National Socialist Germany sees no reason why she should adopt another criterion. The Soviet Union is the Soviet Union, National Socialist Germany is National Socialist Germany.

Germany and Russia together will relieve one of the most acute danger spots in Europe of its threatening character and will, each in her own sphere, contribute to the welfare of the peoples living there, thus aiding to European peace in general.

The aim of the German foreign policy is pursued by me has never been other than to guarantee the existence, that is to say the life, of the German people, to remove the injustice and nonsense contained in a Versailles treaty which not only destroyed Germany economically, but has drawn the victor nations into disaster as well.

Treasury Deficit Billion in 4 Months

The Treasury had a deficit of more than $1,000,000,000 yesterday, after little more than a third of the current fiscal year.

October 4 figures showed that since July 1, the Treasury had spent $2,510,312,152 and had taken in $1,496,225,402.

In the similar period last year, when expenditures were slightly smaller and income slightly larger, the deficit was $770,904,750.

outworks of the Maginot line. The press anticipations of the date of the German move range from "a few days" to "a few weeks at the outside."

The argument advanced for such forecasts is that the Nazi leadership, after having glorified its successes in the East, needs some success in the West for the double purpose of increasing its prestige at home and impressing opinion abroad before engaging in diplomatic offensive."

It would be unwise on the part of the Germans, the argument continues, to invade any neutral country at a time when the diplomatic map of Europe is so full of interrogation points.

There may be something in this argument but when the situation is viewed with strict objectivity, the only conclusion possible today is that the very number of interrogation points makes any forecast valueless since the military policy is conditioned presently by the diplomatic policy and no one knows what Hitler is meditating in either field. Consequently his opponents can only prepare to meet all possible contingencies.

From a strictly military viewpoint, the outstanding fact today is that the Germans seem to have massed almost in totality their fifty-one active divisions (including armored units) in the area along the Dutch and Belgian and French-Swiss frontiers, while in garrisons in the interior of Germany, there are between seventy and eighty reserve and landwehr divisions.

The active divisions, according to French calculations, represented at the beginnnig of the campaign, a force of about 1,500,000 men.

In his speech today Hitler admitted about 50,000 casualties in Poland. The French believe double that number to be nearer the mark. However that may be, the German high command has at least 1,400,000 men with a proportionate air force ready for action, either against Holland alone, in order to provide submarine and aerial bases for operations against the British navy and sea borne trade, or against Holland and Belgium as a preliminary to a march into France, or against the Maginot line, or against Switzerland, again as a preliminary to a march into France. All these possibilities are self evident and certainly would not find the Allied command unprepared.

Nazi, Soviet Clash Foreseen Over Balkans

Observers Believe Russia Will March When Reich Is Busy at Westwall

Copyright, 1939, by New York Tribune, Inc.

Paris, Oct. 6.—Nazi Germany and Soviet Russia eventually will come to a clash in order to dominate the Balkans, according to the opinion of most observers in that part of Europe. Whereas Germany is interested in maintaining the status quo in the Balkans, Russia will, sooner or later, it is said there, try to disturb peace and fish in muddy waters.

This correspondent has returned from a trip through the northern Balkans. In Yugoslavia, as well as in Rumania and in Bulgaria, the fear of Russia is greater now than the fear of Germany. Germany is considered to have won the first step in the war, since the Balkan countries have remained neutral instead of having joined the Allies, in an anti-German front. But the second step is believed to have been lost by Germany to the Soviets.

Nazis Active in Rumania

It is evident to any observer of the Balkans that Rumania, Yugoslavia and Turkey are the key powers of the Balkans. Rumania because of its oil wells, Yugoslavia because of its geographical position between Germany and Italy, and Turkey because of the straits which close the entrance to the Black Sea.

The Germans are extremely active in Rumania. They need to increase their supply of oil which is limited now by the lack of means of transportation. The only channel for Rumania oil is the Danube, and the Germans have not enough tankers on that river. They used to get most of their oil through the Mediterranian before the war, and this road has been closed to them.

To continue an efficient motorized warfare, the Germans will have to build more tankers, it is said. Their present capacity does not exceed 1,000,000 tons yearly, while their needs are estimated at a minimum of 7,000,000 tons in wartime. Peace in Rumania is believed essential to the Germans to maintain a continuous flow of oil.

The Allies are trying to outwit the Germans in purchasing Rumanian oil, not because they need it, but because they want to starve Germany out.

Soviet March Foreseen

The Rumanians are, however, too much afraid of the Germans to cut the supply of oil to them. Up till now the Germans have been paying for Rumanian raw materials with armaments and machines. German missions to Bucharest, Sofia and Belgrade are trying to force a credit system of payments. As their claims are backed by force, the Balkan countries are likely to agree to any conditions the Germans set up.

The consensus of opinion in the Balkans is that the future of that part of Europe will depend on consolidating the accord between Germany and Russia. It is believed that peace will prevail for a time, because the Soviet Union will most likely not want to disturb Germany's plans. But those who claim to know Russia's plans well insist that as soon as Germany is deeply engaged in fighting in the West, the Soviets will begin their march into the Balkans. This march, it is said, will be easy because of the weakness of the Balkan states, and also because of the prestige old-regime Russia still enjoys among the southern Slavs.

Air Duel Over Siegfried Line Described by Shot-Down Briton

London, Oct. 6 (AP).—The ministry of information tonight released an eyewitness account of an air battle over the Siegfried Line, in which the Germans lost four machines and a wounded Royal Air Force gunner landed in no-man's land and was carried to safety by a French Algerian soldier under fire.

The ministry said the dispatch came from an R. A. F. station "somewhere in France" and quoted an unidentified wounded Welsh air gunner, who said the British were making a reconnaissance flight over the Siegfried Line when three formations, each of six German MesserSchmidts, attacked a "handful" of R. A. F., outnumbering them by "more than three to one."

The gunner was quoted as saying one German plane "attached itself to my machine" and a "terrific duel" began.

"I looked around and saw the observer in a crumpled heap in his seat. He had been shot through the head."

The gunner said his plane started to catch fire and "just as my clothing began to smoulder" he shot down a German plane which offered a "lovely target."

"If I hadn't been on fire, I could have easily shot down two more," he said.

Besides the one he hit, the gunner said, "My pals accounted for three." The gunner dazedly pulled the string of his parachute in struggling from the cockpit and was pulled out of the plane. He said he fainted after hitting the tail of the plane, then recovered to hear bullets whistling about him.

"I was above the German lines and they were shooting at me," he said.

The gunner landed unhit, in no-man's-land, and saw German soldiers leave their trenches and approach him, he related. Then French Algerian soldiers appeared from the other side and began to fire at the Germans.

"One man (an Algerian) came running straight toward me as hard as he could," the gunner continued. "He picked me up, slung me over his shoulder and staggered with me into the woods. I was safe, but it was a near thing."

Church of the Week

Baptists in Alexandria Will Enlarge Auditorium

Project Estimated to Cost $1,500 Will Give Accommodation to 200 More Worshipers, Says Minister

The First Baptist congregation of Alexandria, which last Sunday celebrated a decade under the Rev. Pierce S. Ellis' leadership, has announced church auditorium enlargement plans to accommodate the growing membership.

Estimated to cost $1,500, the project will cover revamping of pew space to seat an additional 200 or more worshipers, and is expected to start early in 1940, according to the Rev. Mr. Ellis.

Since he came from Union Springs, Ala., in October, 1929, the church membership has leaped from 600 to 1,500; a modern educational unit, one of the best equipped in the Southland, has been built; a new organ installed; young people's choir organized, and other progress made.

"Our goal is constant growth and reaching the unchurched," said the clergyman yesterday, describing plans for establishing mission stations in the community to reach those whom the First Baptist Church cannot accommodate with its present facilities. Tentative plans are now being considered by a committee, he added. This will be the congregation's contribution to the Southern Baptist Convention's stress on evangelism during the coming year.

Moving spirits behind religious education work at First Baptist Church are Edwin Barrett, teacher and organizer of the Open-Door Baraca Bible Class, and treasurer of the World-Wide Baraca Philathea Union, with headquarters in Washington, and Mrs. S. C. Humphry, Fidelis Philathea class leader and a vice president of the union.

Among other leaders of the Sunday school, the council of which staged a dinner-meeting last Tuesday night, are M. P. Pitts, general superintendent, and F. C. Zimmerman, Mrs. Margaret Riker, Miss Gladys Darling, Mrs. P. S. Ellis, Miss Lois Kennedy, Miss Marion Sutton, Mrs. Jones, Mrs. F. E. Cornell and Mrs. Paul Finks, departmental supervisers. Miss Pearl Hoover is general director of the training union.

Graduate of the University of Richmond and Crozer Theological Seminary, the Rev. Mr. Ellis also did graduate work at the University of Pennsylvania. He served as chaplain of Clemson College, Clemson, S. C., and also occupied pulpits in St. Albans, W. Va. and West Point and Union Springs, Va.

He is a former vice president of the Baptist General Association of Virginia, which will hold its annual meeting at First Church on November 14, 15, 16, and is also a member of the board of education and missions of the executive committee of the association.

Among other leaders of the First Baptist Church are the Rev. W. W. Anderson, pastor's assistant; Mrs. Margaret Riker, church clerk; Mrs. M. E. McFadden, secretary, and Mrs. W. W. Anderson, organist; R. L. Kane, chairman of the board of trustees; A. N. Shuman, chairman of board of deacons, and Mrs. Gladys Darling, chairman of the board of deaconesses.

Lyman Stucker and H. A. Hudson lead the Boy Scout committee; Mrs. J. W. Lowe, Mrs. U. C. Clark and Mrs. Clarence Ackers, the Baptism committee, and Mrs. P. S. Ellis, the Woman's Missionary Society.

Cultured and influential Jeremiah Moore is said to have been founder and first pastor of First Baptist Church, which dates back to April 16, 1803, when a company of five men and seven women were given letters of dismissal from Black Lick Baptist Church, Falls Church, to form a congregation under the name of the Alexandria Baptist Society.

He yielded to the authorities to bring the religious liberty issue before President Washington and other leaders. During his imprisonment he preached from barred windows, Patrick Henry later defending him and securing his release, using the traditional language:

"Great God, gentlemen, a man in prison for preaching the gospel of Jesus Christ."

Dr. Buschmeyer To Open Religious Education Forum

Beginning tomorrow at 9:30 a. m. and continuing for six weeks on Sundays, Dr. Fred S. Buschmeyer, pastor of Mount Pleasant Congregational Church, will lead a series of practical discussions on the subject of "Religious Education in the Home and Church."

For the convenience of parents wishing to attend the meetings, children of kindergarten and primary age will be cared for by Miss Ruth Morgan, of the Sunday school department. Dr. Buschmeyer's 11 a. m. theme will be "The Lure of Far Horizons."

First. Senator Edward R. Burke (Democrat), of Nebraska, successor to the late Senator Logan on the chairmanship of the Claims Committee, will speak at 8 p. m. on "Repeal the Embargo—and Keep Out of War!" Dr. Anderson will preach at 11 a. m. on "The Art of Self-Mastery."

Cleveland Park. The Rev. Paul Linger will again fill the pulpit at 11 a. m. The initial meeting of the women's association will be held next Wednesday at 12:30 p. m.

Inner Mission Official to Speak

Miss Frances Dysinger, executive secretary of the Washington Lutheran Inner Mission Society, will address services at the Training School for the Feeble-Minded, Laurel, Md. tomorrow at 3:30 p. m. The Rev. George Grewenow will lead services at the Industrial Home School at 6:30 p. m. Regular Sunday school classes are scheduled for the Gallinger Tuberculosis ward.

Evangelist to Speak

Evangelist Dale Crowley will speak tomorrow at 8 p. m. in the tabernacle at 2200 Evarts street northeast, on "The Signs of the Times."

Lesson-Sermon Announced for Churches of Christ

"Are Sin, Disease, and Death Real?" is the subject of the lesson-sermon in all the Churches of Christ, Scientist, tomorrow, at 11 a. m. and 8 p. m. Sunday school is at 11 a. m.

The Golden Text is from Psalms 103:2,3, "Bless the Lord, O my soul, and forget not all His benefits: who forgiveth all thine iniquities; who healeth all thy diseases."

Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "And these signs shall follow them that believe; In My name shall they cast out devils; they shall speak with new tongues; They shall take up serpents; and if they drink any deadly thing, it shall not hurt them; they shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover." (Mark 16:17, 18.)

Rev. Denney New Assistant At Covenant

Dr. McCartney's Theme 'Making My Life Count for Something'

The Rev. William Henry Denney, Th. M., has been named assistant pastor of Covenant-First Presbyterian Church, succeeding the Rev. Samuel R. Little Stories about GREAT HYMNS

"ALL THE WAY MY SAVIOUR LEADS ME"
Fanny J. Crosby

"All the way my Saviour leads me;
What have I to ask beside?
Can I doubt His tender mercy
Who thro' life has been my Guide?
Heav'nly peace, divinest comfort,
Here by faith in Him to dwell!
For I know whate'er befall me,
Jesus doeth all things well."

Desperately in need of five dollars, Fanny J. Crosby, the blind hymn writer, prayed to God and, in answer to her prayer, a gentleman called at her home. He shook her hand, greeted her and departed. After he left, she discovered a five-dollar bill in her hand. Her first thought was how wonderfully God had helped her. She immediately sat down and wrote the above hymn.

Hitler Makes Italy's Peace Hopes Sicken

Passage on Balkans Most Disconcerting To Rome Officials

By Herbert L. Matthews

Copyright by New York Times.

Rome, Oct. 6.—A pall of gloom settled over Rome this afternoon as Chancellor Hitler's speech came over the radio. With those words went many hopes for European peace, but above all Italy learned that Germany and Russia would settle the destiny of "southeast Europe," which is to say the Balkans—and that is supposed to be the Italian sphere of influence.

Nevertheless, Chancellor Hitler's general thesis will receive Italy's support. Indeed "political circles" said that "the general impression was favorable and the speech was strong, substantial and constructive."

It was said that "Italy was waiting with great interest the reception of the address among the Western powers and the reaction which may eventually be aroused among governments and public opinion of those countries, because of the possibilities the speech offers for a peaceful solution of the conflict."

It is possible on the basis of what has been said and what is known of Italy's attitude to understand what the average Italian must be thinking tonight. To these people it must surely look like the end of the axis militarily, for Hitler only spoke of the Italo-German pact as "ideally and politically close."

First of all, Italians wanted to know whether Hitler's address would bring peace any nearer, but it was quickly realized that whatever slim hopes there may have been have become still slimmer.

What About "Et Cetera?"

The Hitler peace, it is felt, was on his own terms; not on the world's, nor even on Italy's. He made no offer to England and France which they could grasp to maintain their prestige—except the promise of disarmament. Italians do not see that Hitler has offered such a peace that his enemies might accept, and they are disturbed by the threat that this dictated peace is the last offer he says he will make.

One may be sure that in official circles the keenest attention will be paid to those passages concerning the Balkans. One crucial part said that "Germany and Russia have agreed to give each other reciprocal aid" with regard to east and southeast Europe. This refers to arranging exchange of populations so as to make each nation racially homogeneous.

Carried to its logical conclusion that means Germany and Russia consider themselves arbiters of Balkan destiny as well as that of Poland. But what of Italy's vital concerns in the Balkans?

Secondly, Hitler says that the Russo-German pact proves that "all assertions of German aims toward the Urals, the Ukraine and Rumania, et cetera, were only products of utopian fantasy." Italians can only see one deduction to be made from that. Germany considers Rumania to be in Russia's sphere of influence, just like the Urals and the Ukraine. Moreover, what about that "et cetera," the Italians are asking? They cannot see offhand how Germany can disclaim interest in Rumania when she has such great commercial interests there and has been working so hard to influence Rumania's internal affairs.

Support Polish Plans

Finally it was noted that Hitler spoke cordially of Jugoslavia and Hungary and reiterated his guarantee of their frontiers. On that score Italians have cause for satisfaction.

Also they are happy to learn that Chancellor Hitler intends to set up the Polish state on ethnic lines. They support his desires for a new order in Europe which will eliminate the Versailles Treaty once and for all. They are glad he made no direct threats in his address against England and France and set no time limit for the acceptance of his peace offer. That will give a chance for deliberate study and a continuance of the present "half-armistice."

Italians admit they have no interest in the Baltic situation and as far as the Balkans are concerned they realize they must take into consideration the fact that they have no minorities there whereas both Germany and Russia have.

Pepper Seeks to Aid Latin-America Ties

Congressional action "to speed the broadest possible economic, commercial and cultural relations" between the United States and South American republics yesterday was proposed by Senator Pepper (Democrat), of Florida, in a joint resolution.

The Pepper resolution called for a Senate and House study and investigation of "possibilities for a broad, long range" program advantageous to this country and the 21 republics.

British View Hitler's Promise Of Peace as Worthless Pledge

the temper of the British and French peoples that he thought he could impose such one-way terms. Rather it was thought that Prime Minister Chamberlain, having stated Great Britain's minimum demands as the end of threats of German aggression and security for small states, Hitler was having a go at stating German demands so that a possible intermediary might find common ground for the belligerents in between.

U. S. Mediation Doubtful

Whence any intermediate peace plan was to come was a mystery. No one believed the United States could or would offer mediation, and there were fairly convincing signs of Italian aloofness. Smaller states, such as Holland, Belgium, Switzerland and the Scandinavian nations, were hardly in a position to guarantee Germany's fulfillment of her promises and what weight Russian sponsorship of a peace plan would carry here was problematical.

At any rate it was indicated that there would be plenty of time for a peace movement, if such there is to be, to get under way.

The speech contained nothing likely to lead to discussion in Parliament before Wednesday. Then it will come up automatically for the debate which follows the prime minister's weekly review of the war.

Failure of Hitler to provide more substantial bases for consideration of his plan for peace came as a surprise to only a small fraction of high government officials who had been hoping against hope that there still remained some chance of resolving Europe's difficulties short of a major war. To the vast majority, having placed little hope or confidence in any possibility of ending the war while Hitler remains in power, the speech was neither a surprise nor a disappointment. The feeling generally is that the war, after more than a month, is soon to pass definitely from the diplomats to the generals.

Speculate On Actualities

It was noteworthy that one interested listener to Hitler's address remarked that Germany, long one of the leading revisionist states in Europe, had become a defender on the status quo in eastern and central Europe, now that Hitler believes he has succeeded in destroying what is left of the Versailles Treaty.

How convincing his renunciation of territorial ambitions would be in the Baltic states, Holland, Belgium, Scandinavia, Austria and Poland before them, was a matter for speculation. This capital felt the importance of Hitler's speech came in attempting to shift blame for continuation of the war on the Allies.

It was noted in diplomatic circles that Hitler seemed to be seeking to suggest that Nazi relations with Soviet Russia is closer than they really are, and that his references to Italy were notable for their vagueness and absence of any mention of Benito Mussolini's military obligations to his axis partner. It was regarded as typical of Hitler tactics, that in demanding the return of German colonies, he offered nothing except the familiar assurances that he will be content and not disturb the peace of Europe.

According to information reaching here, Hitler dictated his speech Tuesday before he learned the contents of Prime Minister Chamberlain's speech in Commons, declaring that the Allies would fight on until they are satisfied they had ended the recurrent danger of aggression in Europe. After learning what the British Prime Minister had said, it was reported, Hitler did not change a word.

No Peace Until Victory, France Advises Hitler

before chamber foreign affairs commission, that France and Great Britain are making war to end a reign of aggression and to put an end to the necessity of mobilizing every six months. They wanted lasting peace—a peace which would depend on respect for a given word and on honor, and that would guarantee the security of France and of all nations.

Such a peace would exclude all domination in Europe. It could be founded only on the right of peoples to their own life and their own liberty. Neither France nor Great Britain would lay down their arms until such a peace had been effectively secured.

Talk Wins Applause

The vigor and clarity of the premier's presentation of the situation won repeated applause from the Senators although several of them had come to the meeting with the avowed intention of being critical. Their criticisms were only of the detail and not of the general conduct of the diplomatic relations of their country. Premier Daladier made it clear that maintenance of firm resolution, in close collaboration with Great Britain and with respect for the rights of other nations was by far the best policy for winning the war.

All mechanism of war having been set in motion and the necessity imposed on all of thinking in accord with the operation of that mechanism, any other comment on Hitler's speech is necessarily restricted. The speech has been reprinted only in part in French evening newspapers, and for some technical reasons what may have been essential passages were extremely difficult to hear on the radio.

It may, however, be said that those whose business it would have been in normal times to interpret the speech to the public are of only one opinion: that it was once more only the speech of an uneducated, undisciplined-minded man of immediate dynamic force who was floundering even more than usual among ideas and principles which he can only vaguely understand.

That opinion has been formed independently of any militar necessity. It is the judgment of that increasingly rare body of men here and elsewhere who know that the world should, and believed that the world could, be governed by reasonable authority. But Caliban has appropriated the magic of Prospero and there are millions of men standing to arms all over Europe in consequence.

Whether they will fight and where they will fight has still been left uncertain, just as it is uncertain where and how the Axis and anti-comintern pact and the third international accord and disaccord. That puzzlement is not confined to France. Every country is suffering from it.

Amid this confusion the French have this firm faith to hold to, that their men and their Maginot Line will resist any attack, whether the war be white, "waiting for war" or red "lightning war."

They know that they do not want for themselves or for any other peoples a Europe on the Hitlerian German model and whether they must stand still and wait for victory or fight for it, they are prepared. They are confident, too, that the British government and people and the British army are equally determined to stand fast and keep cool while the man who has started this conflagration alternates between promising to put it out on his own conditions and threatening to spread it further.

Policy of Courage

There are those who today, when they heard his speech, sighed for some diplomat who would turn this dangerous corner without the war reversing the position and imposing his peace terms. But Caliban holds many thunderbolts in his hands that all the wisdom and skill of any Prospero would be of no avail to stop. It is felt there is only one thing to do—to hold one's own thunderbolts ready and gather more.

It was in that spirit and that sense that Daladier spoke his reply and obtained the unanimous approval of the Senators. He dismissed all theoretical plans of spectacular cleverness and all legally or morally doubtful actions as insufficient and harmful in the present situation.

Happy Chandler To Get Logan's Seat in Senate

Frankfort, Ky., Oct. 6 (AP).—Albert Benjamin (Happy) Chandler's career will pass under another milestone Monday when he resigns as Governor to be appointed to the United tates Senate by his successor Lieut. Gov. Keen Johnson.

On that day, a high official source disclosed, Gov. Chandler will submit his resignation, make a public statement and, with Johnston's appointment in his pocket, go to Washington to take the seat of the late Senator M. M. Logan.

He will speak tomorrow at Mount Sterling at the opening of Johnson's campaign for election as Governor on the Democratic ticket. He will introduce Alben W. Barkley, Kentucky's senior Senator, who in turn will introduce Johnson. Barkley was opposed by Chandler for renomination last year in a spirited campaign.

Coffee Declares 'War Hysteria' Perils Freedom

A "war hysteria" threatening "both our peace and our democracy" was decried yesterday in a statement by Representative Coffee (Democrat), of Washington, declared to embody the "unanimous" views of members of the House liberal bloc.

Coffee, speaking as chairman of the group, asserted that "this hysteria is breeding heresy hunts and witch hunts, leading to the suppression of free speech, free press and free assembly, but prying into men's minds and menacing even their freedom to think for themselves."

Asserting "there are ominous signs to warn us that the first casualty of Europe's war may be our own democracy," Coffee deplored suppression, "with wartime ruthlessness," of the views of minorities here, "however we may hate or despise those views."

The Tide Has Turned

"Ninety per cent of our people," said Senator Downey yesterday, "dislike, despise and fear both Hitler and Stalin."

Thereupon, with a lack of logic also apparent in other parts of his speech, the Senator proceeded to argue that Congress should legislate for the American people in such a way as to favor Hitler and materially handicap the democracies which are opposing his dictatorship.

Senator Downey's speech was not the only indication yesterday that the opponents of repeal of the arms embargo are rapidly losing ground. This is a natural consequence of the submission of the issue to public debate and consideration. The cause of repeal has been greatly assisted by the arguments of many who have opposed it.

In offering to accept all of the Administration's neutrality bill except repeal of the arms embargo, Senator Borah's bloc of 12 Senators yesterday strongly indicated that this round dozen is close to the total strength of the irreconcilable bloc in the Senate.

The one desire of that element seems to be to prevent American munitions from being carried to Great Britain and France in the ships of those nations, regardless of the effect of the remainder of the legislation. And the trivial size of the contingent supporting these tactics indicates the course which the Senate should now follow in enacting a real neutrality law consonant with fundamental American interests.

Every possible argument against repeal of the arms embargo has been explored and exploded. This repeal should therefore be put through both houses without any further delay. Legislative attention can then be concentrated, at leisure, on the remaining provisions of the bill, with intelligent consideration given to the profound disturbance of the national economy which some of these provisions imply.

A Fair Question

Growers of cigarette tobacco in six Southeastern States have voted ten to one in favor of Federal control of production in the coming year. A year ago the growers, heartened by extraordinarily good returns, cast off controls, with the result that the acreage of flue-cured tobacco increased 30 per cent and production rose to an all-time high. Retribution came swiftly in the form of drastic price declines to which has been added the catastrophe of the war and cessation of British buying.

Now the Department of Agriculture is attempting to find a way to dispose of unsold tobacco. "We are trying," Secretary Wallace said a few days ago, "to arrange to finance the purchase of about the same amount and the same grades of the 1939 crop as would normally be taken by the British trade. Such financing will be necessary because the British government finds it difficult to use the necessary dollar exchange in the tobacco market."

This official assurance that aid will be forthcoming raises a major question. It is a short step from assuming control over production to taking responsibility for finding markets for excess products. In the case of the tobacco growers, conditions are undoubtedly bad, largely but not wholly for reasons beyond their control. Yet if the Government undertakes to finance the purchase of tobacco that the British do not buy, why should it not come to the aid of all the other export groups adversely affected by the war in Europe?

The question is one to consider seriously.

Irony Of Politics

Astute political observers were quick to guess that Gov. A. B. Chandler would have himself appointed to the Senate seat made vacant by the death of Senator Logan. While the Kentucky Governor has not yet made his announcement, there seems little doubt that this surmise will prove to be correct.

In his fight with Senator Barkley for the Kentucky senatorial nomination in 1938 Gov. Chandler showed that there are few scruples in his political policies. While friends of Senator Barkley were using the WPA to promote his candidacy, Gov. Chandler levied tribute upon the salaries of State employes. Findings of the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee indicate that the Governor's managers obtained approximately $70,000 from State employes whose salaries had been partly or wholly derived from Federal funds.

So it will not be surprising if "Happy" Chandler plays a cheap political trick to advance himself to the United States Senate. If he resigns after a deal with Lieut. Gov. Keen Johnson to give him the senatorial appointment, the Governor will virtually succeed in appointing himself. Such a travesty on democratic government may be expected to arouse the ire of the Senate, as it has done in previous cases. But it is less certain that the Senate would meet the challenge to its reputation squarely.

Appointment of a successor to Senator Logan in this manner would be particularly ironic. Urged to accept a judicial appointment during the Barkley-Chandler fight, so as to make way for the blustering Governor and thus free the field for the Senate majority leader, Senator Logan stoutly refused to traffic in judicial appointments. His attitude elicited a well-deserved letter of commendation from President Roosevelt. It would be a sad sequel to that stand on principle if Gov. Chandler should succeed in taking Senator Logan's place through crude political manipulation.

Not Peace But A Sword

"In the end," said Hitler in his Reichstag speech yesterday, "it is not so much the method but the useful result that counts."

There is a frank confession of adherence to the doctrine, repudiated by every system of ethics, that the end justifies the means. The Fuehrer can scarcely be surprised if his speech is judged on the basis of the philosophy in which he believes.

Reduced to essentials, Hitler's suggestion yesterday was for a peace on the basis of Germany's present victories.

On the one hand the Reich is to have a free hand, in collaboration with Russia, in reconstructing eastern Europe. On the other hand the former colonies in Africa and the Pacific are to be returned as a step towards granting Germany "her elementary right to a share of the world's resources of raw materials." While the Fuehrer made plain that this demand for colonies is not yet an ultimatum he also let it be clearly understood that Germany demands "adequate colonial possessions" greater than she possessed in 1914.

If Great Britain and France will underwrite the conquest of Austria, Czecho-Slovakia and Poland, and further surrender "adequate colonial possessions" to Germany, that country will for its part favor "the reduction of armaments to a reasonable and economically tolerable level," as a step towards "a reorganization of the international economic system." What Hitler means by the latter is far from clear. The indication is that he seeks a world-wide extension of the Nazi type of state control at the expense of the capitalist system, which comes in for strong denunciation in other parts of this long and rambling address.

The Fuehrer's claims are thus in themselves sweeping. He makes no suggestion of any reparation for the injuries he has inflicted. He admits that his claims for territorial expansion are as yet by no means satisfied. And he offers no guarantees whatsoever for the exceedingly vague scheme of disarmament to which he gives a theoretical indorsement. On the contrary he takes pains, in this speech, to say that Germany will have nothing to do with the League of Nations, the only agency which has yet made any attempt to grapple with the problem of a disarmament so supervised that it could be relied upon.

Behind the unsatisfactory character of Hitler's offer, moreover, lies the unhappy fact that his word has no dependability. Even if this had not recently been demonstrated time and again it would still be implicit in his assertion, yesterday, that the end justifies the means. It is the espousal of that doctrine, even more than the terms of settlement vaguely suggested, which makes the German peace offer so suspect.

The people of Great Britain and France have no more desire for war than have the people of Germany. The British and French leaders would certainly welcome a reliable peace far more warmly than Hitler, who wrote in "Mein Kampf" that from early childhood "I grew more and more enthusiastic about everything connected with war or with militarism." But the issue which Chamberlain and Daladier must confront is the utter immorality which the Fuehrer couples with his complete dictatorial power.

If, for purposes of illustration, the British and French should accept the present offer—demobilize their armies and cede to Germany slices of Africa, the Pacific islands and possibly the West Indies—there would still be no assurance whatsoever that Hitler would be satisfied. On the contrary, both his writings and his record indicate strongly that he would regard such surrender as a sign of weakness and therefore an incentive for new and ever more intolerable demands.

Having set their hand to the plough it seems in the highest degree unlikely that the French and British will turn back until there come from Germany proposals more specific, more reliable and more encouraging for lasting peace than the equivocal assurances offered in Berlin yesterday. And this seems the more probable because Hitler now makes it so plain that his future ambitions look toward the west.

Germany and Russia, he says, are henceforth firm friends and partners. There is no longer any reason for a "hostile attitude" towards those whom Hitler, less than six months ago, characterized as "the subhuman forces of Bolshevism." The cynical Nazi-Communist alliance, plus the steady westward push of Russia's "subhuman forces," demonstrate that the Drang Nach Osten has petered out.

But since Hitler yesterday again reiterated his demand for additional "living space" it follows that this is to be satisfied at the expense of the west.

At the expense, that is, of a part of the world in which American interests are by no means academic. It does not need the recent sinking of the Clement off Brazil, nor Admiral Raeder's suspicions and oversubtle warning to the Iroquois, to demonstrate that, neutrality or none, the war is drawing closer to the New World.

Hitler himself anounced this yesterday, when he proclaimed that the mere return of Germany's colonies would not alone satisfy "her elementary right to a share of the world's resources of raw materials."

Challenge To A. F. Of L.

Over a period of 40 years the brewers' union and the teamsters' union have been involved at intervals in disputes over the status of beer drivers who belong to the former union. The controversy took on new life in 1933 when the A. F. of L., in convention assembled, ruled that the beer drivers properly came under the jurisdiction of the teamsters' union. Since then, the unionized beer drivers and their employers have been subjected to various forms of coercion—sometimes of a violent nature—to force them to change their affiliation.

At last, however, the District Court has handed down an important decision which should put an end to this inter-union conflict. The court, in response to a plea from the brewers' union, has issued an injunction to prevent the A. F. of L. and the teamsters' union from employing coercive tactics against drivers belonging to the plaintiff union.

The court emphatically rejects the claim of the A. F. of L. that it has final authority in a dispute of this sort. An overwhelming mass of evidence is cited to show that the beer drivers were members of the brewers' union when it became affiliated with the A. F. of L. in 1887; that it was agreed that the union should retain this jurisdiction, and that it had never surrendered its claims.

Moreover, it was pointed out that the beer drivers as members of the brewers' union have valuable property rights in the form of benefits for sickness, death or strike action, as well as advantageous collective bargaining agreements—all of which would be forfeited if they were transferred to the teamsters' union.

The decision is not concerned with the question whether it is or is not desirable on general grounds to transfer brewery drivers to the teamsters' union. That is a moot issue on which both sides have much to say. However, the decision should be most effective in reducing the number of interunion disputes that grow out of efforts of one union to capture the members of another. The court has made it clear that it will protect unions against coercive attempts to change the affiliations of their members.

There remains the question as to what action the A. F. of L. proposes to take to deal with jurisdictional disputes which the court has said, in effect, are none of its business. It is an eloquent commentary upon the federation's lack of initiative to reflect that the brewery workers and teamsters have been sparring with one another since the beginning of the century.

The Building Trades Department of the A. F. of L. has recently awakened to the need of dealing with jurisdictional disputes in a more effective manner by appointing an impartial arbiter to hand down decisions. That is a step in the right direction, although it is doubtful whether much will be accomplished unless the unions enter into solemn written agreements to abide by the decisions rendered.

If the unions keep faith with one another and stay within the jurisdictional limits defined by their charters, fewer disputes will arise. But there will always be cases of ill-defined jurisdictional limits and other cases which require a change in jurisdictional scope as a matter of general policy. In such instances there is imperative need for an impartial outside adjustment agency. Regardless of the attitude of the courts, the A. F. of L. could not solve jurisdictional disputes satisfactorily by simply issuing edicts calling for mass transfers of workers from one union to another.

Publication Of Plans

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is stated today in a popular magazine that last week the people watched the President, and that "Of all the great peoples on earth, only they were utterly free to look, listen, judge, speak."

Hardly can it be expected that any man is perfect. The President is no exception, and to one who felt utterly free last week to look, listen and judge, this was particularly borne out in one of the President's acts.

It is Mr. Roosevelt's right, if he chooses, to suppress the 1939 edition of the Industrial Mobilization Plan from public study. That he has so chosen was announced to the September 29 press conference.

Let not the President's sincerity be doubted when he states that the I. M. P. is to be used only in a wartime emergency; that we have no thought of entering the conflict; that there is no advantage, therefore, in publishing the plans which would go into effect immediately if war is declared.

What the President failed to observe is that a publicly read and publicly comprehended I. M. P. is one of America's most effective war preventives.

The I. M. P. and coordinated mobilization plans blueprint the Nation's wartime economy. Though not a law in itself, the I. M. P. decides what use will be made of you and me, of our money, of the baker next door and his business, of every individual and enterprise and dollar in the Nation, the moment war is declared. The latest I. M. P. prior to the new edition was printed in 1936, made available to the public, and sold by the Government Printing Office at Washington for 15 cents.

To the horrors of war abroad, the I. M. P. and coordinated M-Day measures add the disaster of semi-dictatorship at home.

This much is known partially from a study of the old, 1936 edition of the I. M. P. I think it in the public interest to be able to study the revised, 1939 edition. What has been added? What omitted?

To individuals who remember well that a peaceful America is a strengthened and dignified America, the I. M. P., in this correspondent's opinion, is a red light which should not be hidden.

D. C. Matters

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The District of Columbia, ward of the Congress, has for years suffered inequities in many and, specifically, tax, matters, due to the fact that the House of Representatives has always "kissed off" lightly its responsibilities, pleading lack of time, etc.

Now, what with the House sitting around, twirling its thumbs, awaiting the outcome of the Senate debate of a century—occurs the opportunity of a lifetime.

Let the citizens, through their organized bodies, bestir Congress to improve the time and opportunity facing them by addressing their attention to long-deferred District of Columbia matters.

At the moment, there is the very definite job of amending the District of Columbia unemployment tax regulation, to make it dovetail with the revised national security act, thereby giving District of Columbia employers the relief to which they are now legally entitled.

Also there is the matter of equitable ratio of taxes between Federal Treasury and District of Columbia residents, in the matter of District of Columbia financing, and the study of revamping District of Columbia government.

Normally, there may be some point to the contention that a Congressman has his constituents' affairs as the first call on his attention, but not at this session.

Neutrality Vote

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: According to the record, the following Senators voted in 1937 for the present neutrality act containing the provision for the arms embargo: Adams, Ashurst, *Bachman, Bailey, Barkley, Bone, Brown (Michigan), *Brown (New Hampshire), Bulow, Burke, Byrnes, Capper, Caraway, Chavez, Clark (Missouri), Davis, *Dietrich, Ellender, Frazier, George, Gillette, Green, Hale, Hatch, Hayden, Herring, *Hitchcock, Johnson (Colorado), La Follette, Lee, Logan, *Lonergan, Lundeen, *McAdoo, McCarran, *McGill, McKellar, McNary, Minton, *Moore, Murray, Neely, Norris, Nye, O'Mahoney, Overton, Pepper, Pittman, *Pope, Radcliffe, Russell, Schwartz, Schwellenbach, Sheppard, Smith, *Steiwer, Thomas (Oklahoma), Thomas (Utah), Townsend, Vandenberg, Van Nuys, Walsh, White—63. Those voting against the act were Austin, Borah, Bridges, Gerry, Johnson (California), Lodge—6. *Not now in Senate.

The House passed the act by a vote of 376 to 12.

Was not that act passed and amended as a studied effort to avoid such a situation as finally caused our entrance into the last war? If the act contains the paradoxes and the dangers as stated by the President and others, why did Congress pass it by the recorded vote and why did the President approve it? Had not the President and the Congress then the benefit of the experience of the last war and the opportunity calmly to deliberate upon our fixed policy of "real neutrality?"

What "geographical" and other considerations have now suddenly revealed the alleged defects of the law and the difficulty of its administration? What has caused the strange and belated repentance of error and the sudden alteration of our fundamental conception and determined policy of neutrality? Just how will the proposed repeal of the arms embargo better insure our remaining out of war? Is not the proposed repeal of the arms embargo one of the means of participation "short of war?"

Propaganda And Hysteria

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: On all sides, the people are being urged to disregard war propaganda and resist war hysteria.

The District of Columbia needs 552 additional men in the National Guard, and the authorities proceed to stage an air attack on the National Capital as a bit of propaganda.

If we have to have the incitement to war hysteria incident to such a raid in order to get 552 men to join the National Guard, then this country is sure in a mess.

Brevity

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Have you heard of the new Mother Goose rhyme which is going the rounds?

Ribbentrop, Ribbentrop, where have you been?
I've been to Moscow to visit Stalin.
Ribbentrop, Ribbentrop, what did you there?
I dined with some Jews and got hugged by a Bear.

For Embargo

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It seems to me that President Roosevelt and other proponents of neutrality revision completely ignore the one issue of real importance to the American people, that is, peace for America.

Foremost among their arguments is the contention that Britain and France will fail if we do not sell arms. Are Britain and France ready to make that admission?

Assume that those countries can only succeed through revision of the neutrality act. Do you realize the significance of such assumption? Selling arms, following revision of a policy originally set up as offering greatest assurance for peace is notice to the world that we deliberately choose sides, stake our peace in a gamble for war.

A second confounding argument is that failure of Britain and France threatens the security of the Americas. Plainly, this argument doesn't show much respect for the United States of America. But let me tell you that if Germany, or any other nation on this earth, singly or grouped, ever turn their faces toward the Americas, they have a lesson coming to them they will never forget. Just consider the difficulties we had in the last World War across the sea and begin to realize the troubles an aggressor would have if, as, and when they finally might cross to meet what we would have ready for them.

A third, manifestly abortive argument, holds that the present neutrality act does not go far enough, since it permits the sale and delivery of other commodities necessary to belligerents, excepting arms. Well, selling of arms to belligerents won't cover up this defect. Why must we sell arms to be neutral and have peace? Why not simply plug the holes in the present neutrality act?

A fourth, totally irrelevant argument, relates to the status of the present neutrality act with respect to international law. What care we if the present act falls short of, lies within, or goes beyond international law?

A fifth, most reprehensible argument, would have America prosper through traffic in arms. Any economy that can recover and be maintained only by war profits, does not deserve to, nor can it long do so.

A sixth argument, so recently and conclusively proven false, claims a majority of American sentiment in favor of revision. The present deluge of Congressional mail, after thoroughly discounting all "engineered" letters, not only denies the presumptuous claims of revisionists, but also gives definite notice that America will not again be "railroaded" into a foreign war.

Rather than "gold-brick" America into another foreign war, let us clean house from border to border and coast to coast. Drive out all hyphenated organizations and people with foreign sympathies and sentiments. Spend those billions, such as of the last World War, for our own defense.

"Shut Up Shop"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There are things in this world that we cannot help. War in Europe is one of them.

Nothing whatever in the present situation should urge anyone to think that a sacrifice of millions of lives and putting all Europe deeper in bankruptcy will benefit anything or anybody, anywhere on earth.

England and France should acknowledge the facts immediately and frankly, shut up the war shop and go home, get about practical affairs.

Child's-Eye View

ONCE a certain measure of mental maturity has been reached, it is impossible to step back into the simplicity of childhood. One might as easily project himself, after the manner of the young man in "Berkeley Square," into the peruked and periwigged eighteenth century. We may study the child's mind and approach an understanding of his way of reasoning, but we are still unable to recapture that unassailable sense of logic which accepts both fact and fancy with equal facility.

While many writers have passed through the doorway into the enchanted garden, none of them have truly entered. To be sure, there are countless shelves filled with juvenile books, and many authors who wax fat on the proceeds, but these creations are hearsay and spectator reports rather than first-hand impressions.

Christopher Morley's novel, "Thunder on the Left," is the story of a group of children who resolved never to become stuffy grown-ups, but as the subjects of the fantasy grew older only one was able to retain the childish outlook. Barrie's Peter Pan is the spirit of perpetual youth, and Wendy is granted a nostalgic dream of the Never Never Land over her adult spring cleaning.

In his "Child's Garden of Verse," Robert Louis Stevenson created a perfect picture of the world as seen through the eyes of a child, maintaining the same clarity of vision with which he looked at death in "Aes Triplex." The "Garden" is full of fun, but there is no poking of fun; and the small reader feels that the poet is talking with him, not down to him.

Some might insist that Lewis Carroll bridged the span and changed at will from a professor of higher mathematics to a traveler down rabbit holes, but he used the psychology of the dream rather than the psychology of childhood. He teased his little readers, and in consequence, Alice is more appreciated by older people, who can understand the whimsy, than by children, who are usually as confused by reading of her adventures as she was in experiencing them. They find Wonderland, with its sudden and inexplicable changes, a disorderly and bewildering place. The strange and often impolite conversations between the strange characters upset and often shock the child. He is offended by their behavior and confused by their utter disregard for all rules of logic and orthodoxy.

For children are the most conventional creatures on earth, each devoutly wishing to be exactly like the others. If a little girl finds herself at school minus her bow of hair ribbon and all the other girls are so adorned, she feels absolutely naked. A small boy would rather fade into oblivion than appear before his fellows varying in one degree from the current juvenile mode of disattire.

But probably the greatest difference between the adult and child minds lies in their respective attitudes toward reality. The adult, hemmed in by responsibility and the necessity of working for a living, desires escape and plans his recreation toward that end. The child, perforce kept out of the workaday world, sees his parents as gifted and privileged creatures, and in his games he imitates them and their business of living. We see countless small policemen, firemen, cowboys and G-men, and conscientious little mothers who are very serious in the care of their dolls.

The adult's sense of logic is tempered with exceptions for almost every rule, but the childish mind is inflexible. A dog is good but a wolf is bad; winter is cold and summer is hot; vice is punished and virtue is rewarded. This does not hamper imagination in the slightest degree—rather, it is stimulating. The more fantastic the story, the more unalterable its conclusion, and the more logical.

Furthermore, the child does not permit any tampering with the plot. Some years ago, in telling the Red Riding Hood tale to my class at school, I undertook to reform the wolf and let him live happily ever after in a pleasant dog house behind the grandmother's cottage, but my first-graders practically booed me down.

We are inclined to look back upon our own childhood with a tender and kindly humor, for whatever measure of development we attain comes so gradually that its achievement is not entirely painful. The woes of adolescence spring not only from physiological changes but from the intricate adjustment of the child's mental processes into the adult's pattern of thought, which includes the acceptance of a world that is neither black nor white, but composed of numberless shades of gray.

Some never come to this realization and the tolerance which attends it; others achieve it too fully, and thus lose sight of the fact that unswerving devotion to extremes is the basis of idealism.

If somewhere there could be a common ground upon which the child and the adult could meet, how much of an interchange there could be! A little child with simple, direct reasoning could not wander farther from the path than we have, with our complicated system of thought, which only too often results in our finally admitting that we do not know the way or, knowing, have not the courage to follow the dictates of our reason.

Perhaps in time we might even quote from the Biblical passage wherein it is said, "When I was a child, I spake as a child," with a measure of regret for a fundamental of wisdom that is lost to us.

Breaking Down Morale

OLD-TIME Chicago reporters, who include, incidentally, some of the greatest free-style, ten-goal liars the world has ever known, sometimes tell of a cruel and unusual stratagem by which the police wrung confessions from otherwise unyielding suspects. At the old Harrison street station or Desplaines or the Detective Bureau, the scene varying according to the mood of the narrator, the coppers would just about starve a man for, say, four or five days, and when they figured that they had him good and ready would start a pinochle game outside his cell, in the course of which one of them would remark that he was hungry enough to eat a Chinaman and how about sending out for a snack of something.

So they would send across the street for a waiter, who would presently appear with the score card from the quick and dirty, if it was Harrison or Desplaines, or from the Briggs House, if it was the bureau, and they would sit there reading out loud, about like this:

First cop: "How is the planked steak and French fried potatoes tonight, Gus, and does the mince pie come with it or is that extra?"

Second cop "I don't know. I had turkey for dinner with plum pudding after, but a man shouldn't neglect his health, so I might go for a little of that pot roast and dumpling and a big can of coffee and a good 10-cent cigar."

Dream of Food Possible in Reich

THEY WOULD finally order a long list of rare viands and exotic delicacies, and when it came would clear the pinochle table and sit there lapping up the heavy gravies, sucking their fingers and mouthing away like a cat over a fish head until the prisoner, with a desperate shriek, would leap into the bars of his cage and offer to confess to all the unsolved crimes on the books from the founding of Fort Dearborn right down to date. He was just a jibbering, quivering wreck, unnerved by the sight and fumes of food, and the pathetic state to which this, let us hope, mythical victim was reduced by the third degree suggests possibilities which hereby are offered to the British and French war departments in the interests of peace and democracy.

The British have been bombarding the German people with pamphlets faulting Adolph Hitler and appealing to their desire for peace, knowing that in Germany it is a chopping-block offense to possess any document in dispraise of the Fuehrer and a crime but little less grave to think, much less speak, of peace. It is no offense, however, to indulge in dreams of wiener schnitzel or roast pork, enormous sheets of bloody roast beef with baked brown potatoes and plenty of gravy, roast stuffed goose or goose liver dumplings, plum cake with whipped cream and great, high stacks of white bread and unlimited quantities of pure, golden butter. By all means, plenty of white bread and real butter, not that ersatz made from the blubber of sea gulls and fish. Help yourself to the white bread and butter, Fritz.

Menu Bombs Best to Nazis

IT HAS BEEN so long since the Germans even read a menu of such richness that, considering the almost lifelong, if somewhat intermittent, privation of most of the Germans now living, a bombardment of menus would strike deeper into their souls than any stilted, professorial or editorial tracts on the perfidy of Hitler or the joys of peace. It costs no more to print a bill of fare, and the German does not live, barring members of the governing cricle, who is impervious to the temptations of such propaganda scattered to the winds.

Nor need the seduction be limited to cold type, for it should be a simple matter for the chemical warfare service of the Allies to prepare both gas shell and drums full of the pure, concentrated odors, but only the odors of roasts and potato dumplings, sour kidneys, knuckles and kraut, meat balls in gravy, dollar Havana cigars and rich Brazilian coffee and pitch to the incurable weakness of the German people. There is a shameful waste of such unnerving fumes in France and Britain, and even under the new American act of neutrality such precious vapors will not be withheld from the Allies as munitions of war.

One good gas attack, both shell and cloud, of high-octane porterhouse fumes would reduce a whole group of armies to the surrender point, and yet the British, in their simple, silly way, attempt to speak to them unkindly of Adolf Hitler, whom they love, and enticingly of peace, which they hate.

I leave it to any old-time Chicago reporter to say how long it would take to break the German morale.

Church Welfare Head Warns of Charity Rackets

Washington is being besieged by charity racketeers out to drain citizens of all money possible before launching of the Community Chest drive in November, it was charged yesterday by the Rev. John L. Mixon, director, department of social welfare of the Federation of Churches. Many of those soliciting claim that they are sponsored by the Department of Social Welfare of the Federation of Churches, he has learned.

"I can say categorically that no agency which solicits funds over the telephone or from door to door is sponsored by the Federation of Churches," the minister stated. "These methods of solicitation are not considered ethical by reputable social agencies."

Abridged Text of Hitler's Reichstag Speech

'Statement My Last' If Churchill's Opinion Prevails, He Says

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Oct. 6.—The official translation of Fuehrer Hitler's speech follows in abridged form:

It was a fateful hour, on the first of September of this year, when you met here as representatives of the German people. I had to inform you then of serious decisions which had been forced upon us as a result of the intransigeant and provocative action of a certain state.

After one week of fighting there could no longer be any doubt as to the outcome.

In a fortnight's time . . . the German army covered distances and occupied regions which 25 years ago would have taken over 14 months to conquer.

Even though a number of peculiarly gifted newspaper strategists in other parts of the world attempted to describe the pace at which this campaign progressed as not coming up to Germany's expectations, we, ourselves, all know that in all history there has scarcely been a comparable military achievement.

There would have been no difficulty for us in breaking the resistance of Warsaw between the 10 and 12 of September, just as we finally broke it September 25-27. . . .

Sheer sympathy for women and children caused me to make an offer to those in command of Warsaw at least to let civilian inhabitants leave the city.

Twice I attempted to evacuate at least the international colony from the city. In this I finally succeeded after great difficulties; in the case of the Russian colony, actually at the last moment. I then ordered a general attack on the city for September 25 . . . Warsaw capitulated on the 27th.

With 120,000 men the defenders did not even attempt to break through as our German Gen. Litzmann once did at Brzesiny with a vastly inferior force—but, on the contrary, preferred to lay down arms. Any comparison with the Alcazar is entirely out of place.

Praises Armed Forces

The Polish soldiers as individuals fought bravely on many occasions, but their officers, beginning with the command, can only be described as irresponsible, unconscientious and inefficient.

I have made these statements, gentlemen, with the object of forestalling the invention of historical legends; for if legend is to be woven around any who took part in this campaign, it should be woven around German soldiers who, during the attack and on the march, added yet another page to their immortal glorious record.

If, within four weeks we have completely annihilated a state with a population of 36,000,000 and corresponding military strength, and if during this whole period our victorious arms have not suffered a single setback, this cannot be ascribed to good luck, but constitutes certain proof of fine training, excellent leadership and indomitable courage.

German soldiers have once more firmly established the right to wear the laurel wreath of which they were meanly deprived in 1918.

Admittedly, the total number of casualties gives no idea of the severity of the various encounters. . . .

10,572 Death Toll

According to the casualty list of up to the 30th of September, 1939, which won't change materially, the total losses for the army, navy and air force, including officers, are as follows: Ten thousand five hundred and seventy-two killed, 30,322 wounded and 3,404 missing.

Six hundred and ninety-four thousand prisoners have set out on their march to Berlin. The amount of war material captured cannot yet be estimated.

Assails Lloyd George

Versailles was the cradle of a Polish state which had emerged from the untold sacrifice of blood—not of Polish, but of German and Russian blood. Poland, who for centuries past had proved herself incapable of existence, was in 1916 artificially begotten and in 1919 no less artificially borne by a German government just as incapable of existence. . . .

A man who, I am sorry to say, now ranks among our fiercest enemies, at that time clearly foresaw all this. I mean Mr. Lloyd George.

In 1919 the Poles laid claims to the territory where they pretended to have a majority of 95 per cent—in East Prussia, for instance—whereas a plebiscite later showed the Poles actually had reached a figure of 2 per cent.

In the state finally created which contained parts of former Russia, Austria and Germany non-Polish elements were so brutally illtreated, suppressed, tyrannized and tortured that any plebiscite depended entirely on the good will of local administrative officials for producing such results as were desired or demanded . . .

And when, on top of all this, statesmen of our Western Hemisphere spoke of this kind of creation as of democracy, such terms amounted to mockery of the fundamentals of their own system.

Denies Danzig Ultimatum

In that country (Poland), there ruled a minority of aristocratic or nonaristocratic large, vast estate owners and wealthy intellectuals to whom, under the most favorable circumstances, their own Polish compatriots were nothing but mass manpower. For that reason the regime was never backed by more than 15 per cent of the total population.

The economic distress and low cultural level corresponded with these conditions. In 1919 this state took over from Prussia and also from Austria, provinces which had been developed through hundreds of years of hard toil, some of them being in a most flourishing condition. Today, after the elapse of 20 years, they are at a point of gradually turning into steppes again . . .

When the Polish government proceeded in a thousand ways gradually to subjugate Danzig as well, I endeavored, by means of practical proposals, to secure a solution. . . .

If today anyone alleges that these were ultimative demands, that allegation is a lie.

The proposals for a solution, as communicated to the Polish government in March, 1939, were nothing but the suggestions and the ideas already discussed long ago between myself and the Polish Foreign Minister Beck.

While I was inviting the then Polish foreign minister to take part in a conference for the discussion of our proposals, the Polish military generals were already writing about the inefficiency of the German army, the cowardice of the German soldiers, the inferiority of the German weapons, the obvious superiority of the Polish forces and the certainty, in case of war, of defeating the Germans at the gates of Berlin and of annihilating the Reich . . .

Violations and insults which Germany and her armed forces had to put up with from these military dilletantes would never have been tolerated by any other state, just as they were not expected from any other nation. . . .

Another reason was that fatal promise of guarantee given to the state which, although not menaced at all, very rapidly became convinced it could afford to challenge a great power without risk once it was assured of the support of two great powers, perhaps even hoping this way to lay the foundation for realization of all its own insane ambitions.

Poles Felt False Security

Had only one per cent of these atrocities been committed in any part of the world against the English people I should be interested to see the indignation of those "gentlemen" who today in hypocritical horror condemn the German or Russian procedure.

No! To grant guarantees to this state and the government as was done, could only lead to appalling disasters.

The German proposals aiming at a last-minute agreement on a just and equitable basis were answered by a general mobilization. . . .

Under these circumstances it was obvious that if further incursions into the Reich's territory occurred, Germany's patience would be at an end.

Since they believed that this patience and long suffering were a sign of weakness which would allow them to do anything, no other course remained than to show them their mistake by striking back with the weapons which they themselves had used for years.

If this step on Germany's part has resulted in a community of interests with Russia, that is due not only to the similarity of the problems affecting the two states but also to that of the conclusions which both states had arrived at with regard to their future relationship.

In my speech at Danzig I already declared that Russia was organized on principles which differ from those held in Germany.

However, since it became clear that Stalin found nothing in the Russian Soviet principles which should prevent him from cultivating friendly relations with states of a different political creed, National Socialist Germany sees no reason why she should adopt another criterion.

Months ago I stated in the Reichstag that the conclusion of the German-Russian nonaggression pact marked the turning point in the whole German foreign policy.

Germany and Russia together will relieve one of the most acute danger spots in Europe of its threatening character and will, each in her own sphere, contribute to the welfare of the peoples living there, thus aiding to European peace in general.

The aims and tasks which emerge from the collapse of the Polish state are, in so far as the German sphere of interest is concerned, roughly as follows:

Demarcation of the boundary for the Reich, which will do justice to historical, ethnographical and economic facts.

Pacification of the whole territory by restoring a tolerable measure of peace and order.

Absolute guarantees of security not only as far as Reich territory is concerned but for the entire sphere of interest.

Reestablishment and reorganization of economic life and of trade and transport, involving development of culture and civilization.

Aims Set Forth

As I have already mentioned, it was one of the aims of the government of the Reich to clear up the relations between ourselves and our neighbors. Allow me to point out some facts that cannot be refuted by the scribblings of international press liars.

1. Germany has concluded nonaggression pacts with the Baltic states. Her interests there are of an exclusively economic nature.

2. In former times already Germany never had any conflict of interests, or indeed litigation points, with the northern states and she has none today either.

3. Germany has taken no steps in regard to the German territory handed over to Denmark under the terms of the Treaty of Versailles; she has, on the contrary, established local and friendly relations with Denmark.

4. The new Reich has endeavored to continue the traditional friendship with Holland; it did not take over any difference between the two states nor did it create new ones.

5. Immediately after I had taken over the government I tried to establish friendly relations with Belgium. The Reich has put forward no claim which might in any way have been regarded as a threat to Belgium.

Same Toward Swiss

6. Germany adopted the same attitude toward Switzerland.

7. Immediately after the anschluss (with Austria) became an accomplished fact I informed Yugoslavia that the frontier in common with that country would henceforth be regarded as unalterable by Germany and that we wished only to live in peace and harmony with that country.

8. The bond which binds us to Hungary is an old and traditional one of close and sincere friendship. In this instance, too, our frontiers are unalterable.

9. Slovakia appealed to Germany of her own accord for assistance in connection with her establishment as a state. Her independence is recognized and not infringed upon by the Reich.

10. However, it is not only with these states but also with the great powers that Germany has improved and settled those relations which to a certain extent had been adversely affected by the Treaty of Versailles.

My first step was to bring about an alteration in the relations between Italy and the Reich. The existing frontiers between these two states have been formally recognized as unalterable by both countries.

My chief endeavor, however, has been to rid our relations with France of all trace of ill will and render them tolerable for both nations.

At no time and in no place have I ever acted contrary to British interests. Unfortunately, I have only too often been forced to guard against instances of British interference in German affairs.

Animosity of certain British statesmen and journalists has deeply affected me personally. They made no secret of the fact—for reasons which are unfathomable to us—their sole aim was to seize the first opportunity in order to resume the fight with Germany.

I believe even today that there can only be real peace in Europe and throughout the world if Germany and England come to an understanding.

Polish Attitude

Why should this war in the West be fought? For restoration of Poland? Poland of the Versailles Treaty will never rise again. This is guaranteed by two of the largest states in the world. Final reorganization of this territory and the question of reestablishment of the Polish state are problems which will not be solved by a war in the West but exclusively by Russia and Germany.

If this war is to be waged to give Germany a new regime, to destroy the present Reich and create a new treaty of Versailles, then millions of human lives will be sacrificed in vain, for neither will the German Reich go to pieces nor will a second treaty of Versailles be made. And even should this come to pass after three, four or even eight years of war, then this second Versailles would once more become the source of fresh conflict in the future.

Two problems are ripe for discussion today.

Firstly, the settlement of the problems arising from the disintegration of Poland and, secondly the problem of eliminating those international difficulties which endanger the political and economical existence of the nations.

The aims of the Reich government are for the creation of a Reich frontier which shall be in accordance with existing historical, ethnographical and economic conditions.

The disposition of the entire living space according to the various nationalities.

An attempt to reach a solution and settlement of the Jewish problem.

Reconstruction of transport facilities and economic life in the interest of all.

A guarantee for the security of this entire territory.

Formation of a Polish state so constituted and governed as to prevent its becoming once again either a hotbed of anti-German activity or a center of intrigue against Germany and Russia.

This demand for colonies is based not only on Germany's historical claim, but above all on her elementary right to a share of the world's resources of raw materials.

Secondly, the demand for a real revival of international economic life, coupled with an extension of trade and commerce, presupposes a reorganization of the international economic system. Markets must be organized and a final currency regulation arrived at.

The most important condition for a real revival of economic life in and outside of Europe is the establishment of an unconditionally guaranteed peace and a sense of security by the nations.

Calls For Disarmament

This security will be rendered possible by the final sanctioning of the European status, and reduction of armaments to a reasonable and economically tolerable level.

A Geneva convention once succeeded in prohibiting the killing of wounded, ill treatment of prisoners, war against noncombatants, et cetera. A way must surely be found to regulate aerial warfare, use of poison gas, and submarines, et cetera, and also so to define contraband that war will lose its terrible character of conflict waged against women and children and against other non-combatants.

In the war with Poland, I endeavored to restrict aerial warfare to objective of so-called military importance, or only to employ it to combat active resistance at a given point.

I do not believe that there is any responsible statesman in Europe who does not in his heart desire prosperity for his people. Such a desire can only be realized if all the nations decide to work together.

It is impossible that such a conference could carry on its deliberations while cannon are thundering or mobilized armies are bringing pressure to bear.

It would be more sensible to tackle the solution before millions of men are uselessly sent to death and milliards of riches destroyed. Continuation of the present state of affairs in the west is unthinkable.

Perhaps the day will come when France will begin to bombard and demolish Saarbruecken. German artillery will in turn lay Mulhouse in ruins. France will retaliate by bombarding Karlsruhe and Germany will shell Strasbourg.

This battle of destruction will not be confined to the land. No, it will reach far out over the sea.

Today, there are no longer any islands. And the national wealth of Europe will be scattered in the form of shells, and the vigor of every nation will be sapped on the battlefields. There will be a frontier between Germany and France, but instead of flourishing towns there will be ruins and endless graveyards.

Mr. Churchill and his companions may interpret these opinions of mine as weakness or cowardice if they like. I need not occupy myself with what they think. If the opinions of Churchill and followers should prevail, this statement will have been my last.

May those peoples and their leaders who are of the same mind now make their reply. And let those who consider war to be the better solution reject my outstretched hand.

Iroquois Incident

By Mark Sullivan

Inquiry Is Necessary

THE IROQUOIS incident is highly inflammatory. It is the sort of thing that leads to war. We must look it in the face. About it, many wrong courses can be taken. There is one indisputably right course. Let us see what it is.

But first, as to what has already been done: Let us understand clearly that the Administration's action so far has been absolutely correct. The instant the Administration received information about alleged danger to the Iroquois, it was the duty of the Administration to do exactly what it did—send naval vessels to accompany the Iroquois.

Also it was proper for the Administration to make the public announcement it made. That announcement was sensational and disturbing—but necessary. It was imperative that the public should know the information upon which the Administration sent a naval convoy to the Iroquois. Otherwise the sending of the convoy might have been misinterpreted as an unnecessary act.

Incident Calls for Immediate Inquiry

SO MUCH FOR the Iroquois incident up to date. Our record is open, and it is correct.

Now, as to the future. From this point on, consequences will follow. The Iroquois incident, assuming it is what it seems to be, calls for or justifies serious future steps. It makes it desirable that every American merchant ship on the sea should be convoyed. This is true no matter what the destination of the American ship—whether it be going toward the scene of war in Europe, or toward South America, or the West Indies, or Asia—anywhere.

This practice, if we adopt it, the convoying of every American merchant vessel on the sea, will take us farther in the direction of involvement in the war. It will take our naval ships into contact with conditions of war in a thousand places. The Iroquois incident is the first link in a chain, of which the inevitable further links move in the direction of war. It has strong similarity to incidents in the Great War which, by step after step, led to our getting involved.

Therefore, let us find out all about this Iroquois incident. Let us find out at once. Let us have investigation now, as a guide for present action—not after the war is over, as a post-mortem over dead men's bones.

Let the aim of the investigation be to determine exactly what was the origin of the warning of danger to the Iroquois; whether the warning had reality; whether there actually was danger; if so, what and who created the danger. Determine whether at any point the warning was due to misconception—whether there was a mistake of understanding, error in transmission, at any point in the passing of information from man to man.

Identified Source Is Admiral Raeder

AS A START, take the essential facts as set forth in the announcement made by the American Government:

"The head of the German navy, Grand Admiral Raeder, officially informed the American Government, through the United States naval attache in Berlin, that according to information on which he relied, an American ship, the Iroquois, is to be sunk when it nears our American East Coast."

Thus the first identified source is Grand Admiral Raeder. Therefore begin by making inquiry of him. It is hardly conceivable that he would not answer a request for information.

Ask the German Grand Admiral exactly what were the words he used when he communicated with the American naval aide. If the admiral made his communication in writing, get a copy of his words. If the communication was oral, ask the admiral to repeat the words as nearly as he can remember them.

Next, ask the American naval aide to whom did he communicate? Did he send his message direct to Washington? If the message was a cable, let us see a copy. If by telephone, was a record kept of the conversation?

If the American naval aide did not first communicate with Washington, but with some American official in Europe, get the exact words that were said, and to whom.

Follow Report Back to Origin

ASSUMING THERE was no mistake in transmission, go back again to the German Grand Admiral. Ask him from whom he received the information he gave to the American naval aide. Follow this back to the very origin, to the first person who said the Iroquois was in danger. If the trail leads back to a nation other than Germany, as the admiral implies, follow it to that country. If at any point anyone declines to talk, we shall be able to make deductions from silence.

By such investigation we shall know exactly whether there was any danger, who created it—who it was, if anyone, that planned to sink the Iroquois. Conceivably we may discover there was no real danger. But whatever there is to discover, let us discover it, now.

Be under no misapprehension. This Iroquois incident is portentous. We can act upon it in excitement, without information. Or we can act calmly, with information. "We" includes not only the American Government but the American people, including especially writers, cartoonists, commentators.

Today And Tomorrow

establishment of Nazi Germany as a naval power in the South Atlantic at a time when our own Navy is compelled to remain on guard in the Pacific is, therefore, a matter about which no one can be indifferent if he is concerned with the defense of this hemisphere.

Eastern Europe is manifestly within the rule laid down by George Washington that "Europe has a set of primary interests which to us have none or a very remote relation." But what happens in the Atlantic Ocean falls within the set of our primary interests. Therefore, apart from its human and cultural implications, the situation in eastern Europe concerns this country only as it bears upon the question whether the Allies can be forced or persuaded by Hitler to lay down their arms and share with him their naval control of the Atlantic Ocean.

When we examine the bearing of the eastern European situation on the general position of the Allies, it is evident that any judgment depends upon an estimate as to what are the real relations between Hitler and Stalin. But those relations are a secret, and what the Nazis and Communists have said about them is not at all informative. The only chance we have of piercing the secret is when Stalin or Hitler plays a card,—that is, makes an actual move rather than a rhetorical declaration.

WHEN WE DO SEE the card, we may be able to begin to infer what are some of the other cards that each holds in his hand. Such inferences would have to be based on what we know from the past about the more or less permanent objectives of Russian and German imperialism and modified by our estimate of the mentality of the Nazi and Bolshevik revolutions.

The cards that have been played thus far are the various lines of demarcation between the two armies of occupation plus the Russian diplomatic advance into the Baltic states. Now it is interesting and probably significant that since the Russian mobilization three different lines of demarcation have been announced. The first was announced in Moscow; it did not bring the Russians as far west as either of the later lines. The second brought the Russians to the suburbs of Warsaw, and within easy reach of the German military base in East Prussia. The third line, which was announced after the second visit of Ribbentrop to Moscow moves the Russians back a considerable distance.

A careful study of the difference between the second and the third lines will disclose, I believe, that the Russians have adopted, at least provisionally, as their frontier in Poland the so-called Curzon line of 1919—that is to say, the line which the British experts at the peace conference thought was the proper frontier of Poland. The territory that the Russians are occupying was not assigned to Poland in the Versailles settlement; it is territory conquered by the Poles some years after the peace conference.

It is territory inhabited by White Russians and Ukrainians, members of the Greek Orthodox Church, with only a minority of Roman Catholic Poles. This would seem to signify that Stalin has chosen to share in the partition of the Polish state but not in a partition of the Polish nation, and that he has been careful to arrange matters so that the Polish problem will remain a question between Hitler, the Allies and the Polish people.

IF WE STUDY the northern and southern ends of the present Russo-German line, it seems highly probable that at the two ends the frontier is provisional. This is the opinion of John F. Waterman, expressed in a letter to the New York Times this week, and Mr. Waterman, who is clearly a student of the region, makes out a very plausible case that in the north, toward Lithuania and Latvia, and in the south in Eastern Galicia, Stalin has advanced beyond his permanent frontier, and is occupying more territory than he means to keep. For, as Mr. Waterman argues, neither north nor in the south is the frontier as now drawn strategically secure. In the north, it places Russia in a position to strike at East Prussia; in the south, it places Russia in a salient which would be a military trap for the Russian army.

The chances are, therefore, that Hitler has provisionally agreed to the bad military frontier on the north as a pledge that he will not interfere with Stalin while Russia is establishing herself in Esthonia, Latvia and Finland as a naval power in the Baltic; and that he has agreed to the provisional occupation of Eastern Galicia (since he cannot help himself at the moment while he has a war in the west), as a screen behind which Stalin can establish himself in Rumania and bar German access to the Black Sea. When that has been done, Stalin will presumably withdraw from the East Galician saliant.

On the basis of this analysis, we are perhaps entitled to speculate a little further. We may ask, for example, what is the probable attitude of Stalin towards Hitler on the one hand and towards the Allies on the other. As regards Hitler, it is evident that Stalin has used the war to establish the best military frontier that Russia has ever had. The frontier of 1914, which included Poland, was indefensible by the Russians, as it proved again to be by the Poles; the Russian frontier before the present war was open to a German invasion both through the Baltic states toward Leningrad and through the Polish Ukraine into the Russian Ukraine. The new frontier is the only good military frontier in that part of the world.

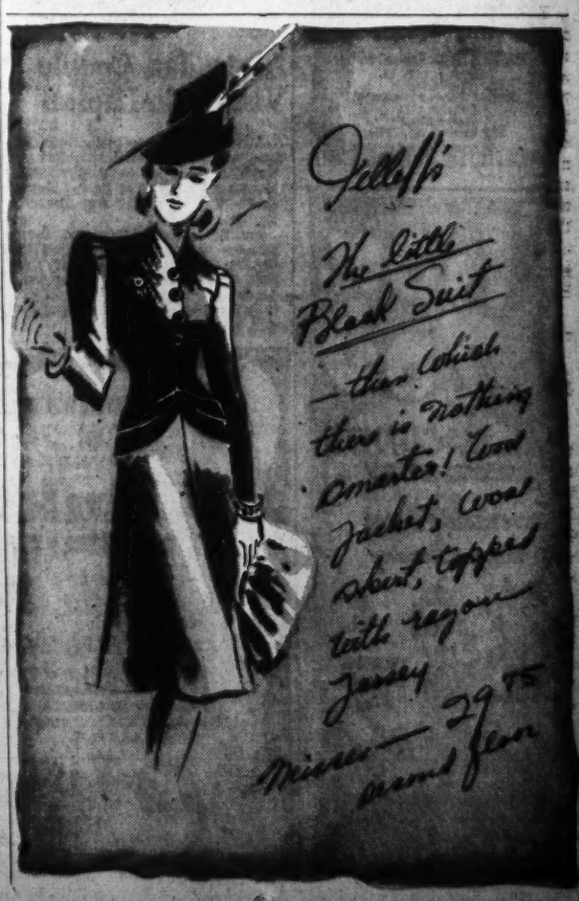
HAVING ACHIEVED that frontier, it is clearly Stalin's interest that Hitler should not be so victorious that he can turn on Russia and resume the great ambitions described in "Mein Kampf." Stalin can have no doubt that "the crusade against Bolshevism" can be resumed as easily as it was abandoned. On the other hand, it would seem also to be to Stalin's interest that France and Great Britain should not be able ever again to reconstruct the post-war Poland and Rumania, that Italy should not recover any important sphere of influence in central Europe and the Balkans, that Great Britain should not have a position in Turkey which makes her a naval power in the Black Sea.

We may guess, therefore, that Stalin will wish Hitler to survive but not that Hitler should crush the Allies, and that he will wish the Allies to weaken Hitler but not so much that Hitler is overthrown by a German conservative counter-revolution. Stalin must fear a victorious Hitler; he must also fear a new Germany which returned to the western world and withstood the advance of Bolshevism.

If this is Stalin's policy, it is very awkward indeed both for Hitler and for the Allies. It means that Hitler has lost to Stalin the great design of his life, the establishment of a German empire in the east. The "German living space," which seemed within Hitler's grasp after Munich, is largely closed to him by the Russian advance into Europe. Moreover, the bargain with Stalin has deprived Hitler of his chief diplomatic instrument in the western world—namely, the claim that he is the great champion against Communism. One has only to observe the attitude of Nationalist Spain, of Fascist Italy, and of the Vatican to see what Hitler has lost and how he has become morally isolated.

Nevertheless, though Hitler has suffered a political disaster in the east, the bulk of his army is available against the western Allies and the blockade is only partially effective. That is awkward for the Allies. For the only way in which Hitler can now expand is towards the west, at the expense of the Allies, and the colonial demands which he put forward in his speech, therefore, take on a new significance. Once, when his eyes were on the Ukraine, the colonies were perhaps bargaining points; now, with the door closed to his empire in eastern Europe, an overseas empire is the only empire he can contemplate.

For while Hitler argued in his speech that if he were allowed to be a lion in the east, he would be a lamb in the west, the fact is that he has surrendered his chance to be a lion in the east. So if he is going to be a lion at all, it will have to be at the immediate expense of the British and French, once they have accepted his suggestion that they return the colonies and then agree to disarmament.



Crocketts Conjure Up Magic of South Seas

Cocktail Party at Mrs. Wylie's Home Hears of Coconuts and Cannibals; Couple Inherited Two Coral Isles

By Dudley Harmon

Unexpectedly falling heir to two tiny, windswept coral islands off the west coast of New Guinea, in the Pacific, started Mrs. Frederick Crockett, of Boston, and her explorer husband off on two years of exciting adventure which sounds like a novel by Conrad and Stevenson combined.

Mr. and Mrs. Crockett, a very attractive as well as intrepid young couple, are visiting Andrew Wylie at the home of his mother, Mrs. K. V. H. Wylie, on Thomas Circle. All four have been spending the summer in Ipswich, Mass., from which Mr. Wylie recently returned. The Crocketts—she is an anthropologist and he takes movies of their trips—told a few Washington friends of their adventures, over cocktails Thursday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Cumming, jr., in Georgetown.

Their story starts many years ago, when Mrs. Crockett, as a child, was cruising in the Spice Islands off Australia with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Dennison, of Santa Barbara, Calif. On board was an old Austrian, a bit down on his luck, who was going from his coconut plantation on two small deserted islands, to Australia for medical treatment. Mr. Dennison became interested in the old man, and on parting gave him a small sum to help him along. On his return to the United States he discovered that his shipboard friend, out of gratitude, had deeded over to him his two coconut islands, keeping himself on as manager.

When the island eventually passed to the Crockett's they realized that they didn't know exactly where their new property was. They wrote to the manager, but since a letter takes three months to reach him, had to wait half a year for a reply. Then, disappointingly, he replied vaguely that the plantation was "a day and a half ride by rowboat from the town of ——," naming one on the west coast of New Guinea.

Friends Need Geography Lesson

Curiosity to discover their coconut islands was one factor which started Mr. and Mrs. Crockett off on their expedition, though the primary purpose was to study the aborigines of New Guina. Ever since Mr. Crockett, at the age of 20, served as dog driver and radio operator on one of the Byrd expeditions to the South Pole, he has been interested in exploration. So he joined forces with the Academy of Natural Sciences in Philadelphia, for which he was to collect specimens, and set sail from Gloucester, Mass., on a small schooner, with his wife, several other scientists, and two sailors.

Mr. Crockett says the most amazing aspect of their 11,000-mile trip through the Pacific was that the only really rough weather they encountered was in Gloucester Harbor when they sailed. The party stopped in Tahiti, and the Galapagos, Fiji, and Solomon Islands. Mrs. Crockett, and the other woman passenger, Mrs. Marion Lowndes, of New York, took turns with the men in running the boat.

Incidentally, since their return, the Crocketts have discovered that all their American friends are under the impression that New Guinea is located either on the coast of South America or in Africa. They are growing tired of explaining that it is a large island in the Pacific off Australia.

Learned to Speak Malay on Trip

On their arrival at New Guinea, 14 months after leaving Gloucester, the Crocketts sailed up and down the coast, trading tobacco for specimens of wild life. Both learned to speak Malay. They then sent their boat back to Manila to be sold, and with one other member of the expedition traveled into the interior, where they built a hut in the jungle. There they waited for the natives to approach, luring them with bits of glass, colored beads, steel knives, which they liked, and castor oil, which they loved best of all. Mr. Crockett took movies of them and both he and his wife studied their habits.

Though these dark-skinned, pygmy-like people are cannibalistic, the Crocketts felt no qualms, and Mr. Crockett jokingly explains that he kept them well supplied with wild boar meat. He shot it with his rifle, which amazed the natives, as they had never seen a gun. The Crocketts also gave them medical treatment, which made their aboriginal friends become quite dependent on them and very sorry to see them go.

Though these dark-skinned, who looks like anything but an anthropologist, received her degree at Radcliffe. She is now writing a book about their experiences in New Guinea.

She and her husband will return to Boston today. They have not decided where their next exploration will lead them. For the time being, Mr. Crockett is consoling himself by helping Admiral Richard E. Byrd outfit his ship at Boston for his forthcoming expedition in November. This trip is for the purpose of setting up weather stations and otherwise claiming for the United States land in the Antarctic which the admiral has previously explored.

Mme. Crespo Gives Small Tea Dance

Mme. Crespo, wife of the Secretary of the Ecuador Embassy, was hostess at a small tea dance at the Hotel Raleigh yesterday afternoon.

Among those who attended were the Misses Elvina and Margaret Rowe, Mrs. Fredrica Corbett, Miss Louisa Teetz, Count Leone Fumasini Biondi, Gregorio Marquez, Pio Correa of the Brazilian Embassy, Fritz Real of the Swiss Legation, Manuel Sainz of the Cuban Embassy, Manuel Crespo of the Ecuador Embassy and his brother, Senor Luiz Crespo, Joseph Riggs and Noel Kaho.

Gilbert and Sullivan Operas Next Week

Additional members of Capital society have been added to the list of distinguished persons who have taken boxes for the performances of two Gilbert and Sullivan operas, "The Mikado" and "Pinafore," to be given on Thursday and Friday evenings at Constitution Hall for the benefit of the Children's Hospital.

Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins is among those who have taken tickets, and others include Mrs. Cornell Strong, Mr. and Mrs. Frank B. Noyes, Reginald S. Huidekoper, Miss Susan Baker, Miss Hilda Cunniff, Col. Robert Henry, Hampson Gary, Mrs. F. K. Raymond, Mrs. Avery Coonley, Mrs. Amelia J. Vanderheide, Mrs. Charles W. Smith, Mrs. Ralph Richards, Mrs. F. Lammot Belin, Col. M. E. Locke, Dr. Mary B. Adams, Dr. C. B. Crawford, Mrs. Karl D. Loos, Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Willard, jr.

The hospital, which now has a $30,000 deficit, will receive the net proceeds of the two shows.

Australian Couple Visiting in Capital

Mr. and Mrs. Rupert A. Henderson, of Sydney, Australia, are at the Shoreham while in Washington on a tour that is taking them three-quarters of the way around the globe.

Sailing from Sydney four months ago, they have visited in the Dutch East Indies, Europe, the British Isles and finally America. After their visit here they will fly to San Francisco, from where they will sail again for Sydney.

Horses Lure The Woodrings

The Secretary of War Harry H. Woodring and Mrs. Woodring will attend the races today as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Jouett Shouse, and on Monday evening will attend the opening of Helen Hayes' play at the National Theater.

On Thursday, Mr. and Mrs. James J. Harris, of Charlotte, N. C., will arrive in town to be guests for a day or two of Secretary and Mrs. Woodring, who will entertain for them at dinner that evening. Mrs. Harris, the former Miss Angelia Morrison, daughter of former Senator Morrison, of North Carolina, is an old friend of Mrs. Woodring. They met through the Senate Daughters Club when Mrs. Woodring's father, former Senator Marcus Coolidge, and Mrs. Harris' father were colleagues. On Thursday afternoon Mrs. Woodring is assisting Miss Mabel Boardman at the Red Cross tea.

H. McCoy Joneses Are Hosts to Miss Jane Gray

Miss Jane Gray, post-debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carroll E. Gray, of 300 Park Avenue, New York, is the guest of Commander and Mrs. H. McCoy Jones at their home at 1 Blackistone drive, Westmoreland Hills, Md.

Miss Gray will go next week to Annapolis to visit Lieut. and Mrs. James Collett. The former is a brother of Miss Gray's fiance, Lieut. John Austin Collett, U. S. N. The engagement of Miss Gray and Lieut. Collett was announced last month. He is now stationed with the Naval Flying Corps in Hawaii, and the marriage will take place there late this fall.

Mrs. Atwater Takes An Apartment Here

Mrs. William B. Atwater has arrived here from New York and has taken an apartment at the Mayflower for the season.

Her daughter-in-law, Mrs. John G. Shedd, of Greenwich, Conn., is spending the week-end with her. Mrs. Atwater's late husband was a Naval aviator during the last World War in charge of an Italian airport.

Miss Culbertson Is in New York For Her Trousseau

Miss Junia Culbertson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William S. Culbertson, is spending several days in New York getting her trousseau together for her marriage November 18 to Thomas David Luckenbill. She will return on Monday.

Their wedding, which will be a simple ceremony, will take place at the Culbertson apartment at 2101 Connecticut avenue. The bride will have her sisters, the Misses Jane and Josephine Culbertson, as her attendants.

After a honeymoon the couple will live in New York, where Mr. Luckenbill is associated with an advertising firm.

Miss Biesemeier To See Navy Game

Miss Mary Carol Biesemeier, daughter of Commander Harold Biesemeier, United States Navy, and Mrs. Biesemeier, and Miss Ellen Notz will leave Washington today for Annapolis, where they will attend the University of Virginia-Navy football game this afternoon.

Following the game, Mrs. Biesemeier will entertain a group at dinner at Carvel Hall, and later the party will attend the Midshipmen's hop at the United States Naval Academy. Dinner guests will be Mrs. Biesemeier's son, Midshipman Harold Biesemeier; Midshipman William P. Willis, Midshipman Richard Lowe, Miss Biesemeier and Miss Notz.

Commander Biesemeier, until recently on duty in Washington, is with the Fleet.

Mrs. Mary Spratt Honors Couple To Be Wed Today

Mrs. Mary Spratt entertained at a buffet supper last evening at her residence in Arlington in honor of her daughter, Miss Margaret Lee Spratt, and James McCain, of Washington, who will be married at 4 o'clock this afternoon.

Guests included Mrs. Fox, grandmother of the bride, her two sisters, the Misses Katherine and Winifred Spratt, Edgar Spratt, their brother, Mrs. Hannah Weedon, Douglas Kelley and Charles Weedon.

The ceremony will take place at the home of Mrs. Spratt, the Rev. Perry Mitchell officiating, and will be followed by a reception. After a honeymoon the couple will reside in Washington.

The Misses Winifred and Katherine Spratt will serve as their sisters' attendants, and Walter McCain will be best man.

Rumanian Attache To Take Apartment

Brutus Coste, Second Secretary of the Rumanian legation, and Mme. Coste have been at the Mayflower since Wednesday and are today taking an apartment outside of the hotel for the duration of their stay in Washington.

After leaving Bucharest in mid-July, the Rumanian diplomat and his wife visited in Paris and London and arrived in New York the middle of August.

Many to Attend Lee Mill Fete

Several prominent members of Capital society, who are active in the Robert E. Lee Foundation, will attend a celebration October 19 to mark the restoration of a 200-year-old grist mill located on the Lee family estate, Stratford Hall, where Gen. Lee was born.

Among those expected to journey to Virginia for the festivities are former Senator and Mrs. Harry B. Hawes, Mr. and Mrs. Cazenove Lee, Mrs. Breckinridge Long and Mrs. Horace Van Deventer. Mrs. Robert Worth Bingham, of Kentucky, widow of the former United States Ambassador to Great Britain, is also expected to attend.

The restoration of the old mill was made possible by the combined contributions of former Senator and Mrs. Jesse H. Metcalf, of Providence, R. I., and General Mills, Inc., of Minneapolis. The original mill was built in or about 1740, but only the foundations and fragments of stone walls remained. Professor B. W. Dedrick, assisted by Alden Ackels, has spent a year searching remote corners of Virginia and surrounding States to discover a set of mill machinery 200 years old that could still be used in the restored mill at Stratford. Finally the machinery was found in Linesboro, Md., and is now installed in the mill at Stratford.

Mrs. Huntington To Head Luncheon Of Geographers

Mrs. William Chapin Huntington will preside at the luncheon to be held by the International Society of Women Georgraphers in New York on Tuesday, October 10.

This day has been designated by the directors of the Fair as "Society of Women Geographers' Day." Other Washington members of the Society who expect to go to New York for the occasion are Mrs. Marie Peary Stafford, who will be one of the speakers on the program; Mrs. P. T. M. Lathrop, Miss Ellen LaMotte, Miss Mary Nourse and Mrs. Charles M. Hendley.

Debutantes to Model In Two Fashion Shows

The Pall Mall Room at the Hotel Raleigh and the Blue Room at the Shoreham will be scenes of fashion luncheons today, with several debutantes among the models.

Among hostesses who will entertain at the first of the Shoreham series is Mrs. James L. Baity, who will have a party of eight in honor of Mrs. Silas Hare, of Sherman, Tex. Mrs. Hare is visiting Capt. and Mrs. John A. Scofield here.

At another table at the Shoreham Mrs. William H. Donovan and Mrs. Joseph C. Cary will entertain friends.

Mrs. D. J. Callaghan Visiting Husband Here

Angela Adams and Elizabeth Camalier And Fiances Feted

Two bonnie brides-elect have usurped the spotlight for the nonce.

Miss Angela Adams and Barry Mohun, who will be married this afternoon, were guests of honor at a dinner party last night given by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Graves Adams at the Chevy Chase Club.

Guests included members of the bridal party and the many out-of-town guests here for the ceremony, which will take place in St. John's Chapel. Miss Anne Turner will be the maid of honor and Eugene Franklin O'Connor 3d, of Oyster Bay, Long Island, will be best man.

The ushers also attended the the dinner party which followed the wedding rehearsal. They are Lieut. Frederick W. Coleman 3d, U. S. A.; Frank S. Hight, jr., Charles A. McKenney, jr., and Tinsley Adams, brother of the bride-elect.

Here for the wedding from Lake Forrest, Ill., is Mrs. Adams' cousin, Mrs. Scott Durand, accompanied by Mr. Durand. The Durands, who are well known in Washington, arrived here yesterday by motor and will be the guests of the Adamses for several days.

Another important wedding on today's calendar is that of Miss Elizabeth Fearing Camalier, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. C. Willard Camalier, of Chevy Chase, to Frederick John Boyd, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. Rush Boyd, of Warren, Pa.

Last night Dr. and Mrs. Camalier entertained at a buffet supper at their home in Chevy Chase in honor of the bride and bridegroom-to-be. Guests included Mr and Mrs. R. P. Camalier. She will serve as matron of honor and he as an usher; Miss Betty Rodrick, maid of honor; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Beard, jr., the latter of whom will be a bridesmaid, and the remaining attendants, Miss Marguerite Dilcer, Miss Betty Martin and Miss Dorothy Rice.

Ushers attending the supper were Dr. C. Willard Camalier, jr., Robert Cummings, Donald McCurdy and Edward Hopper.

Among the out-of-town guests are the prospective bridegroom's sister, Miss Evelyn Boyd, of Warren, Pa., and his two aunts, Miss Lula Boyd and Miss Minnie Koebley, of Warren. Mr. and Mrs. G. R. Barrow, are here from Elizabeth City, N. C., and Dr. Frank Camalier is here from Leonardtown, Md.

Mrs. Wiltse Plans Frequent Trips To Nahant Home

Mrs. L. J. Wiltse, who has recently come to Washington as the bride of Commander Wiltse, U. S. N., is in for a winter of strenuous commuting between here and her home in Nahant, Mass. The former Mrs. F. Haven Clark, Mrs. Wiltse will spend every other week at her New England home, as her youngest daughter, Miss Joan Clark, is in school in Boston.

Mrs. Wiltse is the mother of Mrs. John Roosevelt, the former Miss Anne Clark, and of Mrs. George X. McClanahan, of New York, formerly Miss Sally Clark. Her marriage to Commander Wiltse took place late in September at Nahant.

Commander and Mrs. Wiltse are making their headquarters at the Anchorage, where the former lived prior to his marriage.

Mrs. Thomas Healy Expected Tomorrow

Mrs. Thomas H. Healy, wife of Dr. Healy, dean of the School of Foreign Service of Georgetown University, is returning to this country on the American liner Washington, which is expected to dock tomorrow in New York.

Summoned by the illness of her mother, Mrs. Healy has been in France since early summer. Her mother, Mme. Marie Perrison, died soon after Mrs. Healys' arrival, but Mrs. Healy, who delayed her return, was caught in the rush of tourists and unable to get earlier passage. She has been visiting with friends outside of Bordeaux.

Mme. Perrison was the widow of Capt. Perrison who was killed while serving with the French army during the World War. Her son and Mrs. Healy's brother is an officer in the French artillery. Mrs. Healy met her husband during the World War while he was serving in the artillery of the American Expeditionary Forces.

Week-End of Gayety in Store, Centering On Montague-Tayloe Wedding Today

THIS WILL BE a week-end of gayety centered around the marriage of Miss Georgie Wallace ("Polly") Montague to H. Gwynne Tayloe, jr., which takes place today in Middleburg at 12 o'clock at Emmanuel Episcopal Church. There will be a small reception after the ceremony at Melmore, the home of the bride-elect's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Poindexter Montague.

At 2 o'clock, the prospective bridegroom's uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Atkinson, will entertain at luncheon in honor of the newlyweds, at their home, Mansfield.

Last night, Mr. and Mrs. George R. Gaither were hosts at a large dinner party in honor of Miss Montague and Mr. Tayloe, who is their nephew.

MR. AND MRS William Slaughter gave a buffet luncheon for the bride and bridegroom-to-be at their home, Athol, at The Plains yesterday. The 40 guests, who sat at small tables, included Mr. and Mrs. Frank C. Littleton, jr. (she was formerly Rasalie Montague, and will be matron of honor for her sister today), Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Pringle Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Hannahan, Mr. and Mrs. H. Gwynne Tayloe, Mrs. Joseph Hume, Mrs. Arthur Stoney, Miss Augusta Pipes, Mrs. Julian Roszel, Miss Janet Roszel, Miss Juliet Dulany, Miss Neville Atkinson, Miss Elizabeth Mayo Atkinson, Miss Detta Osborn, Richard Tayloe, William Kirkpatrick, Robert Turner, Mackenzie Tabb, J. J. Curley and Frank Raffo.

Mr. and Mrs. Gaither left immediately after the wedding for Williamsburg, where they will spend several days.

J. J. PRINGLE SMITH of Charleston, S. C., arrived yesterday in Middleburg, where he joined Mrs. Smith. They will attend the Tayloe-Montague wedding today. Mrs. Smith, who arrived in Virginia on Tuesday to stay with Mr. and Mrs. Montague, is being very much feted. She was formerly Miss Henningham Ellett, of Warrenton and Richmond, and is well known here. Miss Charlotte H. Noland gave a dinner party in her honor on Wednesday evening at her home, The Covert. Mr. and Mrs. Harry Frost entertained in honor of Mrs. Smith on Thursday afternoon and the same day she was a guest at a luncheon given by Mrs. Thomas Atkinson.

After attending the luncheon given by Mr. and Mrs. Slaughter yesterday Mrs. Smith motored to Warrenton to visit her cousins, Mrs. John Keith and Mrs. B. Lauriston Hardin.

THE FARMINGTON Hunt Horse Show, which began yesterday, is continuing today and all classes are well filled. Among those showing today are Mrs. Dorothy Lee, of Middleburg; Alex Calvert, of Warrenton, and George Benoit, of Fredericksburg. Mrs. Marshall Field, whose husband is attending the University of Virginia this year, is showing her two hunters, Sporty and Rockburn.

ATTENDING the show yesterday were Mr. and Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., Mr. and Mrs. Robert Schlesinger, Dr. and Mrs. J. P. Jones, Dr. and Mrs. W. B. White, Mr. and Mrs. Douglas McGregor, Mr. and Mrs. Randolph Catlin, Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Buckler, Mr. and Mrs. John Huggard, Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Perkins, Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Lee, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Haffner, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Warren, Mr. and Mrs. M. A. Cushman, Mr. and Mrs. R. D. York, Mr. and Mrs. Hollis Rinehart, Dr. and Mrs. Stephen H. Watts, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Rinehart, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Connor, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Renwick, Mr. and Mrs. Truman Dodson, Mrs. Murray Bocock, Mrs. Graham Harris and Thomas Craven.

Your Figure Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain

The Best Way to Hide Your Age Is to Keep a Youthful Appearance

SHYING AWAY from the subject of age is practically a reflex action with women. Probably with business women it is prompted by the instinct for self-preservation. And with housewives? Well, whose business is it, anyway?

At a meeting of several hundred women recently, I thought I would find out whether women generally are as opposed to broadcasting their age as they are individually. So I asked for a showing of hands by those who did not mind having this vital statistic known. To my surprise, more than half put up their hands! But when I asked them to shout it right out loud, there were only polite and amused giggles—until someone called out, "How about telling yours?" And there I was! I had to say 36 and I did mind! I prefer to think of myself as being in the early thirties.

Watch Appearances

Women can get away with cutting a few years off their ages and they are doing it. They know that a woman doesn't look old simply because she was born in a certain year, but because of the drastic change that takes place in the face, figure, posture and walk. By proper attention to these factors, they have discovered that the change can be decelerated and that any woman can look a convincing 5 years younger than she actually is.

To save your face, you must, first of all, learn to ease the tension. Outdoor exercise stimulates the circulation and helps to keep the skin well nourished and fresh looking, and it also helps you to relax and get your beauty sleep. Two other measures invaluable in hanging onto your youth are: Vigorous brushing of the hair for three minutes, night and morning, and keeping the skin scrupulously clean and well lubricated.

But your health is the big factor. Haven't you noticed that the women who stay young looking are the healthy ones? Many of them inherited strong constitutions, of course, but they have disciplined themselves. They get a fair amount of exercise and keep their weight about normal. Excess weight is unquestionably a health liability—and it is ageing. But the same is true of extreme underweight, which denotes a lack of reserve, and women who are too thin age rapidly.

Walk Is Important

A superb, erect posture makes you seem years younger than a stooped, slumped posture. But if you are to have a youthful posture, you must have high vitality—which means enough exercise and plenty of sleep. Your walk figures in the appearance of age, too. If you walk with a disintegrated gait—toeing out, and jerking the knees in short, mincing steps—you walk as if you were old. You can have a youthful walk always: walk as tall as possible without rigidity, swing the legs from the hips, and point the toes straight ahead.

Brighten the Corner Where You Are

Here are suggestions for brightening that dreary little corner of living room or lounge. A cheerful winter atmosphere has been injected here by means of the striped Martha Washington chair at right—vivid in gold and mulberry damask. More brilliance is reflected by the handsome Martha Washington mirror whose proportions and golden eagle-topped border are authentically copied from an original Mount Vernon piece. The walnut Chippendale lowboy is a classic addition to any roo mjust putting on its winter underwear

National Furniture Week, which concludes today, has shown that the same colors used in women's dresses this fall are being sold in vividly upholstered pieces of occasional furniture. Women, in selecting hues to brighten their winter furnishings, have responded to brilliant raspberry, autumn gold, crushed grape, blue-green and plum tones for damask-covered chairs and hand-blocked draperies. Ruby tinted Bohemian glassware is a favorite accessory foil for these upholstery tones. Animated striped fabrics, revived from Victorian and Empire periods, have been eagerly sought by buyers who have taken advantage of Furniture Week specials and annual fall discounts

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay.

Glamour Girl

TAKING stock of yourself, you decide you will be a different woman this fall. The realization has suddenly come to you that you are a drab prosaic personality—no feminine magnetism, no allure. Why it's even a wonder you have held your husband—if you have held him—a marvel that your children are not ashamed of you!

Yes, you will get a lot of those things the magazine ads and the charm books tell about—a lot of bath salts, cologne and dusting powder . . . some really good perfume that will give you a subtle and lasting fragrance . . . a becoming—and slightly seductive hostess gown . . . and you'll go into sheerer stockings even if they don't wear as well . . . and you'll not try to make your permanent last another month, but get a new one right now . . . and you'll have a good bleach or two at the beauty parlor to liven up your skin . . . and you'll buy some of that throat cream the demonstrator at the cosmetic counter tried to sell you. All those little things won't cost a lot, and—well, even if they do, a woman's first duty is to herself.

YES, you'll just go downtown tomorrow and get everything . . . and maybe go to a beauty parlor—no the woman is coming to clean tomorrow. Oh yes, and you must do something right away about those curtains that went to pieces in the wash! Well, you'll simply have to buy new ones. There's no other way out . . . Oh, yes, and the sheets! You need at least four pairs of new sheets and pillow slips . . . And towels! Why there isn't a decent bath towel in the house! Why on earth does everything have to go to pieces at once?

Another thing, the rug in the dining room is wearing out. Well, it will have to wait awhile . . . but the vacuum cleaner must be fixed at once. It goes dead half of the time . . . . Oh, yes, and the sewing machine needs new cups . . . and there's those broken springs in the big leather chair . . . and something's got to be done about the upholstering on the couch.

THERE'S always so many things in the fall . . . the boys' bedroom with that splotch of ink on the wall, now that will have to be papered . . . and then there's that basement window that the baseball went through . . . oh, yes, and John said the yard hose had split. Well, that can just be put in the basement and fixed in the spring. But then there has to be new grass seed for the yard and new bulbs. And John said the chimney needed cleaning . . . and then there's that piece of guttering that's fallen down. Well, you'll just simply have to postpone the permanent . . . and the hostess gown. After all, if you get the face cream, and the bleaches, and the perfume and make yourself fascinating the rest won't matter so much.

One thing anyway, the boys have their shoes, suits and overcoats—still they need stockings . . . and underwear . . . and new caps . . . and they're simply crazy for a football. Well, you can probably manage that, since the best black dress you got last winter is as good as new. Still—it doesn't fit as well as it used to . . . and then there's that funny look about it you can't explain. Of course, you have your suit with the blue satin blouse. Still—that blouse looks sort of faded. It's odd how things change just hanging in the closet. However, you could still wear your green wool—if you could figure how some way to hide the moth holes.

WELL, it looks as if you'll just have to give up the bleaches and get a good all-purpose dress of some kind. But you'll surely get the face creams . . . and the perfume . . . and some real thin stockings, and a few little things like that. You'll add them right now to your shopping list. Oh, yes, and you must put down those things you have to get for John—socks, shirts, shorts, garters, shaving cream, hair tonic. And then there are all those linens, sheets and towels—say, this is going to run into real money! And the insurance is due next month. And the old car ought to be simonized. Well—it looks as if you'll have to postpone for awhile becoming a woman of allure. Now maybe around Christmas . . .

Mary Haworth's Mail

Low Physical Vitality, Not Enough Sleep, Wrong Clothing Cited as Causes of Shyness

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: On reading the letter of October 3 from "Mary," who suffers from extreme shyness, I wish to offer a suggestion or two based on my own experience and observation. I think very shy people frequently are somewhat lacking in physical vigor, and that shyness is a protective mechanism to conserve energy.

During my youth I was acutely diffident and would walk around the block, if necessary, to avoid meeting a friend; often got a sick headache at the prospect of going to a party, and generally came home from parties utterly discouraged. As I look back on my high school and college years, I realize that I was nearly always tired, seldom had enough sleep, usually lacked attractive clothes and generally felt myself to be uninteresting and clumsy.

Gradually, after graduation, I became more vigorous and more optimistic. I had enough energy to attempt more social contacts without feeling exhausted. Of course, the fact that I had to meet many people in my work and had something definite to discuss with each or to do for each, helped a great deal. Also, being away from home cut me off from dependence upon more socially gifted members of the family and forced me to stand on my own feet, socially.

A good many years have passed since I left school and today I have a number of delightful friends who are clever and interesting. While I am reasonably intelligent, I am not clever, and too slow on the uptake to contribute much to light, quick conversational exchange. But it is enough, apparently, to be a sympathetic and interested audience. I have learned, as hostess, to bring together people who interest each other, and to create a setting that is pleasant and informal.

However, even after these years of generally satisfactory social experience, I find that I tend to slide back into the seclusive pattern if I am very tired or not feeling well. And it seems to me that most of the very friendly and likeable people one meets are usually possessed of abundant vitality. There are exceptions; at least, persons who seem to lack physical vitality without being retiring, but they do possess intellectual and nervous vitality that triumphs over physical weakness.

My suggestion to "Mary" would be to consult a good doctor as to the possibility of building up her strength. Then I would suggest that she start building up her social life on home ground. Invite in three or four persons, who like each other, for tea or Sunday supper. A little book called "Corn Beef and Caviar" gives helpful hints, and so do such magazines as "Mademoiselle."

The shy hostess gains confidence when her hands and mind are busy seeing that plates and cups are filled, cigarettes passed, ash trays emptied, etc., etc. And when guests know and like each other, they keep the conversation flowing easily, and there are many interesting games to fall back on, always. When "Mary" gets her social bearings in her own home, she will find it easier to be a guest in other homes, with pleasure to herself and others. Very sincerely, M. T.

Anemic Individuals Shun Social Contacts

DEAR M. T.: Your point about low vitality being a factor in shyness is well taken. In popular medical writings, I have encountered the statement, more than once, that anemic individuals tend to shun social contacts. Perhaps, as you say, they just don't feel equal to the nervous strain of spirited conversation. Thank you for your sympathetic suggestions. M. H.

Man Calls Shyness An Hereditary Trait

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: In replying to the letter from "Mary," on October 3, you mention that some psychologist has said that acute self-consciousness may trace back to a frightening or mortifying childhood experience. Without disputing the truth of that, let me say that many of us are born shy, just as we are born with blonde hair or brown eyes, and that we inherited the one characteristic along with the other.

My father, my grandfather, an uncle and an aunt on my father's side of the family all were definitely self conscious—and so am I. Years ago, when catching sight of acquaintances on the street, I would wonder what they thought of me, of my bad marks of the day before in algebra (even when they didn't know I was studying algebra), of my having turned over a cup of coffee on the breakfast table the morning before, of the spot on my shirt, etc., etc., until by the time I came abreast of them I was ready to wilt in embarrassment at their feet, instead of speaking in a cordial, friendly way. Of course, I always managed to speak, but the ordeal was awful.

Finally, I took to forcing myself to study the other fellow. I looked him over, making mental notes; thinking, "What do I think of him? What is he doing on this street at this hour of day?" I would observe that one fellow had on a pin-stripe suit; that another wore brown herringbone; that this fellow's shoes were muddy; that another was wearing a fancy pointed toe. This lively scrutiny made a wonderful difference. I could look my friend straight in the eye and speak cordially when we came face to face.

My father said that one of his classmates in college once remarked, "Spratt, you think that you are the only fool in the world." A young preacher friend of mine told me, nearly 40 years ago, "Spratt, you are modest to a fault."

God made us according to different patterns . . . If there were not introverts and modest individuals, the human race might become entirely too cocky and insolent . . . There are many of us who just naturally turn our thoughts inward to our own shortcomings, instead of outward in search of faults in the other fellow, and this attitude is not invariably caused by a subconscious sense of shame. Of course, there may be such instances, and such may need psychological help.

In the case of "Mary," however, I would suggest as a remedy the device which I followed—namely, factoring or dividing the object feared. By studying the other fellow, his clothing, features, mannerisms, etc.; by analyzing her reaction to him, she can retain her self-possession. Also, she ought to spend time and money on her hair, complexion and clothes. She should learn to dance excellently, and at her age, she should be a first-class "jitterbug" as well as a good waltzer. The dance is the best university in which to prepare for social life. "Mary" should build herself a fortress of approbation about her own person. Yours truly, Z. S.

Improve Your Incorrect Speech

"GOING SOMEWHERES with shim again—and she always turns me down!" Is his employer's pretty daughter a snob, wonders her unsuccessful suitor.

A wrong idea, as may be guessed from that bad English blunder—SOMEWHERES for SOMEWHERE. A girl may admire a man's fine qualities but feel embarrassed to go out with him if his speech doesn't measure up to hers. And she realizes how poor English may handicap him in business!

To be sure, he might not blast her ears with "I AIN'T . . . I DON'T NEVER go." He may say correctly, "I AM NOT . . . I NEVER go." But "pretty good" speech is not enough.

Educated people in social and business life notice the less glaring errors, too—"There is a PARTY waiting . . . MOST all the crowd is there . . . It's NOTHING LIKE as lively as it was." Right usage must be followed, "There's a PERSON waiting . . . ALMOST all the crowd . . . It's NOT NEARLY so lively."

Club women, too, realize how important good speech is. Their prestige would be lowered if they made such slips as "Between you and I . . . Everyone has THEIR own ideas." No one takes greater pains than they to use correct forms, "Between you and Me . . . Everyone has HIS own ideas."

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes

War Makes Parisian Fashions of 1939 Seem a Bit Trivial

New York, Oct. 6.

A FEW DAYS ago our Fashion Group—consisting of some 600 women in or about that devious and interesting business—had its first big luncheon meeting of the fall. The speaker of the day was Mrs. Edna Woolman Chase, editor of one of the top-flight style magazines—and in her fascinating talk she took us back just 25 years ago—to an August when the happy, easy world fell into the pit of the first World War, and women's clothes became an item, a mere detail.

ALICE HUGHES

Mrs. Chase's talk was one of the finest we've ever had. She told us, with words and slides and photographs, just what went on in the high-style world of August, 1914. From the pages of her magazine, in that terrible month, I could see that the war then was resolutely pushed into the background, as though earth had not quite grasped its size and effects. We know better now—or at least, we are more self-conscience and conscious of the impending tragedies.

The speaker even told us of a minor fashion heroine of those troublous times—a lady named Mary Walls, who was present at the luncheon, and in 1914 was buyer for one of this town's best stores. Mrs. Chase told us how Mrs. Walls brought out the last new styles to leave Paris that August, and drove them by motor all the way to Cherbourg, where they were finally put aboard ship.

It was all intensely interesting—yet how trivial it all was and is in the light of what we know and what we face today. The tragedy is that our wars have come too close together. Most of us, of the slightly older school, remember the last one far too keenly. One of my brothers, for instance, was with the fifth Marines in France. Now, though our beloved country is at present at peace, we see mankind torn to shreds once more. In such a case, can anything be of less importance than the Paris styles of 1939? If so, you name it. I can't.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—With our town's traditional moving day just one week back, I can now report that it was the feeblest day of its kind in a good many years, by a good many thousand families. I suppose the reason is that we tend to dig in and wait developments this year, either for family or business reasons. And you'd be surprised at how many young folks went out to the fair for new ideas in home decoration—or maybe you wouldn't. Their favorites, on my checkup, were found in the Swedish and Polish buildings.

Remember Poland? . . . Remember Czecho-Slovakia? Remember Austria? . . . But I dread to think what else we may be trying to remember, even as this sees newsprint. . . .

Law, like art, is long. Why, only the other day Christine Hill, a model who used to appear in fine musical shows, got a chance to ask Judge Collins for $150,000 from a Fifth avenue hotel, charging negligence in that she tripped over a rubber door mat at the place and cut her face so badly she couldn't go on with her work. And this tragedy happened way back in March, 1936!

I actually know a neighbor across the hall from me! She is the newly married Mrs. Betty Henry, a pretty little girl who is the daughter of Fred Ferguson, a famous newspaperman. Of course, I didn't meet Betty after she became my neighbor. I've known her for some years. I could live in this igloo for 20 years and not meet a neighbor across the hall, except, perhaps, in case of fire, flood or raid. . . .

Moving Day in Manhattan Less Hectic Than Usual

AS A CHRONIC word-lover, I have always been fascinated by "syllabub," though I wasn't sure what it meant. Now I'm sure it's an old English drink made by putting a pint of cider and a glass of brandy into a bowl, adding some nutmeg and sugar, and then pouring in a pint of warm milk.

Dolls From Many Lands Exhibited

MRS. MacDONALD DOUGLASS, of Alexandria, won't change the labels on her Polish and Czecho-Slovakian dolls until she gets word from the State Department.

Even if Secretary Hull should recognize Germany's conquests, Mrs. Douglass isn't sure whether she will. She said this yesterday while displaying a rag doll, nine inches tall and dressed like a Polish peasant girl, one of 600 figures in a unique collection gathered through 30 years.

The collection started when Mrs. Douglass, who runs a private kindergarten in her home at 16 Washington terrace, attended an international teachers' conference in Europe.

"We were talking about what could be done for international friendship by teaching children the costumes and songs and dances of children in other countries," she related yesterday. Mrs. Douglass already owned about 50 dolls from various countries. When she came home she began to expand the collection, writing American consular officers for dolls in the authentic dress of foreign nations. Embassies and legations in Washington co-operated. Mrs. Douglass picked up dolls herself every time she went abroad.

SALLY FOWLER, 4812 WESTERN AVENUE, ADMIRES DOLL IN AUTHENTIC RUMANIAN COSTUME, A GIFT OF QUEEN MARIE OF RUMANIA

Four times a year Douglass School pupils, aged 2 to 5, are given a look at the entire collection. "During the rest of the year we take out the dolls of each particular country as the children take it up in their work," Mrs. Douglass said.

"These little people teach our children to love the children of other countries," she explained, "and to know that the other children love us, too." The idea hasn't yet affected the course of world politics, Mrs. Douglass admitted, "but we won't know about that until it has been tried in schools and churches in many countries."

Mrs. Douglass insists she has "no favorites" among her dolls and can tell a story to go with each of the 600. The Rumanian peasant girl on the second shelf was a gift from the late Queen Marie. The Mongolian lady, in silk dress and turquiose necklace, is dressed for the races—"they always wear their best clothes for the races."

A pair of savages was given by the Governor of French Equatorial Africa. It took three months to get them out to the coast by caravan and runner. The League of Catholic Women of Colombia sent the old mountaineer whose tiny cigar even shows a rosy ember at the tip.

O'Neal May Head District Funds Group

Suave Member From Louisville Weighs House Post Left By Ross Collins

Representative O'Neal, of Kentucky, has been asked to take the chairmanship of the District subcommittee of the House Appropriations Committee, it was learned yesterday, to fill the vacancy created by resignation of Representative Ross Collins, of Mississippi.

REP. O'NEAL

O'Neal, a suave Southern gentleman, has not said yes, and he hasn't said no, according to Chairman Taylor, who plans to confer with him upon his return to Washington next week.

A native of Louisville, which he now represents, O'Neal is thoroughly familiar with the problems of a metropolitan center and House leaders feel he would be able to restore a cordial relationship between the House and the citizens of Washington.

"A Thankless Job"

As a special inducement, Taylor said he offered O'Neal an extra clerk and permission to retain his place on two other sub-committees of the House Appropriations Committee.

"It's a thankless job, though, and I don't want to appoint someone arbitrarily," Taylor said.

"The job takes a lot of a man's time and yet does him no good either here or at home. In fact, it usually works against him in his own district because his constituents think he ought to devote that time to them."

Representative Mahon Refuses

O'Neal, who studied at Centre College, the University of Louisville and Yale, is a popular member of the House, noted for his genial manners and soft speech. A lawyer and business man, he has had considerable experience in civic affairs in Louisville. He has been in Congress since 1934.

In the World War, O'Neal served in the First Division of the A. E. F., and after his discharge became one of the first department commanders of the American Legion for Kentucky.

Following Collins' resignation last session, Representative Mahon, of Texas, was considered for the chairmanship because of his one-year experience on the subcommittee. He has flately refused the appointment, however.

Casey Held "a Spender"

Representative Casey, of Massachustts, is ranking member of the District sub-committee and appears to be the only member of the Appropriations Committee at present willing to assume the chairmanship. House leaders, however, do not want him to become a subcommittee chairman as he has a reputation as "a spender."

While District officials hoped for a while Collins would consent to resume the task of passing upon the city's expenditures for another year, the genial Mississippian is definitely through with District affairs.

He always considered the job "as bad as the itch," and last session's Senate-House battle over the United States lump sum payment was the last straw.

Capital Methodist Leaders Named Parley Delegates

Capital area Methodist leaders were chosen as delegates to next April's World Methodist Convention at Atlantic City, as the new Baltimore Conference of the Methodist Church closed its meeting yesterday in Baltimore. Others were elected to the board of trustees.

Dr. G. Ellis Williams, superintendent of the Washington district; Dr. H. W. Burgan, pastor of Hamline Church; Dr. Fred G. Holloway, president of Western Maryland College; Edgar C. Berry, former presiding elder of the local area of the old Southern Methodist Church; Leonard B. Smith and B. W. Weeks were named clerical delegates.

Elected lay representatives were D. Stewart Patterson, John H Baker, George W. Crabbe, William N. Dunn and Henry Gilligan.

Trustees will be Robert F. Stanton, Dr. E. C. Makosky and Dr. W. H. Best, one-year terms; Forrest Bramble, Dr. E. A. Sexsmith and E A. Lambert, two-year terms, and Dr. A. S. Day, F. Murray Benson and A. H. Dudley, three-year terms.

5,000 Autoists Face Ban on Cars After Oct. 16

Five thousand motorists will be deprived of use of their automobiles after October 16 if they do not submit their machines for inspection by that time, traffic department officials said yesterday.

At the same time, Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, instructed his men to "take the necessary action when cars are found without inspection certificates."

Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer notified the Commissioners that October 16 is the deadline for all cars bearing tag numbers from 160000 to 169000. Officials said they do not believe all the cars can be taken care of.

Fraser Gardner Pleads Not Guilty of Perjury

Langdon School's First Grade Holds Annual Animal Show

By Scott Hart

Undoubtedly, 6-year-old James Higdon went to bed last night still wondering why perfectly conventional dogs don't follow the conventional textbook manners. He possibly was somewhat disillusioned, too, that a faithful pet should make a trusting master miss the show.

James would not have missed the animal show the Langdon School first grade arranged, had anyone seen him standing dejectedly, with a contest placard on his chest and a long rope in his hand, just inside the playground gate. The show was over when someone noted his dejected eyes, his uncertain shuffling from one foot to another.

"He was going to meet me here," related James. And then it was quite apparent that James had told the dog to be on time for his registration. That he would win a prize of course was assumed. So James waited from 1 p. m. to 3 p. m., knowing that dogs in the primers always kept such engagements; and so trusting, missed the show, and the excitement.

There was a commotion, more than the first grade figured on, on the decision to see something of animals that had been listed over in the textbooks. In the first place, Roger Powell, 10, heard a wild barking and scrambling and saw his entry, Shirley, a brown rabbit, careening across the playground among the ponies and terrapins and alligators and wire-haired terriers, with a large dog clutching its stubby tail!

The preliminary confusion became confounded, and out of it Roger walked, carrying Shirley in his arms. Schoolmates helped him rub the rabbit's tail. One boy consoled him by saying, "Well I certainly haven't seen any old dogs win a prize." And then Roger fingered the red ribbon on Shirley's neck; the second prize as the funniest exhibit.

Close by, companionably perched Polly the parrot, with a blue ribbon on her neck, and her master, Jimmy Keating, 12, in attendance, saying over and over again: "She was judged the cleverest; she will say 'poor polly,' and 'give me a cracker.'" Then it appeared that a dog had won a prize because Susie Q., a thimble-sized terrier, owned by Phyllis Kettner, 6, was flaunting a first prize ribbon and frisking about. A monstrous police dog wore both a red and blue ribbon.

"He didn't win them here; he won them somewhere else. I just put them on him anyway," said the tiny girl, leading the big dog. And along trotted Carlton Shearer, 11, on Prince, a pony that took second prize as cleverest, while another pony, Nellie, no winner, was consoled in munching grass. A girl came up with a bowl of goldfish; Douglas Trippitoe, 10, exhibited his terrapins, Mike and Ike, Mike missing one foot.

A baby on the sidelines cried; children everywhere were laughing, calling to one another; the crippled children, assigned to the judging, were taking it with tremendous, wide-eyed seriousness; a few parents were crowding in; the dogs began barking; the parrot began squawking; the crying baby pitched on a shriller key and the principal, Miss Scrivener, overseeing the 400 children out for the first grade's animal party simply remarked that this was really "a lovely October day."

7,000 More Here Enrolled In Red Cross

Total for First Nine Days of Roll Call Stands at 30,750

More than 7,000 yesterday were enrolled in the Red Cross membership drive for the second consecutive day, General Chairman Edgar Morris announced. Total for the first nine days of the drive stands at 30,750.

While Government units continue to lead in total memberships secured, the general business division reported a 77 per cent increase yesterday to advance to second place among the Roll Call units. Chairman Charles E. Robinson said there were now 2,769 enrolled by the general business group. An increase of more than 1,000 enrollments was reported by the utilities group, headed by Dr. William McClellan.

Claude E. Hamilton, general counsel of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, reported four divisions of that agency enrolled 100 per cent. Other Government groups reporting 100 per cent membership yesterday were Inland Waterways Corporation, Export-Import Bank, and the office of the American Federation of Government Employes.

All local radio stations will feature two-minute broadcasts through the remainder of the drive, ending October 19. E. Barrett Prettyman, chairman of the Roll Call professional unit, will speak over WRC today at 7:01 p. m., and Edgar Morris, jr., on WOL at 10 p. m.

A supper meeting was held last night by Albert E. Rogers, headmaster of the Sidwell Friends School and chairman of the private school division of the professional group, for representatives of other private schools.

Conversation With the Lunts Is Neither Tame Nor Shrewish

Cab Affords Famed Theatrical Couple Place to Talk Over the War and Reminisce About Justice Frankfurter

Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne, if you hadn't guessed it already, make very good company in a taxi.

The handsome couple who are treading the National Theater stage this week—ably assisted by Will Shakespeare and the Theater Guild—were cornered yesterday at the National Press Club.

They had just emerged from a quick ceremony revolving around a Red Cross button and press photographer. Lunt, incidentally, had the presence of mind to sign and pay up for his membership as the party drifted away after the picture-taking.

Bound out Connecticut avenue for the Wardman Park Hotel, the Lunts touched lightly on box-office receipts, cab drivers, Justice Felix Frankfurter and—despite clear instruction to the contrary—the war. The idea of the interview, it was explained, was to get as far away as possible from the war.

"But that's impossible," protested Miss Fontanne. "I don't even bother to read newspaper theater pages any more."

One of the people the actress wanted to talk about was her good friend Jean Giradoux, the French playwright, now director of propaganda for France.

"He's so gentle it seems like a strange job for him," she said. "But then I don't think the British and French really need any propaganda anyway. Nothing the Germans could say would convince anybody. . . ."

Here Lunt, who tames his wife publicity once a day and twice on Wednesdays and Saturdays, took a firm hand, making it in an easy jump to the story about Mrs. Lunt and Justice Frankfurter. The actress had often asked the jurist, then a Howard professor, why different states and cities had to have so many different laws. The Lunts were playing "Idiot's Delight" shortly after one of these legal arguments and arrived in Omaha to find their performance banned by the mayor.

"Why, I'll telephone Frankfurter," Miss Fontanne said indignantly. "Amazing faith," is her husband's comment on the episode.

Miss Fontanne asked the cab driver the name of a park walk along the Potomac. "Je ne sais pas," said the driver, adding, "I knew who you were the minute you got in." Miss Fontanne, who was born in France, said she wished he would talk English "because my French is so bad."

The first couple of the American stage are delighted with Washington's response to their energetic revival of "The Taming of the Shrew." A series of sold out houses "is pretty good for an old war horse," said Lunt.

He was asked whether "old war horse" applied to play or actor. "You can take it either way," was his genial reply.

Ruling Forbids Apartments in Woodley Area

The Zoning Commission yesterday prevented any future building of apartment houses on a large tract of land near the Woodley Park Towers.

Following a heated debate Wednesday when residents in this vicinity urged the commission to extend the residential restricted zones to include various properties along Cortland place, Klingle road and Twenty-eighth street, the body issued a compromise decision.

The commission ordered a portion of the area, east of the west line of Twenty-eighth street to remain residential A without restrictions, but the portion of the land to the west was rezoned residential semi-restricted, which will prevent the building of apartment houses.

Citizens' Group Asks Addition For School

Randle Highlands Association Contends Building Is Inadequate

The Randle Highlands Citizens Association last night urged the Commissioners to make several important changes for the improvement of their section. The organization met in the Benjamin Orr School, Twenty-second and Prout streets southeast.

Enlargement or construction of a new building for Anacostia Junior High School was stressed. The citizens said that students are now forced to attend in two shifts.

Splitting of Precinct 11 also was advocated. It was pointed out that there were 151 felonies listed in the precinct in 1930 at a time when it was manned by six officers and 68 men. At the end of 1938, according to the association, there were 563 felonies listed for the year when Precinct 11 had six officers and 61 men on duty.

A public library was requested. Citizens reported that the only library for children is in the junior high school, and that it is so overcrowded that most of the children are forced to travel to the main library, a long distance from their homes.

The group declared that No. 19 engine house needs a new truck company. The present truck company is inadequate to deal with a large blaze, citizens said. Also requested was a traffic light at the intersection of Minnesota and Pennsylvania avenues and Twenty-fifth street.

Precinct Plan Rejected

The Commissioners have turned down Police Chief Brown's request for a new precinct in Benning, D. C., it was learned yesterday.

Included in his $3,600,000 in budget requests for 1941 was $36,500 for construction of a new precinct at Forty-second street and Benning road.

Man, Woman 2 Boys Hurt in Traffic Mishaps

Frank Holmes, 42, of 1904 B street northeast, was treated at Casualty Hospital for shock and hip injuries yesterday after he was struck by a car backing out of B street into Nineteenth street northeast. The driver, Frank D. Smoot, 21, of Brandywine, Md., was charged by police with backing without due caution.

Showered by glass from a lamp post hit by a truck at Fifth and K streets northwest, Mary Dodge, 55, of 27 Quincy street, Chevy Chase, Md., was treated at Emergency Hospital for lacerations of the scalp and right hand.

Earl Pierce, colored, 10, of 1731 Willard street northwest, was hit by a car at Swann and Eighteenth streets northwest, and treated for a compound fracture of the leg at Emergency Hospital.

Trying to jump on a dairy truck in the 1700 block of G street southeast, Arthur Jones, 9, colored, of 732 Ninth street southeast, fell under a rear wheel. He was treated at Casualty Hospital for possible fracture and bruises of an elbow.

Capital Chest Unit Opens Headquarters

White House Tea Excites Miss 'Mollie'

Maryland Postmaster For 62 Years Will Meet First Lady

By the Associated Press

Oxford, Md., Oct. 6.—Miss Mary Stewart, the Nation's longest-serving postmaster, laid out her "rather plain" dress-up frock today, and admitted she is excited at the prospect of meeting the President's wife—and maybe the President—next week.

"Miss Mollie," at 82, has been Oxford's postmaster for 62 years and will reach the climax of her career next Thursday when she serves on the reception committee at a White House tea for visting ladies of the National Postmasters' Association convention.

Miss Mollie succeeded her father—who was appointed by Abraham Lincoln—as postmaster. She has served under 13 Presidents.

The most homely touches that Miss Mollie has brought to the postoffice have endeared her to the community. For years she used to leave a piece of candy in the postboxes of those who received no mail. But the number of "clients" became so great she stopped the practice, reluctantly.

Chinese to Celebrate

Colorful ceremonies, including a parade and mass meeting in Chinatown, will mark tomorrow's celebration of independence day.

Dr. Chang-Lok-Chen, Counsellor of the Chinese Embassy, will address the meeting at 2 p. m. in the Chinese Salvation Association Building, on H street between Sixth and Seventh streets northwest. The parade will start at 3 p. m.

While the anniversary date falls officially on next Tuesday, it was deemed advisable to hold the formal observance tomorrow. Sing Lee is chairman of arrangements.

A Permanent Robbery

Mrs. Jennie Varoutsos, operator of a beauty shop in the 900 block of F street northwest, sat in her shop later than usual last night while the third new lock was installed. Her beauty parlor has been robbed six times in the past month, three times within the past week.

Early in the week, $2.15 was stolen from the cash register. Mrs. Varoutsos then installed a new lock. The next night 35 cents was taken. Then Mrs. Varoutsos planted $2.17 in the till. The following morning two cents remained.

'Blues' Beaten In Last Battle At Fort Meade

Third Cavalry Flanks 'Blacks,' However, In Maneuvers

Fort George G. Meade, Md., Oct 6 (AP).—Four thousand Third Corps Area troops fought the last "battle" of their week-long mimic warfare here at dawn today, with a superior "black" force—heavily mechanized—beating off an attack of infantry and cavalry.

The final phase of the maneuvers was hampered somewhat by a heavy morning fog which grounded all planes, but officers reported that "in spite of weather conditions, all units conducted themselves well."

The Third Cavalry, from Fort Myer, a part of the attacking "blue" force, successfully completed an encircling movement by riding around the fort, dismounting, and attacking on foot from the rear.

"Black" troops made good progress, umpires said, until the "blues" counter-attacked with tanks, halting the assault and the battle.

Until last night, the "blues" were the attacking force, while the stronger "black" force defended the reservation.

Jess Wiley Hangs Self in Fairfax

Jess Wiley, 58, a farmer, was found hanging from the rafter of an outbuilding at his home between Vienna and Andrew Chapel yesterday morning. A verdict of suicide was returned by Fairfax County Coroner Dr. C. A. Ransom.

Neighbors said Wiley had been brooding over the sale of his parents' homestead, where he was born.

His body was found by his wife, Mrs. Hattie Wiley, who searched for him after he failed to return from early morning chores. Besides his widow, those surviving are two sons, John Wiley, of Washington, and Nolan Wiley, of Tyson's Corner, and four daughters.

Carmody Hits Story On Ouster

Gen. Johnson's Relative Not Laid Off Over Article, Says FWA Chief

John M. Carmody, administrator of the new Federal Works Agency, last night rose at a meeting of the Society for Personnel Administration to denounce as "a cruel lie" a published inference that Carmody had furloughed a relative of Gen. Hugh S. Johnson because Johnson had attacked Carmody in print.

Carmody cited an article in which it was asserted that Maj. Covington G. Kilbourne, Gen. Johnson's brother-in-law, had been "eased out" of his job in the FWA. The story said that Johnson had been one of the first journalists to attack Carmody in his new job, and that Secretary Ickes, for whom Kilbourne worked before the reorganization order transferred the agency to Carmody's control also had been attacked by Johnson but had never dropped his relative from the pay roll.

The administrator said he never heard of Kilbourne, and that he knew nothing of the case other than it had been one of the routine furloughs now being carried out in PWA.

Carmody's remarks, made from the audience, came at the conclusion of a panel discussion on personnel administration during which William H. McReynolds, the President's assistant on personnel matters and one of the speakers, revealed that a new function had been set up in the Civil Service Commission to handle all cases of citizens making bona fide offers of their services to the Government.

He said that in the past there had been many offers by individuals to work for the Federal service, of which "about 80 per cent were merely people looking for jobs." The remainder, he said, were legitimate, and in the future such offers to any agency would be referred to the commission, which would give the information to all other agencies which might want to take advantage of the offers.

In a discussion between the other two panel members, Frederick M. Davenport, chairman of the Council of Personnel Administration, and Arthur S. Flemming, Civil Service Commissioner, the latter delivered a veiled lecture to the Government's personnel officers, almost all of whom were present.

Dumas Drama Holds Screen At the Palace

'Man in Iron Mask' Brings Back Musketeers And Kingly Twins

"THE MAN IN THE IRON MASK," United Artists picturization of the Alexander Dumas novel, adapted to the screen by George Bruce and produced by Edward Small, with Louis Hayward, Joan Bennett, Warren William, Joseph Schildkraut, Alan Hale, Miles Mander, Bert Roach, Walter Kingsford, Marian Martin, Montagu Love, Doris Kenyon, Albert Dekker, William Royle, Fred Cavens, Boyd Irwin, Howard Brooks and Ian Maclaren. Directed by James Whale. Reviewed Friday afternoon. At the Palace Theater.

Dumas to the ultimate sneer and saber-rattle is "The Man in the Iron Mask," which makes the Palace's new film, adapted from the Alexander Dumas story, quite as it should be.

For what would the untiring Frenchman be without his black-hearted villains clothed in the armor of nobility, his clashing swords, his panoply of action and his pure-hearted soul whose only passion is for La Belle France? Producer Edward Small has followed a technique similar to the one he employed for the adventuresome "Count of Monte Cristo" several years ago, going under the assumption that Dumas fanciers like their stimulant neat. The film is Dumas throughout and while it is no "Monte Cristo," it is a resplendent and vigorous adventure, admirably cast.

Louis Hayward is two people. One Louis Hayward is a despicable and fleshly King of France, the 20-year-old Louis XIV. The other Mr. H. is a sturdy young Gascon with a proper nineteenth-century love of the common people.

Of course, the master adventure-writer makes no secret of the fact that they are twins, although Actor Hayward succeeds admirably in making them two separate, though similar looking, seventeenth-century gallants. With much expert help from a versatile lower lip and not too much trickery of the camera, Mr. Hayward's dual role is worth watching carefully.

The Three Musketeers

Those valiant fellows, Athos, Aramis, Porthos and d'Artagnan, are very much their accustomed selves and in their middle age are well treated by Bert Roach, Miles Mander, Alan Hale and Warren William, respectively. Mr. William's d'Artagnan is particularly able.

Naturally, twin sons as heir to the throne of France is an unthinkable thought. So, as Fate would have it, the good son is sneaked away, which leaves the way open for villainous Joseph Schildkraut to advance himself and for that old discussion about heredity versus environment to raise its troublesome brow.

For evil Mr. Schildkraut would be a test for the angels to bear. He it is who sees to it that the good man is threatened with the evil. He suggests the taxes on salt and wheat that so enrages the lowly Frenchmen. But he leaves to Louis XIV (the "I Am the State" Louis) to think up the ghastly iron mask, wherein to imprison his troublesome brother. The particularly choice advantage of this contraption is that the growth of the victim's beard will gradually strangle him to death.

Is Well Cast

Parisian sewers, sliding panels, wild dashes on horseback, an interrupted wedding, wrecked and tortured bodies, the terror of the Bastile, a handful of ingenious escapes from the inescapable—all these and more have their proper place.

Besides the excellence of Hayward and William, there are robust characterizations from Schildkraut, as an ambitious courtier; Walter Kingsford, as an honest supporter of the Musketeers, and Marian Martin, as the tart of the royal establishment, Mlle. de la Valliere. Joan Bennett is patently swamped by her stock lines and situations, but her Maria Theresa is no frump to watch. The Palace short subjects are on the right side. For humor there is Robert Benchley's "How to Eat;" for the football-minded Pete Smith has brought out a new "Specialty" on 1938's pigskin season.

"The News of the Day" completes a bill that is generously lardered with virility and variety.

RICHARD L. COE.

Metropolitan

If one good story is a good thing for a movie, then half a dozen tried and true yarns are better. On this logical principle it seems that "The Man They Could Not Hang" has been confected. The result is a well-spiced plum pudding of horrors doused with a sauce of surrealistic science.

Here are some of the interlocking yarns that go to make up this latest Boris Karloff vehicle for giving audiences the best jim-jams. (1) The story of the man who could not be hung. A sure-fire fable always bobbing up in the Sunday supplements. (2) The story of the unjustly convicted man who prophesies their doom accurately to an unjust judge, jury and prosecuting attorney. (3) The story of the scientist who seeks the riddle of eternal life, only to perish by his own invention. (4) The story of the revenger, who gets his enemies together and picks them off one by one. (5) The story of the father who kills his own daughter by accident when he is only trying to commit a little homicide entirely outside of the family circle. (6) The story of the worthy citizen whom persecution changes from an amiable Mickey Mouse to a rampaging Donald Duck. (7) The love story. But of course.

Karloff will again please all lovers of chills and screamie-meemies. He's really fine—very smooth, cold and powerful. In the earlier sequences his work is illumined by the pure light of scientific enthusiasm. He's invented an artificial heart (it looks something like Lindbergh's latest invention) and with the aid of this magnificent gadget, he proposes to kill people before operating upon them, bring them to life later after he'd performed elaborate and hitherto impossible operations.

When the possibilities of his great invention are nullified by human stupidity and treachery, Karloff goes into his villain pattern. Raised from the dead after hanging, by the secret use of his own device, he proceeds to pick off his former tormentors like a fox foraying in a chicken roost.

While all of the supporting players do neat jobs of acting, Karloff is the whole show. Some special posies are due to Roger Pryor, as a detestable district attorney; to Robert Wilcox, as a handsom and nosey reporter. MARY HARRIS.

'Honeymoon in Bali' Spreads Joy at the Earle; Spitalny Orchestra Outshines the Capitol Film

Exceptional Cast Excels in Lively Comedy-Romance; 'Roxyettes' Birthday'

"HONEYMOON IN BALI," Paramount picturization of a screen play by Virginia Van Upp, based on stories by Grace Mason and Katharine Brush, co-starring Madeleine Carroll, Fred MacMurray and Allan Jones, with Akim Tamiroff, Helen Broderick, Osa Massen, tiny Carolyn Lee, Astrid Allwyn, Georgia Caine, John Qualen, Fritzi Brunette, William P. Davidson and Bennie Bartlett. Directed by Edward H. Griffith. Previewed Wednesday, October 4. At the Earle Theater.

Taking its place among the few screen comedy-romances that have achieved a happy coalition of visual as well as auricular elements of distinction, "Honeymoon in Bali" assumes possession of both the screen and the susceptibilities of discerning audiences at the Earle Theater this week.

BELL

It is a brisk, breezy, slightly risque and opulently "smart" exhibit that is played up to its shining hilt by a cast of more than ordinarily deft selection. It reveals new facets of the generous talents of old favorite players, while disclosing unexpected virtues in the abilities of newcomers to roles of prominence who have been too modestly acclaimed by the usually alert publicists. It moves swiftly and altogether deserves a high place in the hit column.

The story, perhaps, cannot do with too rigid an examination of its logic and complete plausibility—the principals dash back and forth between New York and Bali, as if Bali were Coney Island—but it does have point, something of substantial body and an unfailingly intelligent appeal that effectually obscures the lack of those qualities that might reasonably be insisted upon by the relentless realist.

Love Rears Ugly Head

It all has to do with the domestic problems of a successful young woman, whose business acumen and romantic independence have placed her at the head of a flourishing department store of the swankier sort on Fifth avenue. On a luncheon hour, during which she was not hungary, she met a brash and equally independent young visitor just up from the isle of tropic splendor and overrated young women, who has his own ideas concerning the proper relation of the sexes. He barges in unceremoniously upon a tentative engagement between Gail Allen and her opera-star lover, Eric Sinclair, and won't take "no" for an answer. That is, he thinks he won't until a former love from Bali, one effervescent Noel Van Ness, pops up in New York and begins where she had left off in her native heath. There is no particular point in recounting what happens after that, beyond the fact that it is all pretty sprightly and heavily sprinkled with laughs.

The chase gets under way with a short sprint to Nassau and then stretches itself out into more or less of a world tour, with Bali, as I have said, apparently as easily accessible to New Yorkers as the Pylon and Perisphere.

The three central characters in the fable have been intrusted to capable hands that prove especially competent in the field of comedy. Fred MacMurray has been over this route many times before, of course, but it comes as a bit of a revelation that Madeleine Carroll and Allan Jones also should be so delightfully proficient at this sort of thing. Miss Carroll is a comedienne as sparklingly brilliant as her blonde beauty; the recently neglected Mr. Jones, a facile defeatist who plays a lightly romantic role as well as he sings the too few selected arias scattered through the action for his vocal benefit.

Support Unfailingly Excellent

But the pre-eminently judicious selection of featured players does not end there. Helen Broderick has one of her made-to-order roles of incisively satirical wit, diminutive Carolyn Lee tosses off a baby part that is a honey, and Osa Massen, new to the celluloids, contributes a bit of other-womaning that ought to head her for the place Simone Simon once aspired to occupy. And Akim Tamiroff. One of the finest actors in Hollywood, Mr. Tamiroff appears as a window washer who has no more than two widely separated "bits" to do, but does them with such extraordinary skill as to make Tony a pretty important fellow. And so it goes.

The production is a sumptuous one and the photography such as to do it fullest justice. The lines occasionally throw off a little smoke, but in a thoroughly nice and refined way. If your sense of humor runs at all parallel to mine, you will love it. You ought to, regardless of that. The piece is a hit.

Stage Bill a Hit

So is the stage show contrived by Harry Anger as a "Roxyettes Birthday Party." Having completed a year of service at the Earle, the Roxyettes are rewarded by being permitted to risk their necks in snatches of all the most intricate routines they have brought to the Earle stage during the past 12 months. Adelaide Arden, mentor of the group, makes a solo appearance that makes plain why her charges are so proficient.

Others on the bill include the Virginians, that male singing sextet; Frakson, who takes the place of Gali-Gali, as a mystifying master of magic; Goodrich and Nelson, two gymnasts of the better sort, and Stanton and Curtis, in a baffling ventriloquial specialty that makes it extremely difficult to tell who is singing what.

The Paramount News rounds out a bill that is conspicuously and gayly top-hole.

'Duke's' Brother

William Henry, featured opposite Ellen Drew in "Geronimo," is a foster brother of "Duke" Kahanamoku, former champion swimmer. The Hawaiian was "adopted" by Henry's father during the 1924 Olympic games.

MADELEINE CARROLL,

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, Oct. 6.

SENATOR BORAH: When the neutrality bill votes are cast, Speaker Bankhead—for the second time in his career as Speaker of the House—will insist that his vote be registered even though there's no tie. Of course he'll support the President . . . Jim Farley: Two German refugees have submitted an unusual proposal, which your department now is considering. They want to buy the right to print advertising matter on the backs of all postage stamps . . . United States Comdr. Ed Flynn: The report in political circles here is that you plan to retire from your county leader's job shortly . . . Will Hays: The French Consul has asked the producers of the movie "The Maginot Line" to withdraw it now.

WOLLCOTT GIBBS: Life magazine thought it could match your superb Profile on Alexander Woollcott and started to prepare one. Alec heard of this, indirectly, and wrote to the editors: "Has it ever occurred to an editor that I might be a good source of material for an article about me?" . . . The editors therefore assigned Woollcott to writing the article about himself. The only conditions he imposed were that it must not be rewritten, nor rejected . . . "At that," said Alec, "I'm playing myself a dirty trick—because it'll be nastier than any of the others."

JIMMY ROOSEVELT: Harry Hopkins, your fellow patient at Mayo Clinic, is delighting his friends with his improvement. He's gained five pounds since he's back . . . District Attorney Dewey: Investigators have discovered that all the chambermaids, porters and bellhops who attended the jurors while they were locked up during the Jimmy Hines trial no longer are employed by the hotel . . . Joe DiMaggio: Tallulah Bankhead, the Giants' No. 1 rooter, is rooting for Cincinnati to win the series. "Otherwise," she explained, "my grandpappy, who was a colonel in the Civil War, would start revolving in his grave if a Bankhead ever was found rootin' for the Yanks."

HOWARD LINDSAY: June Walker, who now is appearing in "They Knew What They Wanted," won't permit her boy, John, to accept your offer to work in the play, "Life With Father." If he took the role, it would mean that he'd have to dye his hair red—and John doesn't like any one to mess with his hair . . . His mother went to Elizabeth Arden's, and took him along, because she had no place to leave him. She told one of the attendants to trim the back of John's hair, while he was waiting. The boy wouldn't permit her to touch his head and so he won't be in your play, but will be taught some discipline, instead. His mother's registered him with the Knickerbocker Greys.

FIFTH AVENUE ASSOCIATION: The swanky Colbert's will become a night spot. They're putting Russian entertainment into one of the rooms . . . Harpo Marx: Your brother, Groucho, saw the price list at the 21 Club yesterday, and then ordered 1 Lima Bean. The waiter brought it to him on a plate. Groucho sent it back—because it wasn't peeled . . . Donald Ogden Stewart: The Federal Writers Project isn't finished. Col. Brehon Somervell has done a good job in arranging to continue the project—in a new plan to be announced next week.

KATHARINE HEPBURN: The Cafe-Lounge management at the Savoy-Plaza says that if it had been anyone but you, they wouldn't have permitted a lady to come there, wearing trousers . . . Senator Key Pittman: If the cash-and-carry plan is approved and if England should start paying for its purchases by using some of the seven billions in credits it has here, the Securities & Exchange Commission is all prepared. The protective set-up was arranged a month ago. . . . Kenneth Simpson: The very social Mrs. Preston Davies, who opposes you in the Republican ranks, soon will announce her candidacy for the city council. She'll campaign for "one-vote-from-each-house."

JIMMY WALKER: While you were singing "Will You Love Me in December . . .?" from the Carnegie Hall stage last night at the ASCAP Festival the man who accompanied you from the box was Fiorello La Guardia—whom you later introduced as "the greatest Mayor New York ever had" . . . Special Prosecutor Amen: If Judge O'Dwyer is elected District Attorney in Brooklyn, your work will have to be finished before December 31—because then he'll take over . . . O'Dwyer, incidentally, states that a substantial part of his staff will be assigned to a Crime Prevention Bureau—and that he'll reorganize the Adolescents Court, to include defendants up to 20 years of age . . . Harvey D. Gibson: The G-men this week picked up a Canadian boy working in the Fair's amusement sector.

'Hour of Charm' Feminine Orchestra Dominates a Feeble Screen Feature

"HERE I AM A STRANGER," Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of a story by Arthur M. Hillman, adapted to the screen by Milton Sperling and Sam Hellman, starring Richard Greene and Richard Dix, with Brenda Joyce, Roland Young, Gladys George, Katharine Aldridge, Russell Gleason, George Zucco, Edward Norris, Henry Kolker, Richard Bond, Robert Shaw, Robert Kellard, Charles Wilson and Minor Watson. Directed by Roy Del Ruth. Reviewed Friday morning. At Loew's Capitol Theater.

The most impressive portion of the new week's bill at Loew's Capitol Theater is provided by Phil Spitalny and his "Hour of Charm" all-feminine orchestra. Not only is this the foremost organization of its gender in the contemporary theater; it is an essemble of versatile musicians and specialists that can rather more than hold its own with any instrumental and vocal combination of either sex, or any degree of earned distinction, now appearing before the public.

Famous on the air as well as upon the stage, the Spitalny group possesses the rare gift of mastery of both the classics of standard music and the crazy rhythms of modern swing. It merges the finished musicianship of a schooled symphony with the wild abandon of a rug-cutting jam session and punctuates its concerted numbers with solo, trio, glee, sextet and comic interludes that comprise a program of great variety and uniform excellence.

Program of Wide Variety

Yesterday's first program was introduced by the orchestra's interpretation of Concert-Mistress Evelyn's brilliant arrangement of Liszt's Second Hugarian Rhapsody. The second number swung to the opposite pole of musical effort and raised the temperature of the Capitol almost to the boiling point, it was that "hot." Reverting later to the more dignified and austere in musical expression, Schubert's "Ave Maria" was impressively played and effectively sung by the "All-American Glee Club," led by the deep-throated Maxine, featured vocalist with the orchestra these many seasons—a considerable departure from her earlier "It Ain't What You Do, It's the Way You Do It" and no less a hit.

Evelyn's "magic violin"—and it is just about that—won immediate appreciation in "Yo and the Night and the Music" and a special arrangement of "Deep Purple," disclosing the full beauty of the "singing strings" of a violin sextet.

The Three Little Words go completely comic on this visit, subordinating the cleverness of their close harmonies to the humor of tricky lyrics, and additional enlivenment on the gay side is contributed by Marian McLenahan, a distaff drummer, who is surely the Gene Krupa of her sex. June Lorraine's character impressions of Lionel Barrymore, Charles Laughton and Bette Davis are clear-cut cameos that won an ovation. His superlative skill as a Paul Draperish sort of tap dancer can be the only excuse for introducing a male artist into so competent an ensemble of feminine charm and capability. Or perhaps it is that Maestro Spitalny gets lonesome!

A Stranger to Many Things

"Here I Am a Stranger," the Twentieth Century-Fox screen feature of the entertainment, seems to be a stranger to all of the qualities of authenticity and finesse that make the Spitalny aggregation great. It is a minor item of motion picture endeavor in which a splendid cast finds itself tightly shackled by the mediocrity of the material with which it has been supplied.

The story has to do with a drunken newspaperman—wouldn't you know?—whose wife and baby desert him until, 20 years later, when the son is in college and circumstances bring about a situation in which another test of filial devotion and the power of penniless honor to triumph over the opulent evil of great wealth is undertaken and lifetimes of mental and moral habits are discarded, just like that. The charade is marred by both inferior writing and twisted psychology. Even so, it has its moments—some amusing, some mildly romantic, some exciting, but none so believable and convincing as it should be.

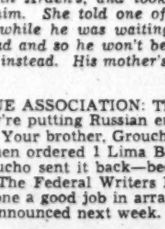
Richard Greene, Richard Dix, Gladys George and Brenda Joyce assume the pivotal roles, with Roland Young, Russell Gleason, George Zucco, Henry Kolker and a considerable number of others rendering such aid as the script will permit.

An interesting "Sport Review," having to do with the stiff regime under which jockeys live and labor on the major tracks of the country, and a new issue of the Fox Movietone News complete a bill that is preponderantly Mr. Spitalny's and his girls'.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., Oct. 6—You can see from our ten top money-ranking pictures released during 1939, with each costing over half a million, that we must have variety and plenty of it. They ranged from "Jesse James," which did 182 per cent, to "The Women" doing 144 per cent, and include "Gunga Din," "Dodge City," "Union Pacific," "The Rains Came," "Goodbye Mr. Chips," "Wizard of Oz," "Stanley and Livingstone" and "Kentucky." You'll notice that only one on this list had an all-English cast; that was "Goodbye Mr. Chips." The rest dealt mostly with America, its people, its manners and things we understand.



HOPPER

Thanks to Mack Grey, George Raft's eye healed without stitches. Mack nearly lost his job. Mack, whom we call "the Killer," has taken care of so many pugs, he insisted upon taping George's eye, and it's healed without a scar. Now he's "Doctor Killer Grey." Don't believe it when they tell you all is over between Raft and Virginia Pine. Her little girl adores him, calls him "daddy."

Eight-year-old Verna Lynch, daughter of still man Bert, at 20th Century, suffered serious burns while roasting hot dogs. Don Ameche and Al Jolson heard about her, and have been sending presents to the hospital and have planned a party for her on their set when she comes out.

You probably know Charlie Ruggles not only breeds dogs, but loves 'em. And he tells me New York is certainly not going to the dogs—they have more than any other State, California second, Pennsylvania third, and Massachusetts fourth.

If Galesburg, Ill., wants to keep our boys happy who went back to get background shots for "Dear Old Siwash," they'll have to begin wiring the golden leaves back on the trees. Winter's upon them and they're falling fast.

Nothing to that romance of Aiden Roark and Helen Wills. Remember last time Helen played in London? She was reported engaged to Capt. Victor Caslett, M. P. Aiden wired tennis club to find out when she was playing. And when Louis B. Mayer was spotted at Tennis with Frank Orsatti, a heckler back of me said: "He's bought everything else. Wonder what he'll offer for Lawn Tennis Association?" Sshh! Man! He was interested in Alice Marble, 'cause after she'd finished playing, he left.

Pays to travel. When Eddie Horton walked on Dave Butler's set, "That's Right, You're Wrong," they chatted for half an hour. They'd played together in stock 18 years ago. Horton continues his tour of "Springtime for Henry" because he found it's springtime for Eddie.

It happened in Beverly. A wrecking crew was tearing out the front of a home before moving it to a new location. Just then a local tour agency passed. One lady leaned over and said to her friend: "Gee—what a party they must have had there last night."

When studio wants Peter Lorre they call his valet, who calls his agent, who calls his doctor, who locates Lorre and he calls the studio.

Clark Gable, Ginger Rogers and Margaret Lindsay wrote their best wishes to Earl Carroll in blocks of cement, which will be used in the sidewalk in front of night club. They're stealing Sid Grauman's stuff from Chinese Theater.

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Oct. 6.—Ann Sheridan has had more publicity and less opportunity on the screen than any actress in Hollywood. She has been photographed with Congressmen, described as the gal all the New York eligibles want to date, and publicized from one end of the country to the other as "the oomph girl." But when you get right down to brass tacks, what has Ann accomplished on the screen? A few unimportant roles, with nothing outstanding up to date.

LOUELLA PARSONS

Maybe that's why Hal Wallis today took stock of her case and decided to give her the feminine lead with George Raft and John Garfield in "And It All Came True" This is the Louis Bromfield story adapted by Casey Robinson, and is destined to be one of Warner Brothers better pictures. Long with this announcement comes the word that Garfield will not go East this fall to do the stage play, "Heavenly Express," but will continue in Hollywood.

The foreign policies and precedents established when Benjamin Franklin was our first Ambassador to England are still a part of American diplomacy. That's why the life of Benjamin Franklin, with Spencer Tracy as the patriot-philosopher, would be exceedingly interesting right now, with international affairs what they are. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, at a meeting of its executives this week, decided the time was ripe for filming a drama of the American Revolution. Several possibilities were discussed, the biographies of Benedict Arnold and Alexander Hamilton among them, but the big bosses agreed that the biography of Benjamin Franklin is a better choice, and I think they're right.

Snapshots of Hollywood Collected at Random: Natalie Draper and Prince David Mdvani, Mae Murray's former, doing the night spots; Barbara Stanwyck's friends glad to know that she will be able to go home today. She severed a tendon in her wrist and lost a lot of blood when a window broke as she attempted to open it; congratulations to Paramount on their new publicity head, Clift Lewis, not only efficient, but popular with all the scribes; Jackie Cooper's mother, recovered from her nervous breakdown, will spend the winter in Palm Springs; Hollywood's most devoted couple, Jessica and Richard Barthelmess, sipping a cocktail all by their lonesomes and enjoying each other's company. Not bad after 10 years of married life; Buster Keaton celebrated his birthday and his appearance in "Hollywood Cavalcade" simultaneously. Heartwarming to see him so happy; Lillian Gish, Joe Weber and Lou Fields glimpsed at the "Hollywood Cavalcade" matinee enjoying every minute of it; William Dieterle is entertaining the whole cast and crew of "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" tomorrow night at Victor Hugo's.

Morton Downey joins his Barbara and the five little Downeys this Sunday. He opens at the grove here Tuesday night and a big turnout of his fans and friends is expected.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Junior Thompson Faces Gomez in Series Today

The Washington Post Sports

*X WASHINGTON: SATURDAY, OCTOBER 7, 1939 15

Spencer's 45-Foot Putt Wins P. G. A. Title

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

Cincinnati, Oct. 6.—The Reds are now in the same boat as the submarine commander given orders last week to sink the Lusitania. Winning the World Series after losing the first two games has been done before, but only once. A repeat performance in this case is a tough assignment.

POVICH

In 1921, the Giants lost the first two games to the Yankees and came on to win the series, but that was a best five-out-of-nine affair. What man has done man can do is a copybook saying, but the 38-year-old World Series history is distinctly against the Reds and, anyway, the Yankees don't believe in copybooks. They'd rather trust pitchers like Ruffing and Pearson and a few good solid knocks with their bats.

This is a poor time for the Reds to attempt to start beating the Yankees. The time to beat the Yankees was earlier in the week when the Yanks weren't hitting. On Wednesday and Thursday at Yankee Stadium the Reds missed the boat when they were unable to stir up more than one run for themselves.

What Will They Do if DiMag Starts Hitting?

It's no consolation to Cincinnati fans to appreciate the fact that the Yankees have been beating Our Boys without benefit of Joe DiMaggio's hitting. Shirley Temple may as well have been batting in the cleanup spot for the Yankees in the first two games as far as results obtained by DiMaggio are concerned. He didn't drive home a run or make any sort of a legitimate hit.

Gawd, what is going to happen to the Reds if DiMaggio does start hitting? That's something for Cincinnati fans to ponder. Der Mag can hardly be throttled much longer by any kind of pitching. He never has for long. On the day that DiMaggio does break loose in this series it will be a sad day for Cincinnati. Meanwhile the Yanks are doing very nicely without him, which is no flattering tribute to the Reds.

This World Series is high carnival for the ancient and carnivorous Order of Second Guessers, with Manager Bill McKechnie the subject of a swirl of afterthoughts. When McKechnie ordered Paul Derringer to pitch to Dickey in the opening game, when he continued to play slow-footed Wally Berger in leftfield, when his outfielders shaded Charley Keller too far to the right—all these things set up a veritable storm of second guessing.

Wolves Howling at McKechnie's Door Again

Now the wolves are howling again at McKechnie's announcement that he will not change the Reds' lineup for the third game tomorrow. It was expected that Wally Berger, whose throw to the wrong base caused the Reds the loss of the first game, and whose failure to reach Charley Keller's fly ball figured in the second game defeat, would be benched by McKechnie in favor of Lee Gamble or Al Simmons.

But McKechnie proved adamant and declared that he was stringing along with Berger "who was good enough to help us win the pennant." Whereupon the wolves are setting up the cry that this is no time for sentiment on the part of McKechnie, that a World Series is being played.

Fourteen years ago, in a hotel room in Washington, McKechnie also was the subject of demands that he change his line-up. His Pittsburgh Pirates were playing Washington in the series of 1925 and trailing three games to one. To McKechnie's hotel room on the eve of the fifth game went a pair of McKechnie's fellow National League managers. They pleaded, then insisted that McKechnie bench First Baseman Grantham in favor of Stuffy McInnis. They were John McGraw and Wilbert Robinson, and McKechnie took their advice. McInnins' fielding and hitting was a potent factor in the Pirates' ultimate victory.

Rookie Beats Durocher to Punch

A World Series off-day is story-telling time at press headquarters and Leo Durocher, manager of the Dodgers, held the stage today with his tale of Red Evans, spring pitching sensation of the Brooklyn camp. The eccentric Evans is best described as a screwball pitcher, and we don't mean that he pitched a screwball.

"I had to crack down on the whole club at one point last summer," Durocher was saying. "They weren't keeping early hours and I had an idea some of the boys were checking in the hotel at 11:30 and checking out at 11:35 for a bit more fun.

"I am sitting in our Boston hotel about midnight in the room that has the merry-go-round bar, that revolves at a speed of about an eighth of a mile an hour. As I am sitting there who do I see taking a ride on the bar with a beaker of beer in his hand but Red Evans.

"He saw me, too, but too late. I didn't say a word. I was going to let him have it in the clubhouse the next day. But the next day he beat me to it. That screwball walks up to me and says:

"'I know what you're gonna say, boss. You'll never catch me on that merry-go-round bar again. I'm through. Why should I pay 30 cents a glass for that stuff when I can get better beer for a dime across the street?"

On the Line

—With CONSIDINE

Cincinnati, Oct. 6.—Still smelling faintly of hospital antiseptic, Lefty Gomez will take the mound in Cincinnati tomorrow in a gallant effort to give the New York Yankees their third straight World Series victory over the Cincinnati Reds.

CONSIDINE

Never beaten by a National League club in a series career which dates back to 1932, Gomez will be opposed by the freshman star of the Reds' hurling staff, Gene Thompson.

The veteran Yankee southpaw emerged from a New York hospital last Monday after a week's treatment for a badly strained muscle in his side. It was not believed that Joe McCarthy would risk using him in the series, but the pitcher felt so good today that he asked for and got the assignment.

Dogged by a succession of sore arms, Gomez won 12 and lost 8 games for the Yanks during the season just closed. Thompson, possessor of a fast ball that reacts like a large Mexican jumping bean, won 13 and lost 5 for the Reds. The big, rangy righthander beat the Pittsburgh Pirates in the game that clinched it's first pennant in 20 years.

Though his team has gone through 18 innings with only six singles to its offensive credit, and scored only one run in the two games played, Bill McKechnie said today that he would make no changes in the Reds' line-up

McKechnie to Stick to His Guns

"They won the pennant, as they are," the mild-mannered pilot of the Reds told reporters, in a hectic press conference in the crowded lobby of the Netherlands-Plaza, "and I'll stick with this lineup right through the series. It's the best I've got."

The Cincinnati manager specifically defended his hitless leftfielder, Wally Berger, whose place in the outfield was rumored to be about to go to the veteran Al Simmons.

Cincinnati's rabid fandom welcomed the Reds back to town this morning with much the same air of a populace receiving a lately deceased hero. A crowd of 30,000 was at the station to meet the trains bearing the players, officials and reporters, and thousands of others lined the streets leading to the official hotel. There were cheers, but not the mild revelry which greeted the Reds when they clinched the pennant.

A gigantic pep rally at the city hall, at which Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia spoke, fell a trifle flat—particularly after the "Little Flower" mentioned stoutly that he expected the Yanks to "carry home the pennant."

There was a gasp of awe in the crowd as the faintly bored Yanks walked through the station's concourse to their taxicabs. A respectful path was cleared for them by the silent fans. However, when Lou Gehrig appeared, with Mrs. Gehrig at his side, a cheer filled the echoing depot.

Feels Day's Rest Best Tonic for Reds

Hitless for 12 consecutive innings, spread over the two games already played, the Reds nonetheless took no batting practice at Crosley Field today. McKechnie explained that a day's rest would be a good tonic for the badly battered team.

The Yanks, however, were out in the surprisingly hot sun by noon and wrung low whistles from the grounds keepers by belting countless drives over the left and centerfield walls. Joe DiMaggio, who had only two fluke hits in the series, took the longest workout of all, and wasn't satisfied until he hit one that cleared not only the leftfield wall but the street running parallel with it. The mighty poke landed on the roof of a four-story factory, opposite the fence.

Gomez hurt his side against the Browns, three weeks ago, then aggravated the injury badly against Washington. He walked off the mound in the middle of an inning against the Senators and was in the hospital a few days later. He had torn away certain muscular tissues from one of his ribs.

Lefty's place as a series pitcher was assigned to Oral Hildebrand, but today McCarthy decided to gamble on him—though it won't be much of a gamble if Lefty is "right." He holds the record of six straight World Series victories, against no defeats.

Wiffy Cox Defeated on Final Hole

Winner Scores 283 To Take Sectional Title at Columbia; Cox Cards 285

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Packing one of the greatest finishes in local tournament history into the last five holes including a 45-foot birdie putt on the final green, Cliff Spencer, the colorful clouter from Beaver Dam, won the Middle Atlantic P. G. A. championship yesterday at Columbia Country Club with a 283 total for the 72 holes.

Leader by six shots at the end of Thursday's twin rounds, Spencer watched his advantage dwindle to one before the steady charge of Congressional's Wiffy Cox, his playing partner, during the first 35 holes of the day. Then before a gallery of several hundred that gathered to see the finish, Spencer pulled the dramatic birdie for the sectional pro title, $400 first prize and a gold medal.

Cox Finishes Second

Spencer's total, only three over par for a course that played long and was stretched to its maximum distance, was from 9 to 10 shots over the predicted winning total, and six shots under the 289 score of Jim Barnes in the 1921 National Open at Columbia.

Cox was pushed back into second place with a 285 total, only five over par, and also a great four-round total for the championship layout. Spencer's rounds were 71, 67, 74, 71—283, and Cox finished with 70, 74, 72, 69—285. The Congressional mentor received $150 second money.

It was strictly a Spencer-Cox battle for the title and the remainder of the field in the most successful event ever staged by the association concentrated on third money in the final day's play. Ralph Beach,

Rich Belmont Futurity Will Be Run Today

By the Associated Press

New York, Oct. 6.—The 2-year-old turf championship comes down to the Widener straightaway at Belmont Park tomorrow with Bimelech and Andy K., outstanding candidates for the title, meeting five other juveniles in the $75,000 Futurity.

It's a small field for the country's richest 2-year-old race, won by Porter's Mite last year, but outside of Bimelech from E. R. Bradley's barn and the Millsdale Stable's Andy K. there apparently isn't much class among the juveniles.

Won Important Fixtures

Between them they have won the turf's most important fixtures for their age and if either has his nose in front at the end of the six and one-half furlongs he rightfully may be called the 2-year-old king of 1939. With the victory will go the rank of future book favorite for the 1940 Kentucky Derby despite the fact no Belmont Futurity winner ever went on to take the Blue Grass classic.

Andy K., son of Jack High which ran third in the 1928 running, won the Arlington Futurity, spread-eagled his field over the same track and distance in the Champagne Stakes a week ago and never has finished out of the money in eight starts. Early in the season he had the habit of bearing out, but Trainer P. F. Dwyer apparently has corrected that fault.

Bimelech, unbeaten in four races and an offspring of Bradley's great stallion, Black Toney, won the rich Hopeful at Saratoga, finishing a half-length in front of Andy K. Off that race alone he is likely to be the even-money favorite with Andy K. held at around 8 to 5.

The others are strictly outsiders. They are Marshall Field's Barnet, Mrs. C. S. Payson's Call to Colors, Ekwanok from the Twin Oaks Farm, John Hay Whitney's Calory and Walter M. Jeffords Rollo.

Supporting the Futurity will be the two miles of the $5,000 Jockey Club Gold Cup, a test of endurance that has attracted only three horses and one of them, W. V. McGrath's Shangay Lily is a 40-to-1 shot. The race figures to be a contest between Townsend B. Martin's Cravat and William Woodward's Isolater, with an invitation to the Pimlico Special on November 1 going to the winner.

Furman Upsets Favored Georgia Eleven, 20 to 0

Greenville, S. C., Oct. 6 (AP).—A stubborn Furman University football team upset the University of Georgia tonight before a crowd of 7,500 by blanking the Southeastern Conference club 20 to 0.

The Purple team drove hard for a second period touchdown, then converted Georgia's desperate aerials into two touchdowns in the final period.

W.-L. Upsets Western, 7-6

Washington-Lee High registered one of the major upsets of the local schoolboy season yesterday at Western Stadium when it defeated Western 7 to 6 before 1,500 spectators.

Once again as in last week's victory over Eastern it was a long run which won the game. Carl Coe a little second string backfield recruit took a pass from Bill Kirchner midway in the third period and raced 70 yards for the touchdown. Tommy Hoover whose educated toe has yet to miss an extra poinnt this year placed-kicked the point.

Western lost no time in taking the lead scoring on a beautifully executed lateral pass play three minutes after the opening kickoff. Hilleary ran 15 yards to midfield on the Raiders' first offensive play and then got off a brilliant kick which

Tech Beaten, 7-0, in Upset

As inept a defense and as sporadic an offense as schoolboy football in Washington has ever claimed yesterday lost the inaugural game of the 1939 interhigh series for McKinley High, Anacostia's outweighed and inexperienced Indians romping to a 7-0 victory on Eastern gridiron.

It was the second consecutive year the lads from the "flats" have toppled favored Tech—Anacostia has been in the interhigh struggle only two years. About 1,500 wildly cheering schoolboy fans watched the spectacular battle that Anacostia had every right to win.

Tech's chief consolation came from the efforts of its lanky quarterback, Don Cockrille, who ripped

Northwestern, Okla. Top Grid Slate Today

Bill De Correvont to Face Sooners' Jack Jacobs; 65,000 to See St. Mary's Play California; All Big Teams in Action

By Bill Boni.

Associated Press Sports Writer.

New York Oct. 6.—The World Series in two games has produced rookie stars in Charley Keller and Chuck McCormick. Tomorrow football sends four standout sophomores into action and as luck and the schedule makers would have it pairs them off in two of the day's principal battles.

At Evanston Ill. it will be Northwestern against Oklahoma and Bill de Correvont against Jack Jacobs. At the Polo Grounds in New York, it will be Fordham and Blackie Blumenstock against Alabama and Jimmy Nelson.

All but De Correvont already have had their varsity baptism, Jacobs in Oklahoma's tie with Southern Methodist, Blumenstock and Nelson in warm-up games with Waynesburg and Howard, respectively. Therefore it will be De Correvont, the most highly-touted schoolboy player ever, who will draw most of the attention—and, according to reports from the Northwestern camp, the 185-pound halfback is ready to live up to his advance notices.

St. Mary's vs. California

By tomorrow night, all of the country's top teams, including the members of the Big Three, the "Ivy League" and the more formal conferences, will have played at least one game. Peak crowd of the day, 65,000, is due at Berkeley, Calif., for California's battle with St. Mary's, the "big" game for the West; 40,000 each are expected at Northwesten-Oklahoma and Fordham-Alabama; Tulane's clash with Auburn should be the South's chief battle, and the Texas Christian-Arkansas conference game is tops in the Southwest.

Here are this corner's predictions (probable attendance in parentheses):

Northwestern - Oklahoma (40,000) Northwestern, which appears better-manned all along the line (and that includes the backfield).

Fordham - Alabama (40,000) — 'Bama's linemen are big and Fordham's backs are fast. Disregarding mental warnings about the tortoise and the hare, Fordham in what should be a close one.

California-St. Mary's (65,000)— The Golden Bears, toppled by the College of the Pacific (or un-Pacific), were expected to be high up in the Coast Conference race.

Double-Header Slated Today At Stadium

Georgetown will be seeking its tenth straight victory in a great streak begun in 1937 and George Washington will start out to improve on the success of a mediocre 1938 season at Griffith Stadium today when they collaborate to stage the first football double-header ever to startle natives in these parts.

The Hoyas, playing the first game at 1:30, will rule a prohibitive choice to chalk up their second triumph of the campaign by beating weak but willing Roanoke, even though their reserves will bear the brunt of action. Approximately two hours later Bill Reinhart's Colonials will be unveiled against Davis and Elkins, which brings a traditionally heavy and stubborn eleven, but hardly one to upset G. W. plans for a successful opening.

The starting George Washington line-up still is unsettled as to the identity of its fullback and left halfback. Their choice is expected to be determined by which team kicks and which receives. If George

Miami, Fla., Oct. 6 (AP).—Wake Forest's Galloping Tony Gallovich ran the University of Miami dizzy with a 89-yard dash and two other personal touchdowns as the Deacons swept to a 33-0 victory before a crowd of 20,100 tonight.

Yankees 8-5 To Beat Reds At Cincinnati

McCarthy Surprises Fans and Scribes by Starting Lefty, Who Has 'Injured' Back

By Shirley Povich.

A Staff Correspondent.

Cincinnati, Oct. 6.—They brought the World Series from Broadway to Main street today and Cincinnati folks are avidly awaiting tomorrow when Our Boys, the Reds, meet those big bad Yankees again.

But the confidence of the Cincinnati burghers in Our Boys' ability to beat the city slickers from New York is not shared by the betting fraternity which is giving the third World Series game a cold, impersonal stare and laying odds of 8 to 5 against the Reds.

Tonight, Cincinnati is virtually beseeching a tall, rookie righthander who is facing his World Series baptismal to do something about the growing Yankee menace that is threatening to make a shambles of the series. To blond Junior Thompson, sensational pitching figure in the Reds pennant drive, they are looking for deliverance and a fresh start for the Reds.

Thomson vs. Gomez

Junior Thompson vs. Lefty Gomez. That's the pitching program for the first game, putting the Reds' rookie against a seasoned veteran of the World Series wars who has never lost a game in six starts against National League pennant winners. Gomez was the surprise pitching selection announced tonight by Manager Joe McCarthy.

Counted out as World Series participant when he strained his side in Washington two weeks ago, Gomez as late as this morning was apparently on the sidelines. But today he insisted that he was able to pitch. Manager McCarthy watched him warm up in the Red park, was impressed with his delivery, and gave Gomez the assignment.

Cincinnati tumbled over itself today to make a rousing gesture of confidence in its slightly worn and twice-beaten heroes. There appeared to be nothing synthetic in the huge welcome extended the club on its return from New York. Fifteen thousand fans gathered at the station, thousands of others banked the line of march as the Reds were paraded to the City Hall, where they were greeted by Mayor James Garfield Stewart.

Striking Contrast

There were frenzied back-slaps for Our Boys, and a spontaneous outpouring of fans in striking contrast to blase New York's ripple-less reception to the World Series. The team that had won Cincinnati's first pennant in 20 years was serenaded and toasted. The city courts recessed for the parade.

If there was an undercurrent of misgiving about the Reds' ultimate fate in this World Series, it was unnoticeable despite the fact that only one team in history—the New York Giants of 1921—ever won a World Series after losing the first two games, as have the Reds. Our Boys could lick the Yankees yet.

The New York club appropriated the day's lull in the series by staging a batting workout at Crosley Field. Joe DiMaggio, in an amazing batting slump, with

W. L. Brann's Yarnith Is Beaten Out

Loses by Neck in Fish Day Event; Winner Pays Backers $27.10; D. C. Horse Wins

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent.

Laurel, Md., Oct. 6.—Two-year-old fillies, 10 of them, held the spotlight on the Fish Day program and out of the pack came Fairy Chant, owned by Willie duPont's Foxcatcher Farm, to take down the chief money. Carrying top weight of 119 pounds and ridden by Jockey Maurice Peters, Fairy Chant had to show all her speed and courage in the closing stages to stave off W. L. Brann's Yarnith, a stablemate of the mighty Challedon. The daughter of Challenger II lost the decision by a neck margin. Two lengths farther back came George D. Widener's Thorn Apple.

The Kilmer entry of Sun Mixa and Sun Gamonia drew much of the wagering but this pair could not get in the money picture as Fairy Chant supplied her backers with a juicy $27.10 mutuel. The winner was clocked the six furlongs in 1:13.

Fairy Chant and Yarnith did not take part in the struggle for early pacemaking honors. Flying Jane and Annie Alone burned most of the early oil accompanied by Thorn Apple. Fairy Chant made her move first and got to the front in midstretch. Peters never stopped driving, however, and it is well that he didn't for Yarnith was wearing down the leader at the close.

The first steeplechase of the meeting resulted in a Washington victory when the colors of T. T. Mott, of the Capital City were borns to triumph by Prattler, a veteran gelding trained by Miss Judy Johnson. Prattler was practically left at the post but circled his rivals when ready and went on to win in rather easy fashion, under a good ride by Jockey Penrod. Spinach, now 12 years old, was second, with Redshank third in a field of seven. Two horses fell. Sea Ted piled up at the ninth fence and Valpuisseaux tripped and stumbled over him.

A payoff of $27.80 came in the daily double. After Granicus won the first race, Tuleyries Lin, an old half-mile friend, completed the transaction in the third race.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GRANICUS, $9.00, $3.90, $3.30; FLYING SILVER, $3.60, $2.80; WALTER LIGHT, $13.40.

GRANICUS came up on outside of leaders at turn, took command nicely and held away thereafter under pressure. FLYING SILVER, off alertly, disposed of CHIEF COUNSEL at stretch and WALTER LIGHT, but could not reach winner. WALTER LIGHT raced wide into stretch and held on stubbornly nearing end.

SECOND RACE—About 2 miles. Purse, $1,000; steeplechase, claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start bad. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 2:05. Off 2:06½. Winner, T. T. Mott's ch. g. (7), by Pick of the Circus—Pop Cane. Trained by Judy Johnson. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 4:05. (14 jumps.)

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PRATTLER, $8.40, $5.10, $4.10; SPINACH, $8.60, $6.30; DUN LUCKY, $5.00.

PRATTLER dewit at start, was allowed to settle into best stride, improved position gradually in first mile, came to outside of leaders boldly to take command and bore out approaching thirteenth fence, but recovered to hold away easily to end. SPINACH withstood early challenges of REDSHANK to open good lead, but could not resist winner and continued gamely to close. DUN LUCKY was made much use of throughout running and tired under punishment at end. REDSHANK pressed early pace and weakened in closing stages. MARTINIOUS was outclassed. SEA TED and VALPUISEAUX fell.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 2:36. Off 2:40½. Winner, C. M. Feltner's b. f. (4), by Dunlin—Black Wand. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:13 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TULEYRIES LIN, $9.40, $4.10, $3.40; HAPPY KNOT, $4.10, $3.60; SUBURBANITE, $5.00.

TULEYRIES LIN had speed to go to front at once, opened a good lead and won with speed in reserve. HAPPY KNOT, off in first flight and steadied along in early running, rallied mildly when placed to drive, but was no match for winner. SUBURBANITE saved ground on inside while running close up and weakened slightly in closing sixteenth.

Daily Double, GRANICUS and TULEYRIES LIN, Paid $27.80.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:06. Off 3:10. Winner, George D. Widener's dk. b. f. †Willis Sharpe Kilmer entry.
Two-dollar mutuels paid—FAIRY CHANT, $27.10, $13.40, $8.60; YARNITH, $6.60, $4.50; THORNAPPLE, $4.10.

FAIRY CHANT, first away, but lacking early speed, responded willingly when placed to drive to take command in midstretch and held YARNITH safe in closing test. YARNITH was steadied along to stretch, came willingly under mild drive and was wearing down winner gradually at end. THORNAPPLE was in thick of contention from start, but weakened in stretch. ANNIE ALONE was used up setting and pressing pace with FLYING JANE and faltered.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:05. Off 4:07. Winner, W. Elliott's ch. m. (6), by Chatterton—Spanish Miss. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:53.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CAREFUL MISS, $9.30, $4.10, $3.20; OCTOBER ALE, $6.60, $3.70; KIEVEX, $3.00.

CAREFUL MISS, taken under steadying restraint when shut off by FICTITIOUS going into first turn, responded willingly when placed to drive, came around pacemaker to get to front and held OCTOBER ALE safe in closing test. OCTOBER ALE was rated within striking distance, came through on rail entering stretch, but could not stay with winner. KIEVEX, outrun for half, came with bold rush through stretch. SHAMBLES showed a dull effort under listless handling. FICTITIOUS set pace to stretch and faltered.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good for all but Jacsam from stall. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:36. Off 4:36½. Winner, Mrs. Louise Viau's ch. g. (3), by Omar Khayyam—Cambetty. Trained by J. P. Jones. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:48 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SIR KHAYYAM, $18.80, $13.10, $7.90; NILON, $15.50, $7.70; YANKEE LAD, $5.20.

SIR KHAYYAM broke forwardly, but was unable to keep up in early running, came willingly when placed to drive and wore down leaders to win going away. NILON, well placed from start, came willingly through stretch. YANKEE LAD raced on inside from beginning and weakened after getting to front in midstretch. MANY FLAGS closed full of run on inside. SIR TIME came with rush at end. BROOMORIA set good pace, but faltered when caught. IMITRA had no excuses. DES GRIEUX was close to pace for half and weakened.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:06. Off 5:08½. Winner, H. L. Straus' ch. g. (4), by Bud Lerner—Miss Nurmi. Trained by P. Madeira. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time 1:48 3-5.

Horses to Watch At Laurel Park

SEA TED—A jumper that appeared to be a winner last out but fell while in tight quarters.

SUBURBANITE—Just missed in his last race. Will pay to string along with this one.

ARNITH—A stablemate of Challedon that looks like a good two-year-old. Will beat classy ones.

MATTAPONY—Tired slightly in that last effort. Is in good hands and should be a price.

EBLIS—A half-miler that has been going good in trials. Trainer is waiting for a spot.

Merchants Play

The S. E. Merchants will play the Takoma Northerns on the Fairlawn Park at 11 a. m. All Merchants players are requested to meet on the field at 10:30 a. m.

Virginia, Navy Clash Today in Annapolis Before 22,000

Traditional Color To Thrill Fans on 50th Anniversary Of Grid Rivalry

Returning to the gridiron wars after nearly two weeks of rest and hoping its backfield will have the "oomph" of Ann Sheridan who'll "be rooting for 'em" the University of Virginia this afternoon will seek to break a precedent of 46 years with a football victory over the Naval Academy.

Before an almost certain capacity crowd of 22,000 which will saturate Thompson Stadium with all the traditional color and thrill fever of this rivalry which celebrates its fiftieth anniversary today the Cavaliers will throw their greatest eleven in many years against the favored Middies.

Two Powerful Squads

When the whistle signals the opening kickoff at 2:30 it will bring together two powerful, well balanced and skillfully coached squads, both undefeated and untied and both bidding for a front rank place in the pigskin parae. Navy with a crushing display of power in its 31-to-6 rout of William and Mary last week will rule a slight choice over Frank Murray's Charlottesville gang which had idled since swamping Hampden Sydney's Tigers, 23 to 0, two Saturdays ago.

Not since Virginia scored its last triumph over the Sailors, way back in 1893—four years after the rivalry began, are prospects so good for a Cavalier victory. The feeling started last spring down in Charlottesville and has grown by leaps and bounds. "It's Virginia's year," they cried, and now on the eve of this, perhaps Virginia's most important game, the cry has gained tremendous volume.

Powerful Line

Virginia rooters, including several thousand at Annapolis, as well as Ann Sheridan who sent her good wishes while refusing an invitation to attend as the Cavaliers' guest because of business, fully expect Co-Captain Bob Gillette to sink the Navy craft today with another brilliant passing and running performance with which he routed Hampden-Sydney.

The probable line-ups:

Virginia.	Position.	Navy.
(24) George	L.E.	Burke (58)
(68) McLaughlin	L.T.	Bergner (30)
(48) Rothar	L.G.	McGrath (31)
(30) Murden	Center	Harwood (85)
(56) Winokur	R.G.	Trimble (68)
(60) Prerotte	R.T.	Opp (48)
(80) Gianokos	R.E.	Duretie (95)
(35) Dudley	Q.B.	Wood (27)
(40) Gillette	L.H.	Gebert (40)
(36) O'Grince	R.H.	Malcolm (14)
(59) Neustedter	F.B.	Gray (24)

Referee—H. E. Armstrong (Tufts). Umpire—A. G. Hausmann (Princeton). Headlinesman—G. W. Hoban (Dartmouth). Field Judge—W. L. Boyson (Brown).

There must be power there. California.

Cornell-Syracuse (25,000)—There are backfield injuries on both sides. Bill Orange is out to prove last year's victory was no fluke. Syracuse by a shade.

Tulane-Auburn (30,000)—Tulane to get rolling.

Holy Cross-Louisiana State (25,000)—They say Ronnie Cahill, with a good press, would be rated the equal of Baugh or O'Brien. Holy Cross

Notre Dame-Georgia Tech (25,000)—The Rambling Wrecks expect to score on the Irish The Irish won't be standing still. Notre Dame.

Texas Christian-Arkansas (12,000) Texas Christian.

Vanderbilt-Kentucky (12,000)—Vandy, off its conquest of Rice.

Southern California-Washington State (40,000)—Southern California.

Duke-Colgate (25,000)—Hardly the spot for an upset. Duke, without too much difficulty.

Navy-Virginia (15,000)—Frank Murray is supposed to have Virginia clicking, but the Navy should have too many guns.

Army-Centre (10,000)—After last week's surprise by Furman, this one shouldn't catch the Kaydets unprepared. Army.

Wisconsin-Texas (25,000)—Dana Bible's five-year plan should be taking hold by now. Texas, in a close one.

Iowa-Indiana (20,000)—Iowa, on what looks like more offensive punch.

Nebraska-Minnesota (33,000)—Minnesota, again heavy on material.

Pittsburgh-West Virginia (30,000)—The Mountaineers haven't scored in this one for 10 years. They may this time, but Pitt should win.

Elsewhere:

East—Penn over Lafayette, Princeton over Williams, Harvard over Bates, New York U. over P. M. C., Dartmouth over Hampden-Sydney, Penn State over Bucknell, Brown over Amherst, Manhattan over St. Bonaventure.

Midwest—Michigan State over Florida, Tennessee over Sewanee, Mississippi over Southwestern (Tenn.), Clemson over N. C. State, Richmond over W. and L., V. M. I. over Davidson, North Carolina over V. P. I.

Southwest—Southern Methodist over Denton Teachers, Rice over Centenary, Baylor over Oklahoma A. and M., Texas Tech over Gonzaga.

Yale-Columbia (30,000)—It might be "Hail, Columbia," but we mistrust that extravagant weeping out of New Haven. No team can be as bad as Yale is painted. Yale, in a toss-up.

Ohio State-Missouri (60,000)—The Buckeys haven't lost an opening game in 44 years. That, as the late Cal Coolidge might have said, is a long time. This should make it a year longer. Ohio StSate.

Temple-Carnegie Tech (20,000)—Tech, with Muha and Condit.

Oregon-Stanford (20,000)—Looks like another bad afternoon for the Indians. Oregon.

Bo Bend Takes Double Honors

Special Dispatch to The Post

Charlottesville, Va., Oct. 6.—Bo Bend, 3-year-old brown gelding by Crucifixion out of Bending, owned by Mr. and Mrs. W. Haggen Perry, of Cobham, scored a double victory at the first day's exhibition of the Farmington Hunt Club horse show by taking first place in the classes for green hunters and hunter hacks, and awarded the trophies offered by Mr. and Mrs. Hollis Rinehart and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Renwick.

Mrs. John Sharpless McIntyre's gray gelding Round Hill, by High Hand, winner of championships at the Hot Springs, Norfolk, Hampton, Martinsville and Elkins (W. Va.) shows, turned in a fine performance to capture the blue ribbon in the class for half-breed hunters, which had 25 entries.

The "Fox Ridge" trophy, presented by Mr. and Mrs. Howard Y. Haffner, in the class for model hunters, went to the chestnut gelding, Repulsion, owned by Betty Couzens, of Washington.

Patrick, a gray gelding exhibited by Mrs. T. Kenneth Ellis, of Hot Springs, won over 30 entries in the event for novice jumpers, and in the first day modified Olympic the judges pinned the ribbon on Mrs. Elizabeth Lloyd Fangel's gelding, Fire Chief.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Schlesinger's chestnut mare, Golden Slippers, was first in the working hunters sweepstakes, beating a large class, while their bay gelding, Strong Fellow, by Stimulus, annexed the "White Gables" trophy presented by Mr. and Mrs. Rodger Rinehart in the class for qualified hunters.

Eighteen classes are listed on tomorrow's program. Today's events were judged by Harvey Ladew, of Monkton, Md., and K. C. Johnson, of Norfolk.

20,000 Expected to See Iowa and Indiana Clash

Iowa City, Iowa, Oct. 6 (AP).—Approximately 20,000 persons are expected to watch Iowa and Indiana open the Western Conference football season here tomorrow.

It will be the first Big Ten game for Iowa under Head Coach Dr. Eddie Anderson. The Hawkeyes started their schedule with a 41-to-0 victory over South Dakota University last week and the Hoosiers played a 7-to-7 tie with Nebraska.

Redskins Hope To Stop Parker Of Dodgers

Now that all hope of having the services of Sammy Baugh, Don Irwin and Jay Turner for the Brooklyn game has vanished, the Redskins will look to a new backfield combination Sunday to combat the Dodgers' great triple-threat quarterback, Ace Parker.

With more or less untried players filling in for the three injured backfield stars and minus also Bob McChesney, a dependable end, the Redskins will be but slight favorites to defeat Parker & Co., which comes here at full strength.

Besides Parker, the Dodgers under Coach Potsy Clark, will display in Halfback Ralph Kercheval, one of the game's longest kickers, at right halfback, and fine ball carriers in Pug Manders and Ray Carnelly at lefthalf. The starting Brooklyn fullback will be either Boyd Brumbaugh, or Ace Gutowski, who played for Clark when the latter coached the Detroit Lions.

Parker, an All-American at Duke, was a sensation last year in his freshman season in the National Professional League and already is talked of as one of the league's best all-around backs in history. He led all passers in the matter of distance gained on passes and his quick kicks, long runs and general all-around ability gained him the "most valuable" award.

Parker's presence here Sunday is expected to attract large delegations of fans from North Carolina and Virginia. Parker was born in Portsmouth and more than 800 persons from there and from Newport News and Norfolk will be on hand Sunday, according to the demands being made for ticket reservations.

Murray Realtors Open Tomorrow

Murray Realtors, independent unlimited football champions of last season, will open season's play tomorrow against the strong Uline Ice team on diamond No. 1 of the Monument Grounds at 2:30 p. m.

Such former high school stars as Earl Fox, Jack Belote, Jill Williams, Billy Harris and "Hurry" Sachs will help to make up the line-ups of the two teams.

October 15—Warrenton, away.
October 1—Arlington Blues, night game at Ballston.
October 22—Wilmington, Del., away.
October 29—Virginia A. C., at Alexandria.
November 5—York, Pa., away.
November 12—Brunswick, Md., away.

Angott Defeats Day in 10 Rounds

Chicago, Oct. 6 (AP).—Sammy Angott, the Louisville whirlwind, punched his way to a 10-round decision over Davey Day, Chicago welterweight, tonight in Chicago Stadium before 8,185 spectators.

Angott, leading contender for the lightweight title, weighed 137 and Day 136½.

The decision was split, one of the judges and the referee giving the fight to the Kentucky battler.

of the Suburban Club in Pikesville, celebrated his election as M. A. P. G. A. president for the third year with a final 71 for a 296 total and third money of $75.

Leo Walper Slips

The two-time champion, Leo Walper, rallied in the morning with one of the field, in the most successful event, a 69, and then slipped to 77 in the afternoon for 297 and a fourth place tie with Lewis Worsham, the young Burning Tree pro, who finished with a pair of 75's for a 297 total. Worsham's final nine included three birdies. They divided $75.

Jack Isaacs led the Virginia delegation in the cash list with 298, helped by a morning 72, while the pro that originated this year's event and is largely responsible for its success, Al Houghton, was an even 300 for seventh place with the four most consistent rounds, 74 through 77, inclusive.

Rut Coffey, Winchester, Va., professional, was next with a 302 total that was tied by the low amateur scorer, the "down the middle man" from Rolling Road, Spencer Overton. The latter finished with a 71, the lowest round for the simon pures.

Twelve Win $10 Checks

Isaacs, Houghton and the next ten pros to finish received $10 checks. They included Alec Taylor, Rolling Road, 305; John Kelly, Norfolk, 306; Errie Ball, Charlottesville, and Andy Gibson, Bonnie View, 307; Mel Shorey, East Potomac, and John O'Donnell, Edgewood Arsenal, 309, and Hugh McClennan, Norfolk, 310.

Volney Burnett, Indian Spring, was second low amateur, with 309, while Billy Shea had 310; Ralph Bogart, 316; George Miller, 323; John Frederick, Baltimore, 333, and R. T. Harrell, 348, all in the prize list with N. E. Rogers, Capital, who had a net total of 360-56, 304.

Cox reduced Spencer's lead from six strokes to four at the 54-hole mark, mainly by dropping a birdie on the seventeenth hole while Spencer was taking five. Wiffy cut it to two at the fourth hole of the final round, and at the eighth hole it looked like the match would be even. Spencer's tee shot on the short hole was far to the right of the green, while Cox's hit the pin for a near ace. Spencer chipped up and hit the pin, saving a 10-foot putt, and Cox missed his birdie try, and they halved the hole.

Starts Birdie Streaks

Cox outscrambled Spencer on the tenth to cut it to one, but a bad lie cost him a shot on 11, and the margin was two in Spencer's favor again. It was back to one when Spencer had trouble with the short thirteenth, but on the next hole he started another of his famed birdie streaks, making three in a row with 12-35 and 8-foot putts, and was three shots up, although Cox halved one of the birdies.

With the title apparently sewed up, Spencer played a poor second on the seventeenth, trapping it, and finished with a 5 to Cox's birdie, and the result hinged on the final hole.

Cox's second shot stayed on the fringe to the left of the green, while Spencer was barely on, some 45 feet away. Cox, a stroke back, missed his birdie try and needing two putts, Spencer went boldly for the cup and the ball went in and the Beaver Dam mentor had his most important title.

Women's '10-Mile Champion' Visits D. C.; Issues Challenge

WPA Secretary Runs 10 to 20 Miles Daily—Just for Exercise

By Jack Munhall.

You red-blooded men who boast of walking a mile for a camel, take a backseat. You are about to be paled into insignificance by a woman.

Into our midst last night came La Verne Carpentier, a raven-haired and attractive WPA secretary from Salem, Oreg., who runs 10 and 20 miles a day just for exercise—just to prove that such doings are not too strenuous for the fair sex.

Stopping here amid her coast-to-coast crusade to promote women interest in long-distance running, Miss Carpentier, a 24-year-old cousin of Georges Carpentier who fought Jack Dempsey in 1922, flings a challenge at any woman to meet her in a 10-mile race.

Sorry, if we frightened you, ladies. Pick up the paper and be assured that Miss Carpentier is not only deadly serious about running this unthinkable distance but will prove it solo, should that be necessary.

"I hope not, though," this 5-foot 5¾ little lady was saying last night. Here I am claiming the national long-distance running championship for women and I can get no taker. Why, even in wrestling you can't make a claim like that and get away with it."

"Since leaving home in April I have challenged all women on the Coast, in the West and in the East around New York to a race anywhere from 2 to 10 miles. Some have accepted, but when I turned around to look after the first lap I was running by myself."

For the sake of us incredulous who didn't think a woman could even walk 10 miles except when shopping, Miss Carpentier will produce as proof press clippings and letters of encouragement and interest from such sports and civic personalities as Bernarr McFadden, Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, Robert Ripley and Avery Brundage.

However, much as she treasures her letter from Brundage, president of the National A. A. U., it is just an example of the opposition she meets everywhere against long-distance running for women. In the letter Brundage expresses interest in Miss Carpentier's work which she hopes will win her a place on the next United States Olympic squad, but points out that every year there is a movement to abolish all Olympic races for women.

The longest Olympic race now run is only 200 meters, and even that has been protested as too taxing for women. A similar complaint resulted in the abolition of the 800-meter women's run.

Miss Carpentier, who is on a three-month vacation from her position as secretary in the Salem WPA office, appeared last month in a 10-mile exhibition run at the New York World's Fair. In July she did her specialty at the San Francisco Fair and she is scheduled for another 10-mile exhibition in Wichita, Kans., where she received some of her earliest long distance running advice from Glenn Cunningham, the master miler of them all.

While in New York City in September Miss Carpentier accepted Ripley's invitation to appear on his radio program and also wrote to Mrs. Roosevelt to indorse any running she might do here. In reply she recited from a secretary to Mrs. Roosevelt a letter saying she would first have to arrange a race before any such permission or sanction could be given.

For the education of the ladies, Miss Carpentier is not overly muscular but, on the contrary, exceptionally well shaped. She is long-limbed, weighs a trim 126 pounds, has large, frank features and is fond of dancing and all other sports.

For the sake of the records, she ran her first 10-mile race in 1 hour 39 minutes 36.6 seconds to convince a reporter of the Oregon Statesman. Since then she has consistently lowered that time under favorable conditions, with her top effort being 80 minutes flat.

Elon to Rely On Air Raids Against Cards

An aerial circus by Elon College is expected to furnish the chief thrills at Brookland Stadium this afternoon as Catholic University's Cardinals open their home football season with the small Southern school at 2:30 o'clock.

Realizing it cannot hope to match the power and weight of the Cardinals, Elon is reported to be prepared to fill the air with passes from the opening whistle to the end, gambling victory against the prospects of an even more decisive defeat.

The big gun of the Christians' attack is little Bernie Daher, a speedy 161-pound halfback, who is looked on by enthusiastic rooters as another Davey O'Brien. He is not listed as a starter for Elon, but will be sent in when the Christians need a long run or a pass.

Another Elon player bringing a long clip of press notices is Joe Golombek, 200-pound fullback, who was named on the All-North Carolina States Opponents' team last season in such select company as Duke's Eric Tipton. Unlike most fullbacks, Golombek is described as a shifty open field runner.

Catholic University, buoyed by its surprise opening victory over South Carolina, will be without one of its best backs, Hank Brostek, who is still recovering from injuries received in the Gamecock game. In his place at right halfback will be Henry Sant'Ambrogio, a junior and a pile-driving ball carrier and blocker.

The Cards, still without a dangerous passer, will look to Charlie Moutenot, slippery halfback, and big Rocco Pirro, fullback and line smasher de luxe, for their offensive threats today. Joe Guyon, flashy young Indian and a backfield star in the defeat of South Carolina, is suffering a recurrence of the stomach trouble that bothered him all last season and may be withheld from the game, unless Elon proves unexpectedly troublesome.

Cubs Defeat White Sox, 4-2, Lead Series

Bill Lee Winner While Thorton Lee Is Routed in City Series

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Oct. 6.—Big Bill Lee pitched the Chicago Cubs to a 4-to-2 victory over the White Sox today, giving the National Leaguers a one-game lead in their battle for the city championship.

After splitting the first two games, the Cubs went ahead in the series today behind Lee's effective hurling and the timely hitting of Gabby Hartnett's men.

The Sox got away to an early two-run lead. In the first inning Joe Kuhel rapped a double to right field and scored on Luke Appling's single. The Sox went two up in the fourth on Appling's single, Eric McNair's walk and Gerald Walker's single to center field.

THE TAVERN KEEPERS OF WASHINGTON who serve you
NATIONAL BOHEMIAN BEER on draft

cordially invite you and your family and friends to gather around and bring back the old, old Washington custom of sitting together and enjoying generous glasses of cool, mellow keg beer.

Now that NATIONAL BOHEMIAN can be had on draft, here, we promise you, is keg beer at its best—keg beer as it used to be in the old days.

You can count on getting a good glass of NATIONAL BOHEMIAN wherever you find it on tap because it is put out only through tavern keepers who know how to handle and serve keg beer as it must be served.

NATIONAL BOHEMIAN on draft
take home a few bottles and keep it on ice

National Bohemian is the most expensive ten-cent bottle of beer you can buy — but, folks, it's worth it. Your dealer makes less on National Bohemian bottled beer than on any other ten-cent beer—but what he may miss in a bigger profit, he gains in the friends he makes.

Bankers' Loan Gain Mirrors Business Rise

Local Delegates Tell Of Optimistic Tone At Seattle Parley

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Discussion of the present unsettled condition of world affairs as it applies to banking, business and economics made the convention of the American Bankers Association, at Seattle, a most interesting and informative one, local bankers returning from the meeting reported this week.

While forecasts and warnings of various speakers relative to the international situation gave a grave tone to some of the deliberations, the conference was heartened by reports of a continued upturn in domestic business and predictions that this would prevail despite adverse foreign influences.

Several authorities who addressed the convention called attention to the recent expansion in commercial loans characterizing the entire country and expressed opinion that bank earnings probably will gain rather than decline during the next few months. Caution against overproduction in certain industries in advance of definite orders was advised by various speakers, however. The large amount of idle money in banking institutions and means of employing it to advantage was another important topic.

Among those composing the local delegation to the convention were President Robert V. Fleming, of Riggs National Bank, a former president of the national association; George O. Vass, vice president and cashier of Riggs National Bank, and Sidney F. Taliaferro, vice president and trust officer of that institution; President J. Frank White and General Counsel and Trust Officer Louis M. Denit, National Bank of Washington; President J. Frank Campbell, Anacostia Bank; Treasurer James C. Dulin, jr., American Security & Trust Co.; Vice President and Cashier Wilmer J. Waller, Hamilton National Bank; President John A. Reilly, Second National Bank; President T. Howard Duckett, Prince Georges Bank & Trust Co.; D. J. Needham, general counsel, American Bankers Association; J. O. Brott, assistant general counsel; Comptroller of the Currency Preston Delano, Leo H. Paulger, chief, division of examinations, board of governors, Federal Reserve System.

Industrial Bankers Pay

Stockholders in the Southeastern Industrial Bankers, Inc., parent company in a chain of industrial loan companies operating in the District of Columbia, Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia, will receive regular quarterly dividend payments October 17, it is announced by Clifton M. Eisele, president. The payments, which will amount to 7 per cent on preferred stock to stockholders of record October 10, were voted at a meeting of the directors held this week.

Directors of the Bethesda Savings & Loan Co., an affiliate of the Southeastern Industrial Bankers, Inc., also announced dividend payments to be made November 17, to all stockholders of record November 10. These payments will amount to 7 per cent on preferred stock and 10 cents a share on common.

A. I. B. Publication

The fall issue of Dollars and Sense, publication of Washington Chapter, American Institute of Banking, is an interesting one and marks an increase in size of 12 to 16 pages. Featured in the magazine are excerpts from "Design for Living," an address by Harold Stonier, official of the American Bankers Association and the institute. This year's editorial staff includes A. E. Henze, W. B. Hibbs & Co., J. George Dagenais, Riggs National Bank; Arthur Meade, Lincoln National Bank; Miss Rose L. Royce, Washington Loan & Trust Co., and Richard Ehlis, American Security & Trust Co., who is circulation manager.

Servel, Inc., Sales Meeting

Roderic Peters, regional sales manager of Servel, Inc., for this vicinity, was in New York yesterday where he attended the annual sales convention of his company at the Hotel Roosevelt. Others from the Washington office who attended the meeting were L. E. Libby and L. G. Ehret.

A feature of the meeting was a preview of the 1940 Servel Electrolux models embodying several new improvements. The Washington group was among more than 100 executives, sales representatives and other members of the organization who discussed plans for 1940.

Gold Imports Hit New Wartime Low

The Commerce Department reported yesterday that the war has nearly cut off gold shipments to the United States. Gold imports fell to $17,263,624 in the week ended September 29, the smallest for any week since August 12, 1938.

The figure compares with $36,966,586 in the preceding week and a record of $224,000,000 in one of the many weeks of European crisis which preceded the war. England and France, formerly major gold shippers, have stopped, and in the week ended September 29, the major shippers were Canada, $5,310,680; Japan, $5,517,585, and India, $1,627,567.

$100,000,000 Bills Offered by Treasury

The Secretary of the Treasury gave notice yesterday that tenders are invited for Treasury bills to the amount of $100,000,000, or thereabouts. They will be 91-day bills and will be sold on a discount basis to the highest bidders. Tenders will be received at the Federal Reserve Banks, or the branches thereof, up to 2 p. m. Monday. Tenders will not be received at the Treasury Department.

Brisk Cotton Rise Throttled by Lack Of Trade Support

New York, Oct. 6 (AP).—A brisk run-up in cotton futures early today was throttled when professional traders slackened their activities and selling increased. Final prices were 1 to 5 points up after morning outside gains of 17 points.

The brief whirl upward, brokers said, was based on the general belief that chances were slim for immediate peace abroad. Action of outside markets, especially securities, contributed to the buoyancy.

Despite the increased hedging, reports from growing centers indicated farmers were holding back a good part of the crop, mainly in the hope war will spur demand.

Grains Spurt On Hitler Talk, Then React

Advances Halved; Wheat Prices Close ⅝ to 1⅛ Up

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Oct. 6. — The Hitler speech touched off a buying explosion in the grain pits today and wheat and corn prices surged upward 2⅝ cents a bushel at the opening bell.

After the initial buying rush, however, increased selling came into the market and wheat gave up more than half of its gains while the advance of corn values were eliminated.

The session's high quotations were recorded at the start of trading and the lows at the close. Many buyers who were undecided as to just what the Hitler proposals will mean took their cue from strength in securities. December wheat hit 84½ and May 84¼, while December and May corn soared to 52 and 55⅛, respectively.

Heavy Profit Taking

About a cent reaction occurred quickly in both pits and later when securities showed signs of turning back downward increased selling was evident here. There was considerable profit taking. Grain traders said Hitler's speech apparently had not altered the uncertain European situation materially.

Wheat closed ⅝ to 1⅛ cents higher than yesterday; December, 82⅞@83; May, 82¾@82¾. Corn unchanged to ⅜ higher; December, 50⅛@50¼; May, 52⅞@52¾. Oats, ⅛ to ¼ up. Rye, ⅜ to ¾ higher, and lard, 10 to 12 higher.

Failure of Winnipeg wheat to advance much more than a cent tempered enthusiasm here. Winnipeg prices closed unchanged to ⅛ higher than yesterday.

Drought Prevails

Dry weather prevailed in the domestic Southwest and no moisture relief was predicted. Crop experts continued to stress this factor as a bullish market influence, but traders pointed out that most of the wheat price advance of about 15 cents a bushel the past five weeks could be blamed directly on the war. Douglas Sanday, grain trade authority, expressed belief that "it would be very unwise to anticipate an abnormal demand for North American grains from Europe" as supplies abroad are large and buying will be done with great care.

The corn price upturn attracted selling, with sales estimated at 131,000, but some of the 360 cars arriving here were believed to have been government grain. Shippers sold 145,000 bushels, with demand from industries good. Additional export sales were reported.

The rye, oats and lard pits were dominated by European events, although trading was small.

Securities Surge Upward in Early Buying; Rush but React Sharply; General List Closes With Moderate Advance

New York, Oct. 6.—Security prices reached their best levels on heavy buying in the first hour today, with "war" stocks out in front. Thereafter enthusiasm for the advance disappeared, volume dwindled and final prices in the majority of groups were not far from the day's lows.

Coppers, stores and foods retained a good portion of their mark-ups, however, enabling the list as a whole to show a small credit on the long side, the composite price for the 100 key stocks being 0.16 point higher on the day.

Cotton duplicated the performance of the share market, early gains giving way to realizing, the close being 1 to 5 points up. Wheat ended with gains of ⅝ to 1¼ cents.

On the Stock Exchange, initial dealings were featured by exchange of large blocks of steel, railroad and other industrial shares. When first-hour sales of 570,000 shares were announced, traders began to predict one of the most active days of the current bull move. From 11 o'clock, however, buying tapered abruptly in the face of offerings, presumably from professionals and investment houses as yet unconvinced that the European war is to continue; and if continuing, to be on as grand a scale as the majority of forecasters have reasoned.

Reaction Disappointing

The Hitler speech to the Reichstag was quite in keeping with advance notices and expectations of a "peace ultimatum," rather than a peace offer, but Allied and Washington reactions were, perhaps, disappointing from the view of those who have staked funds on a domestic business boom motivated by war. Some quite capable commentators also did their bit in attempting to dash the extravagant hopes of those who see vast sums flowing to the United States from sales of materials and munitions to the Allies.

It was emphasized, for example, that Britain and France so far have used up relatively small resources; that the Russian encroachments in Poland and the Balkans are beginning to worry Germany as well as Italy. This situation, it is felt, may influence Nazi military plans on the Western Front. In the meantime, the necessity of feeding the German army and nation, it is suggested, may be forcing a crisis within Germany that may lead to settlement or a desperate blow.

While substantial funds have been gambled on certainty of a long and expensive war, conservative elements in the financial district insist that stock prices have, so far at least, barely reflected the really substantial improvement in domestic business. Statistics from many industries for August, only now available, show that before the war started this country was experiencing a strong and well-balanced recovery movement that was gaining momentum from day to day. It must be admitted, however, that the declaration of war did provide the impetus for recovery in commodities and metals, particularly farm products.

Farmers Helped

In the latter instance farm purchasing power in this country has already been expanded by hundreds of millions of dollars. In Canada, betterment of wheat prices in the last month alone has added $100,000,000 to agricultural income, according to Dominion estimates. These added funds in the pockets of rural dwellers augur well for trade in the two countries.

Steel shares while as active as usual were about unchanged in price at the close of the session today, steel common with a gain of ¾, being an exception. Youngstown, Ohio, reported that production in that district would be at the highest level since 1929 in the coming week. In Alabama, a further expansion of furnace and mill schedules was announced. Steel ingot production for September, disclosed after the close of the market, was at the highest point for any month since September, 1937.

Motors, on the whole, ended about even, Chrysler and General Motors, both in the active list, dropping large fractions. Ward's said that by mid-month automobile assemblies will be around the best levels of the year.

Union Carbide, Union Pacific, Eastman Kodak, Johns-Manville and Allied Chemical were among good gainers in active issues. Off a point or more were American Can, du Pont, and International Harvester.

Weakness in sterling was pronounced following the Hitler speech and Canadian exchange, tied to sterling, reached a new low at 11⅛ per cent discount against U. S. funds.

Bonds Irregular

Listed bonds turned irregular in a moderately active session today, the uncertainties of the European war being the principal influence. United States Treasury securities showed small gains and losses in different categories of maturities.

The Treasury section disclosed modest inquiry for intermediate maturities, but the longest and shortest datings were marked lower by a few thirty-seconds of a point. Guaranteed bonds of the farm and home corporations were irregular. Best rated corporate issues reacted variously to the few buy and sell orders, the two telephone debenture issues, for instance, moving in opposite directions.

Foreign dollar bonds moved off, as they always do when war clouds thicken. German, Canadian and Australian obligations all receded a point or two. Scandinavian, Belgian, Italian and other neutral bonds softened. The Latin-American issues were irregular on a small volume of business.

Speculative carrier bonds of the domestic list reflected early inquiry, but the gains were modified in a late reaction. Alleghany Corporation bonds shed some of their recent gains, and utility holding issues were dull. Convertibles attracted little attention; local fractions drifted lower and other special groups were dull.

Boston Wool Market

Boston, Oct. 6 (AP) (U. S. Dept. of Agri.).—Actual trading in wool was very slow on the Boston market today. A waiting attitude was shown by holders and buyers. Nominally, quotations on domestic wools were slightly firmer than earlier in the week, but efforts to trade were too restricted to definitely establish prices.

Rains Curtail Retail Trade Climb in Week

Dollar Sales Gain 8 to 14%; Wholesale Markets Are Quiet

By the Associated Press

New York, Oct. 6.—Retail trade activity expanded moderately on the average this week, although some areas suffered from a prolonged rainy spell, Dun & Bradstreet said today in its weekly business survey.

"The trend of sales, judged against the 1938 level at this time, made a varied showing," the agency said, "depending on the type of merchandise and the section of the country.

"For the country as a whole, the improvement in dollar sales was estimated at between 8 and 14 per cent, with unit volume up slightly less because of the moderate rise in the level of prices.

"Grocery sales were reported still 'surprisingly good,' although the panicky buying of early September was little in evidence.

"Wholesale markets had a comparatively quiet week, with turnover the smallest since the opening of hostilities abroad. Forward orders dwindled as buyers withdrew to appraise foreign developments and to make adjustments in budgets in the light of recent trends in prices and purchasing power."

Hudson Retail Sales Reach 10-Year Top

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 6.—Retail sales of Hudson cars in the United States for the week ended September 30 were the highest for any comparable week since September, 1929, it was reported today by G. H. Pratt, general sales manager.

Sales for the week totaled 1,760 units compared with 1,502 for the previous week, marking the third consecutive week in sales gains, and an increase of 250 per cent over the same week a year ago, Mr. Pratt states.

Gen. Electric Reports $79,510,000 Orders

Schenectady, N. Y., Oct. 6 (AP).—Orders received by General Electric Co. in the third quarter of the year totaled $79,510,000, an increase of 31 per cent over the $60,533,000 for the comparable 1938 quarter, Gerard Swope, president, said today.

U. S. Toy Exports Show Sharp Spurt

War materials might become an important United States export next year, but this year the boom is in toys.

The Commerce Department calculated yesterday that $1,892,140 worth of toys were shipped abroad in the first eight months of the year, exceeding by 17 per cent the corresponding figure for last year.

The United States, which since the World War has surpassed both Germany and Japan in playing Santa Claus to the world, is sh

Terps Will Start Regulars

Only Shaffer To Miss Game At Baltimore

Mondorff Promoted To Starting Post in Place of Boyda in Tonight's Battle

Not deceived by Western Maryland's loss to strong but obscure little Cortland Teachers last week, the University of Maryland eleven won't be underestimating the Terrors tonight as they clash at Baltimore Stadium in the Terps' first nocturnal game in history. Kickoff is scheduled at 8:30.

The Terps will start their regular line-up and the same with only two exceptions that walloped Hampden-Sydney in the season opener at College Park. Frank Dwyer replaces injured Dick Shaffer at end, and Pershing Mondorff, off his brilliant all-around performance against the Tigers, is promoted to the left halfback position, displacing John Boyda.

With Virginia next on its schedule, Maryland is not expected to display any more trickery than is necessary for victory since Cavalier scouts are certain to be on hand. The bulk of its offense will rest with speedy little Joe Murphy and the hefty Mondorff, who teamed so well as the Terps beat Hampden-Sydney, 26 to 0.

The probable Maryland starting line-up is: Ends, Dwyer and Francis Beamer; tackles, Frank Albarano and Bob Brown; guards, George Geinger and George Lawrence; center, Al Wharton; quarterback, Murphy; halfback, Mondorff and Frank Skotnicki, and fullback, Milton Lumsden.

Bob Smith, regular center who missed the opener with injuries, is reported in shape again and probably will see some action for Maryland. Others who are expected to relieve the starters before the first half is over are: Backs, Bernie Ulman, Boyda and Vernon Miller, and linemen, Garrett, Morton, Meyer, Mueller and Mackenzie.

Villanova Routs South Carolina Under Lights, 40-0

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Oct. 6.—Villanova College, undefeated the past two years, scored its second 1939 victory before 25,000 customers at Shibe Park tonight by crushing the rugged South Carolina Gamecocks, 40 to 0.

Villanova now has played 22 consecutive games since it last was defeated in 1937. Since that time it has won 19 and been deadlocked three times.

The Wildcats had everything tonight, scoring overland and in the air. Their swift-striking offense and tight defense kept the Southerners handcuffed throughout.

Tom McMahon led the attack with two touchdowns. Buzz Howlett, John Gogolinski, Joe Behot and Bill Romanowski each added one. Nick Basca, Gene Neri, Howlett and Behot each place-kicked an extra point.

'Jalopie' Races Slated Tonight At Speedway

Eight "jalopie" races and four thrilling stunt acts by Hollywood stunt artists will highlight the Cheverly, Md., post's jamboree and carnival of thrills scheduled for the Capitol Speedway, New York avenue and West Virginia avenue northeast, tonight at 8 o'clock.

The racing events, featuring daredevil jalopie drivers and motorcycle stunters will be climaxed by a thirty lap final main event late stock car match between Harry Irving and Charlie Rizz.

Eight thousand general admission seats at 40 cents will be available it was announced by Nelson Tayman, committee chairman. The event is being staged as a benefit for the post's building and welfare fund.

Military bands from legion posts in Maryland, Virginia and the District will supply music.

A. A. U. Champ 'Received' by Fight Officials

Novak Arrives For Benefit Go With DeChard

A distinguished gathering that included Representative John J Dempsey, of New Mexico, officially welcomed Tony Novak, National A. U. boxing champion from Kansas City, to the Nation's Capital at a reception tendered him at the Shoreham Hotel yesterday afternoon.

Towering and impressive at a trim 217 pounds, Novak next Wednesday night is to box Jimmy DeChard, District Golden Gloves heavyweight champion, in the five-round intersectional feature of a 34-round amateur boxing carnival sponsored as a 100 per cent benefit for the Washington Society for the Blind at Griffith Stadium.

Following yesterday's reception, Novak was escorted to the National Guard gymnasium, where his opponent on Wednesday night's card was in hard training. After briefly reviewing DeChard in action, Novak and Handler Joe (Doc) Reilly called it a day.

Today Novak and Reilly are to visit Annapolis, where Novak is to work out under the direction of "Spike" Webb, celebrated Naval Academy boxing coach, this morning. This afternoon they are to attend the Navy-Virginia game, after which they will confine future drills to the Jewish Community Center gymnasium.

In a spirited drill at the National Capial Sporting Club's gymnasium yesterday Novak impressed with his ability to punch with either hand and general ability. He is a terrific puncher, being credited with 26 knockouts in 51 amateur starts.

Notre Dame Plays Georgia Tech At South Bend

By the Associated Press

South Bend, Ind., Oct. 6.—Notre Dame, with a victory over Purdue under its belt, meets Georgia Tech tomorrow in the first of five consecutive intersectional clashes for the Fighting Irish.

Coach Elmer Layden has announced he will use the same line-up that started against Purdue with the exception of John Gubanich instead of Chuck Riffle at right guard.

The Irish defeated Tech in Atlanta a year ago, 14 to 6, in a surprisingly close game.

Most powerful weapon in Tech's arsenal is expected to be the punting of Neil Cavette, left guard who moves into the backfield for kicking assignments.

A crowd of about 25,000 is expected to see the contest.

Tony Willman Wins Midget Auto Feature

Tony Willman, of Milwaukee, won the feature 25-lap race of the midget auto program last night before a paid attendance of 8,122 persons at the Capital Speedway.

Mike Joseph, of Philadelphia, was second after alternating with Willman for the lead of the event which was shortened from the originally scheduled 50 laps because of the dangerous condition of the muddy track.

Eddie Coxx, Paterson, N. J., was third, and Ned Redmond, Atlanta, was fourth.

Mel Hansen, winner of last week's feature, was forced out of the race on the eighteenth lap when he blew a tire. Paul Russo, another hot favorite, was unable even to start because of a broken oil line.

The consolation race was won by Cligg Hemingway, Los Angeles; Joe Jars, Nutley, N. J., was second, and Jimmy Sorte, Philadelphia, placed third.

Wilson Holds Landon to Scoreless Tie

Woodrow Wilson High took its first plunge into the local football pool yesterday on its new home field and the result was four quarters scoreless tussling with Landon School.

With a single letterman, Right End Herman Byers, in a lineup of novices the Presidents surprised everyone by holding a strong Landon aggregation to a 0-0 tie, and in the waning minutes made the only real threat of the game.

Ray Banello, a transfer student, supplied the motive power for Wilson's threat by two plays before the end of the game. From behind the midfield stripe the chunky Banello hurled to Nelson Hillock, substitute end, and the latter pushed and scrambled to Landon's 2-yard stripe.

The potential touchdown was spoiled on the final play, however, when Harold Hickson fumbled. Wilson recovered on the 15, but it was too late. Beterans Amussen and McEllway furnished what ball-carrying talent Landon could boast, assisted by Hill and Perkins in the line.

Wofford, Oglethorpe Play Scoreless Tie

Spartanburg, S. C., Oct. 6 (AP).—Wofford and Oglethorpe football teams played a scoreless game today before a crowd of 2,000.

Threats were few until the second half. The Georgians pushed near the goal several times, but the Terriers braced each time. Oglethorpe was 6 yards from a touchdown when the game ended.

Gaithersburg Beats Poolesville, 8 to 4

In its first start of the Montgomery County schoolboy soccer season, Gaithersburg High yesterday defeated Poolesville, 8-4, at Gaithersburg. Bill King sparked the winning attack with two tallies, and Fred Smith and Clyde Stup added one apiece. The losers' points were scored by Gray and Offutt. Gaithersburg was undefeated last year, having won the county championship five times in its last six starts.

Mary Hardwick Gains Semifinals

Berkeley, Calif., Oct. 6 (AP).—Mary Hardwick, of England, and Pauline Betz, of Los Angeles, advanced to the semifinals of the women's singles today in the Pacific Coast tennis championships.

Miss Hardwick defeated Mary Arnold, Los Angeles, 6—3, 6—0, while Miss Betz eliminated the English player, Valerie Scott, 6—0, 6—3.

Bobby Riggs, of Chicago, national men's singles champion, reached the semifinal singles round by beating Wayne Sabin, Portland, Oreg., 7—5, 6—4.

off long and consistent gains for the T-Streeters. On the last play of the game, however, he was carried from the field unconscious. His injuries were diagnosed on the spot as merely a severe shake-up, though it was necessary to remove him to Casualty Hospital for further observation.

The success of Coach Rolland Lund's Indians was made possible by a scrappy line and the ball-carrying of a single back—Art Faircloth. The 185-pound fullback passed, kicked, bucked, blocked—in fact, the only thing she failed to do was run his own interference.. And to make his performance complete, he pulled a stunt schoolboy football in the District hasn't seen for two years. He dropkicked the extra point after scoring the game's only touchdown from the 17-yard line in the final quarter.

Bumped Out of Bounds

Faircloth set up his own chance for a goal a few minutes before the close of the third period when he intercepted Jack Walsh's short pass on his own 3. With Techmen in wild pursuit, the barrel-legged speedster raced 69 yards to Tech's 28, finally being bumped out of bounds by Walsh.

Three passes dropped harmlessly, but the third, Faircloth to Joe Farmer, picked up 16 yards, a first down, and put Anacostia on the 12. Two more aerials went for nothing before Farmer, hurling to George Abshur, saw the ball taken by Tech's Litsis on the 4. Walsh's kick from behind his goal was grounded on the 30.

Then, with the exception of Faircloth's 69-yarder, occurred the most brilliant run of the game. Farmer was bottled coming over left tackle, reversed his field and ran backward, evaded six tacklers and finally was stopped after a 13-yard gain to Tech's 17. Faircloth did the rest.

Wide-Open Game

It was a wide-open game, the perfect game as far as Anacostia's tiny line, averaging less than 155 pounds, was concerned. When Tech utilized its superior weight in the first period with straight line plays featuring Cockrille, four straight first downs were the result. That put the Maroon on Anacostia's 26. A 15-yard penalty threw it back, and in an attempt to recover Tech took to the air with dire results. Four of its 12 passes were intercepted, and only three were completed for a gain of a mere 31 yards. Anacostia made 4 of 16 aerials good for 40 yards.

A touch of ill-feeling marked the closing minutes before the half. Anacostia drew a 15-yard penalty for slugging to start the referee's adverse rulings, and shortly before the whistle Tech was backed up 26 yards—half the distance to its goal—when Mike Muchi swung a fist at Joe Hayes. Muchi was waved out of the game. Another McKinley penalty later on set the club back 15 yards for piling on.

St. Alban's Beats Friends School

Special Dispatch to The Post

Baltimore, Oct. 6.—St. Alban's School, of Washington, opened its own season and that of Friends School here today with a 13-0 victory behind the stellar backfield efforts of Bob LeFevre and Dave Davidson.

Davidson set up the opening score in the first quarter when he ran 30 yards off tackle to Friends' 2-yard line, LeFevre carrying the ball over a few plays later from the 1-foot line. Davidson scored the extra point on a lateral from Jack Hare.

St. Alban's second-half points were tallied on a 25-yard aerial from Davidson to George Trible over the goal. An attempted pass by Davidson for the point was blocked.

dropped out of bounds on the Generals' 5-foot line. French kicked to the 28 and on the first down George Barnes dashed off tackle and as he was being tackled flipped a lateral to Hilleary who ran unmolested for the touchdown. His try for the extra point failed.

The Generals threatened to tie the score in the same quarter when a series of off-tackle smashes coupled with a pass from Alexander to Edwards took the ball to Western's 25 but Barnes intercepted an errant heave to silence the uprising. The Raiders were set back within the shadow of their goal posts a moment later when Hilleary's kick was blocked, but he luckily recovered to avert any damage.

The Raiders' offense revolved around Hilleary's running and passing. Barnes, star of his team's 19-to-7 victory over George Washington High, failed to break away for one substantial gain during the entire afternoon. The victory was Washington-Lee's third straight of the season, and Coach Johnny Baker quite naturally was elated over the showing of his squad.

Lefty Gomez Hurls Today

only two cheap infield hits to show for his series efforts thus far, stood at the plate for more than an hour in an attempt to adjust his batting eye and hit dozens of pitches out of the park, content to call it a day only when he lifted one ball on top of the laundry roof across the street bounding leftfield.

Manager Bill McKechnie ordered no workout for his Reds on the theory that complete rest would be a better potion than the excitement of a midseries workout.

In Thompson, McKechnie is casting his lot with a 22-year-old Swedish lad who had made the long hop to the big leagues this season from Columbia, S. C., and contributed 13 victories against only five defeats to the Reds' pennant drive. Hailed as a brilliant prospect at the Reds' training camp, he figured in 19 games as a relief pitcher before he was given a starting chance.

Thompson stepped into the breach nicely for the Reds in August when there were signs that McKechnie's club would toss off completely what had been a 12-game lead. With Derringer and Walters the only Reds able to pitch a victory in three crucial weeks, Thompson took the mound and turned in an 11-inning triumph and a 4-0 shutout in consecutive starts. He is an overhand curve baller with a tolerable fast one, and seemingly has conquered what had been lax control.

Experts "Crossed Up"

McCarthy's choice of Gomez as tomorrow's pitcher was a distinct upset. It had been anticipated that in view of Gomez's muscle injury, the Yankees' manager would name either Oral Hildebrand or Bump Handley as his third-game hurler, but McCarthy crossed the experts.

"This isn't a gamble on my part," he said. "Gomez is always a good bet to win a ball game. He say's he's fit now, and he looks it. That's good enough for me. I can always believe Lefty. Besides, the weather will be warm, and that will help him. Hildebrand has never been a great hot weather pitcher."

The Gomez who will take the mound tomorrow is not regarded as the same Gomez who in former years was the scourge of American League batters. He admits frankly that he has lost the hop on his fast ball, throws his fast one now only sparingly, and relies chiefly on his curve. In the Reds he will be facing only two left-handed hitters—Lonnie Frey and Ival Goodman.

Manager Bill McKechnie declared today that he would make no change in the Reds' line-up, despite the belief that he would bench Left-fielder Wally Berger in favor of Lee Gamble or Al Simmons. "This is the team that won the pennant for us, and I'm going to string along with it," said McKechnie.

Washington is to receive, Walter Fedora probably will start at fullback and Billy Richardson at left half. Otherwise it will be Lud Urick at full and Ken Batson at the tailback, because they are the better defensive players.

Georgetown, eager at the chance to rest its injured and also its regulars for next week's important game with Syracuse, will start an entire second-string team, featuring Mike Kopcip, its great kicking sophomore end; Al Blozis, the gigantic weight throwing tackle, and Ken McNichol, who is highly touted as a running back.

A brisk advance ticket sale plus the fact that no seats are reserved for this football innovation in the East, a crowd of between 12,000 and 20,000 is expected for the twin bill.

G. W. Frosh Open Season With Victory

George Washington University's freshman eleven opened its season in auspicious fashion yesterday by defeating Dickinson Seminary Prep, of Williamsport, Pa., 28-0, at Central Stadium. The Colonial Cubs showed lots of power, scoring in the second, third and fourth periods.

The first frosh score came in the second quarter on a beautiful 55-yard pass from Don Pinnow, star G. W. halfback, to George Craig.

Two long runs after pass interceptions brought touchdowns in the third period. Bud Wright dashed 40 yards after snagging one enemy aerial and Zipp Zimmerman, former Central High player, ran 65 yards for the second.

Pinnow plowed over from the 5-yard line for the final touchdown. He smashed the line for the extra point after the first touchdown and Dan Snyder, hefty tackle, split the bars on the last three.

Coach Ray Hanken, of G. W., used 35 men in this smashing debut as a frosh coach. G. W. was beaten by Dickinson Prep last year, 33-0.

Tartans on Scene For Temple Game

Philadelphia, Oct. 6 (AP).—Carnegie Tech's Tartans arrived here today with Coach Bill Kern refusing to predict his heavily favored eleven would win from Temple tomorrow in the ninth renewal of their football series.

"The squad is in good physical condition and I think perhaps our players can finish on the long end of the count, but it remembers the game of 1937 (when Temple won, 7-0), so I'm not going out on the limb and say we'll win for certain," said Kern.

Coach Fred Swan is expected to start the same line-up for Temple that began last week's 3-2 defeat by Georgetown.

Special Dispatch to The Post

Baltimore, Oct. 6.—With 45 seconds remaining to play in the final period, Larry McCormick dashed 65 years to a touchdown here today to give Severn High a 12-7 football victory over Gilman High.

McCormick, a Tennessee boy, also scored the winners' first touchdown on a gallop of 80 yards. Gilman's score came in the third period after a 50-yard sustained drive.

SUPERMAN — The Superman Is Here! — By Jerry Siegel and Joe Shuster

GOOD HEAVENS! IT'S A CHILD
ATTENDANTS, UNAWARE THE CHILD'S PHYSICAL STRUCTURE IS MILLIONS OF YEARS ADVANCED OF THEIR OWN, ARE ASTOUNDED AT HIS FEATS OF STRENGTH!
WHEN MATURITY WAS REACHED, CLARK KENT DISCOVERED HE COULD EASILY LEAP 1/8 OF A MILE . . . HURDLE A TWENTY STORY BUILDING . . . RAISE TREMENDOUS WEIGHTS . . . RUN FASTER THAN AN EXPRESS TRAIN . . . AND THAT NOTHING LESS THAN A BURSTING SHELL COULD PENETRATE HIS SKIN!
EARLY, CLARK DECIDED HE MUST TURN HIS TITANIC STRENGTH INTO CHANNELS THAT WOULD BENEFIT MANKIND
AND SO WAS CREATED SUPERMAN!

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

It is good to see "The British Bridge Magazine" carrying on though it has lost its founder and editor, A. E. Manning Foster. This magazine, oldest of the bridge publications, long has been the standard in fine make-up and interesting articles. Mr. Foster's widow, aided by the capable members of the staff, is continuing the publication so dear to British bridge players.

G. Melville Smith is still presenting the quizzes, and today's questions are taken from a recent test. The answers, to be found at the foot of the column, are his, and if you disagree consider that English bidding theories are sometimes different from ours.

1. Both sides vulnerable. North is dealer and holds:

♠ A K 6 3
♡ A Q J 9 7 4

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♡	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
3 ♡	Pass	4 NT.	Pass

(a) What might North say now?
(b) Why?

Today's Hand

Both Sides Vulnerable
NORTH DEALER

	♠ A ♡ Q 10 9 8 ◇ A K 6 4 ♣ A 7 5 2
♠ 10 9 7 6 ♡ 5 3 ◇ J 3 ♣ Q 9 8 6	NORTH WEST EAST SOUTH	♠ K Q J 8 ♡ 4 2 ◇ 5 ♣ K 3
	♠ None ♡ A K 7 6 4 2 ◇ 8 7 3 2 ♣ K J 10	◇ J 10 9 5

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ◇	1 ♠	2 ♡	Pass
4 ♡	Pass	5 ◇	Pass
5 ♡	Pass	6 ♡	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: 10 ♠

2. This is a speed test. Look at the North-South cards in today's box. The final contract is six hearts. West leads the ten of spades. What discard do you make from the South hand? You have ten seconds in which to make up your mind.

Answers to Quiz

1. (a) Seven spades.
(b) For discards on hearts.

2. South should discard a low diamond. By doing so he can make sure of his contract, whether he guesses the queen of clubs or not, for even if one club is lost, dummy's ace of clubs will let South discard another diamond.

Many players decide on a club discard so as to insure no club losers. But the four-one split in diamonds results in two losers.

Chapter 14

SOMEONE was coming toward him. He looked around to see Susan Barney. She was alone. She had taken off her hat, and as she walked, was swinging it in one ungloved hand. Her forward motion set her hair to stirring and lifting around her face, like a cloud. Mr. Hulme thought coolly of something he must be sure to say to her before he forgot it, and called, "Oh Susan, wait a minute." She stood where she was, her eyes tranquilly bent on him as he approached. He took off his hat, looked down at her, and said kindly, "You know I told you yesterday that I seldom could make any kind of a guess about what young people are like? Well, as far as your sister Delia goes, I was mistaken. I had a little talk with her this afternoon while you and my aunt were in the kitchen, and I was struck with her brains. She's a very unusually bright girl." After an instant's pause in which he thought, "Susan may not like this very well, since she herself is not brilliant and has only been to normal school," he went on, "What you specially wanted to know was—wasn't it—whether you ought to make a great effort to give her a college education. I should say decidedly yes. It'd be a real waste of good gray matter to leave such a brain as hers with no more than a normal school training. Count on me to help you out on that, as far as I can. I'm always interested in a young person with a good headpiece."

In all his life, he thought, he had never seen anything so lovely as the lighted-up face lifted to his. The blazing October glo[ry] around them was a cheap show compared to the flame of pure self-forgetting joy which transfigured her to beauty—to great beauty.

She cried out his name, turning it into an exclamation of delight. "Oh, Mr. Hulme!" she said fervently, and laid a hand on her heart as she drew in a long breath. "Mr. Hulme!"

She gave him, out of her beautiful gray eyes, the long, melting, intimate look which once before had so deeply moved him; but now it was cut short by a rush of happy tears. She put up her hand to wipe them away. And then all he could see was her wide, generous mouth, quivering and tender.

He stood looking down at her as he had looked at her the day before in the dark schoolhouse corridor. He was in June—in May—in April—not October.

Her relief, her pride, her joy, her gratitude, had carried her beyond the bounds of Clifford good manners. She shook her head, she swallowed, she took down her hand and looking straight into his eyes, murmured a hasty apology for her ill-bred overemphasis on her affairs. "I didn't know—I wasn't sure—oh, I can't tell you how much obliged to you I am! You see, Delia's all I've got—of my own!"

"Why, her eyes are like an angel's eyes!" he thought distractedly.

"I must tell Delia!" cried the girl, and walked on quickly with her flowing legato step, leaving him to ecstasy and consternation.

SO THAT was the reason he had thought of buying an old house on a back road. And that was the house he meant to buy. So his mind, treacherously working in the dark for a new master, had played a trick on him. Astounded, deeply disturbed, he stood stock-still on the driveway, unseeing eyes fixed on the tennis players. It was a relief to them when, without finding fault with their strokes, he went on to his office in the academy building. Hearing through the open windows a moment later his single loud clap of laughter they wondered a little who was with him.

He was alone. He was laughing at himself, and rueful though his mirth was, it neutralized something in his consciousness that had been active and acid, and left him in a slack, neutral mood quite new to him. The afternoon mail was, as he had expected, heaped on his desk, but he did not give it a look. He dropped into a chair near a window, stretched out his long legs and clasped his hands back of his head, his eyes on a bank of clouds just showing above Hemlock Mountain. They were rising, but so slowly that their movement was imperceptible.

He did not see them but his eyes, dazzled by their sunlit whiteness, began to swim in a sort of hypnotic heaviness. He sat a long time gazing at nothing. The billowing thunderheads towered higher and higher until, unsubstantial though they were, they dwarfed old Hemlock itself. But he was lost in other clouds. Even when, still without a look at his work not done, he got to his feet, pulled down the coat rucked up around his neck by his long sprawl, put on his hat and took his stick, it was in a preoccupied musing way that he told himself, "Oh, well, the idea's a practical one, no matter what made it come into my head. Might as well go on with it."

He had not for a moment closed his eyes, not in the lightest shortest doze. But between his present mood and his brisk detached departure from the house after tea, there stretched a long dreamy gap like that made by a night's sleep.

This emotional passivity deepened, as the days went by, into an acquiescent fatalism that was not so much resigned as inattentive. His awareness, blurred as if his nerve-centers had been numbed by a mild anesthetic, did not return to its normal acuteness for several weeks. The objects, people, tasks in his daily round, usually crowding close, filling all the space around him with their multitudinous, trivial reality, dimmed and receded. If in his comings and goings of the next month he had found himself in the path of a charging bull he would have stepped aside, yes, but as if he were thinking of something else.

He had never in all his active life felt anything like this hazy relaxed state of suspended animation as a change from his usual purposeful tautness it was far from unpleasant. But if he had disliked it extremely he could not have aroused himself to try to shake it off.

IT WAS NOT until November had come and the dismantled maples stood knotted and brawny in their winter bareness, that the wind blew which drove out of his inner life those cloudy wreaths of mist and set over his head a sky of blue and gold. During that month everything had gone as usual, only more remote from him. He had slept, risen, worked, read something or other aloud on Sunday evenings in his living room; started the college preparatory English classes drearily grinding on the required Carlyle and Burke, and those less well-to-do students who did not expect to go to college, delightedly reveling in good modern authors; had been umpire in the autumn tennis meet; had read the Nation, the Times (to the accompaniment of his daily fit of rage over the spread of fascism and other reversions to barbarism) the Manchester Guardian, the National Educational Association Journal, the Ashley Record, Montaigne, Sir Thomas Browne, Wodehouse, O'Hara, Jane Austen, and the report of the last New England Head-Masters' Association's meeting; had conducted assembly every morning, trying with small hope of success to build of Emerson, Tolstoy, St. Francis, Plato, Buddha and Jesus Christ of Nazareth a dyke that would help protect the humanity of the young, lives in his charge from the storms of nationalistic savagery that would surely beat against them later; had steered the academy through a siege of head colds in the faculty, taking the class of an absent teacher, now in Latin, now in Algebra, now in French, now in American History, not disagreeably aware that this trivial feat contributed to keep up his local prestige; had pulled a helplessly amorous junior out of an entanglement with a tough, experienced, Polish man-eater who worked in the woolen mill at Clifford Depot; had passed Susan Barney many times on the street, on the stairs of his own house . . . "How do you do, Susan?" "How do you do, Mr. Hulme?" had been saturated to the bone with clicking eighteenth-century rhythms, Aunt Lavinia's fancy just then flitting between Haydn and Mozart; had told young Bowen bluntly that slushy as was some of the Romantic School language of the academy song, decent manners required him to swallow down that sneering laugh of his; yes, even over the idea that students of the academy were being taught "to scorn base Mammon's call:" had—with no fatigue at all, indeed scarcely noticing what he was doing—corrected 4 times 75 (he taught half of all the English classes) weekly compositions; had put down with a single one of his bleak looks the energetic attempt of the sex-crazy little New Jersey troublemaker to make trouble with him; had in this same preoccupied way played 37 sets of tennis with the manual training teacher, Peter Dryden, whose openly avowed life ambition was to beat T. C. three sets running; had indulged himself, in odd moments, his secret vice of refinishing old furniture, to the extent of scraping and sanding the legs of a Windsor chair; had had a thoroughly disagreeable encounter in which he had lost his head and come off very decidedly second best, with the hysterical mother of a problem boy; had arranged most of the dates for the winter basketball season; had just held in his own at tennis with lean old Henry Lane, who played better and better as he looked more and more like a combination of a death's head and the King of Sweden. The foreordained pattern of his year began to be filled in with the foreordained colors. But he saw none of it with his usual precision. He seemed to be looking past at it—at nothing in particular.

This same half-anesthetized unconcern had even carried him through the annual autumn meeting of the trustees without having to clench his hands in his pockets to keep from wringing the neck of Mr. Wheaton, although the spurious Vermontism of that Missouri, South Dakota, New York City man grew constantly more flamboyant.

"Let that old goslin'-head mention Ethan Allen just once more!" threatened Mr. Dewey alone for a moment with the principal. "Let me hear him say just one more word about preserving the sturdy Americanism of our mountain ancestors, and I'll sell out and move to Iowa!" He added ragingly, his cool philosophy quite gone, "If only Charlie Randall would keep his hat on his head where it belongs, 'stead of holdin' it in his hand when Wheaton's around—we might get somewhere." Mr. Randall was the third trustee, a former Clifford boy, now a mild, elderly, assiduously conforming clergyman from over the mountain.

IT TOOK Mr. Dewey about a week, always, to cool off after a trustees' meeting attended by Mr. Wheaton. Timothy Hulme gave him eight days. It was well toward the middle of November when he sat down by the old man one evening, instead of by Mrs. Washburn to whom as a penance he had been pointedly kind for four or five weeks. "Is it really true," he cast out his line toward Mr. Dewey with a carefully baited hook, "that as many as 15 or 20 families used to live up on the Crandall Pitch? Curious, isn't it, a whole community evaporating that way? How'd they ever happen to settle up there so far away?"

"Far away from what?" Mr. Dewey flung himself unsuspectingly upon the bait. "The only thing they were far away from was the railroad. And the Pitch was settled 60, 70 years before anybody had the idee of making the railroad deepo the center of the solar system. They settled there because they had sense enough to know it was a good place to live. Why, let me tell you, T. C., that's one of the best pieces of land in this town, and I don't know but the best. Not a sour square-inch in it. The red clover they used to grow there . . .! And up high that way, between the two mountains, they'd get a full hour more sunshine both ends of the day than anywhere else in Clifford. Far away nothing!"

His hurt accent sounded personal. Mr. Hulme reeled in some of his line and asked, "You can't remember, can you, when there were people still living up there?"

Mr. Dewey swung around in his chair to face him. "For the land of love, T. C., how long do you think it is since they moved off? I should say I could remember! 'Tain't more'n 50 years ago that—why, when I was a boy the best dances in town used to be in the Crandall Pitch schoolhouse. They'd built it big to get in all the children that went to school there. Seventy-five one winter, I've heard my mother say. When they were going to have a dance in it they'd take the benches out and pile 'em up in the woodshed. They were great on having good times. Used to brag that there were 45 couples within the sound of a conch horn. They could get up a dance between milking time and dark, any day.

Mr. Hulme, like everyone at the table, knew that in Clifford vernacular a "couple" meant a dancing couple.

"What place are you talking about, Mr. Dewey?" asked Peter Dryden. He was an ardent fisherman and thought his wanderings up and down brooks had taken him everywhere.

"Didn't you ever hear of the Crandall Pitch?" asked Mr. Dewey. It was a rhetorical question. Dryden was a York State man from whom nothing but ignorance was to be expected.

"Pitch?"

Mr. Hulme brought out concisely (for fear someone else would give it with prolixity) the explanation he had heard many times at the meetings of the Clifford Historical Society. "When the first settlers came in and divided up the land, they called some of the divisions 'pitches.' It's an old surveying term that hasn't been used much since the eighteenth century. The Crandalls, there were four brothers of them, settled on the broad flat high-lying plateau between Hemlock Mountain and Windward."

Oh, yes, indeed, the fisherman knew that place very well, had often fished down a brook that started up there. But, "There isn't a sign of any settlement up there now! Just steepletop and moss. And white birches coming in. You'd think there'd be something left if there's been houses and barns for as many people as that. The fallen timbers anyhow."

Mr. Dewey said heavily, "No, when they moved into the valley, they took the buildings to pieces mostly, the ones that were any good, and brought the timbers down in wintertime with ox teams when the sledding was good."

Per Capita Tax Increase Voted Down by A.F.L.

Taft Attacks NLRB And Legion Chief Assails Communists

Cincinnati, Oct. 6 (AP).—Delegates to the American Federation of Labor convention late today defeated a proposal to increase the per capita tax, by which the federation raises regular funds, from 1 to 2 cents per member per month.

The move followed an address by Senator Taft, Republican, of Ohio, who attacked the National Labor Relations Board and called for strict "cash-and-carry" and a substitute for embargo in the neutrality act.

Taft declared a new labor board should be appointed to administer the Wagner Act. The A. F. L. already has advanced such a proposal.

Kelly Attacks Communists

"In my opinion," the Senator said, "some of the decisions of the board have resulted in the grossest perversion of justice which this country has ever seen."

Raymond J. Kelly, national commander of the American Legion, told the convention "Communist inspired cliques" were seeking to control the labor movement, making industrial peace almost impossible of achievement.

In his first speech since his election by the legion last week, Kelly pointed to disclosures before the Dies committee purporting to describe Communist activities in labor ranks, and added:

"Those who would implant foreign revolutionary doctrines in the ranks of honest and law-abiding workingmen must be trampled until they can never rise again."

Briton Address Delegates

Kelly declared peaceful employer-employe relations in this country were more imperative than ever before to convince foreign nations the time was not ripe to take advantage "of what they might believe to be a strife-torn America."

Herbert H. Elvin, fraternal delegate from the British Trade Union Congress, outlined to the convention the views of British labor toward war and peace, and said the League covenant must be restored to bring about international justice in world politics, economics and social life.

Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia of New York City voiced his hope at the convention that President Roosevelt's latest appeal for peace in labor's ranks "will be heeded."

LaGuardia said President Roosevelt was a "sincere friend of labor" who could see the dangers that might come to a divided labor movement.

The New York executive, given the noisiest demonstration of the convention, urged the need for improved and uniform old-age pensions, a child labor law, and a shorter work day and work week.

Josef, Zoo's Finest Lion, Dies Of Starvation, Food All Around

JOSEF

Death by starvation was the fate of Josef, finest lion in National Zoological Park and one of the best in captivity anywhere, an autopsy showed yesterday.

A night watchman found the handsome 13-year-old specimen, a gift of President Coolidge, lifeless in his cage early yesterday morning. Josef, pet of thousands of Zoo visitors—at a distance—had succumbed to an intestinal obstruction that literally starved him to death, despite the most tempting meats offered him.

The pride of Zoo Director William M. Mann, Head Keeper William H. Blackburne, and all who recognize a prize lion specimen, Josef was all alone when the end came. Even his mate, Johanna, and their daughter, Trilby, did not know of their loss until his remains were removed. The two females occupy the adjoining cage.

"Josef suffered from hyperplasia a chronic condition," said Dr. W. B. Shook, Bureau of Animal Industry pathologist who conducted an autopsy. "The small intestine was almost closed. He starved to death."

Dr. Mann said the animal had been ailing for more than a year. Since Saturday he had refused his food. Although the lion was starving, Dr. Shook explained, the intestinal condition made him lose his appetite.

The Zoo director eulogized the shaggy-maned, 350-pound beast as one of the finest lions in America. Josef was not exactly sociable with human beings, but he cavorted like a kitten when Dr. Mann or Blackburne approached his cage.

He was presented to President Coolidge in 1927 by the Mayor of Johannesburg, South Africa. (Hence the names Josef and Johanna).

Fred Snite Plans Trip to Miami

Chicago, Oct. 6 (AP).—Frederick Snite, jr., the young man in the "iron lung," plans to go traveling again.

A spokesman for the family said today Snite would leave for his father's home in Miami October 17. He will be accompanied by his bride of a few months, his parents and a staff of attendants.

Young Snite has spent most of the last three years in iron lungs and portable respirators, suffering from infantile paralysis.

Turks Find Hitler Offers No Hope Of Lasting Peace

Copyright by New York Times.

Istanbul, Turkey, Oct. 6.—According to reports from Angora, Turkey would remain neutral even if Russia should join in the war. The proposed treaty with Russia, it is said, would in no way affect relations between Turkey and Great Britain.

Turkish political circles that listened to Adolf Hitler's speech today, hoping to hear concrete peace proposals, were greatly disappointed, according to a dispatch from Angora.

They consider his statements devoid of coherence and offering not the slightest element encouraging discussions with a view to a cessation of hostilities and the conclusion of a lasting and just peace.

Group Plans Aid 250,000 Loyalists Stranded in France

Acute plight of 250,000 Spanish loyalist refugees, concentrated in France, was described by four speakers last night before 100 delegates to the Spanish Refuge Relief Campaign conference at a dinner meeting in the Hotel 2400.

The speakers were Clarence E. Pickett, executive secretary of the American Friends Service committee; Mrs. Gifford Pinchot, wife of the former Governor of Pennsylvania; the Rev. F. Reissig, executive secretary, Medical Bureau and North American Committee to Aid Spanish Democracy, and Douglas Jacobs, relief campaign director. Leon Henderson, Securities and Exchange Commissioner, presided

The dinner preceded the two-day conference which opens today at the Harrington Hotel. The conference will discuss means of aiding refugees, faced with new hardships now that France is at war, obtaining amnesty for the refugees and assuring their safety in repatriation, resettling the refugees in Latin-America.

Group Plans New Services For D. C. Blind

Association Also Seeks New Members; Frisbie Is Renamed Chairman

Exploration of new avenues of service to the sightless and to the community at large; betterment of its financial status and a membership increase are revealed in the yearly report of the District of Columbia Association of Workers for the Blind, released last night.

Published in both Braille and ordinary form for the first time, the report emphasizes the distribution and repairs on talking book machines and radios as one of the greatest contributions of the organization, a recognized social agency partially maintained through public finances, its activities conducted entirely by volunteer help.

Members of the Alpha Delta Sigma Phi, a local young business men's fraternity headed by Arthur Woody, and others, are praised for providing transportation for the talking book project, which sent 79 of the machines into homes of the blind, making a total of 320 now in service.

Coroner Calls Inquest After Autopsy Shows Head Hurt in Fight

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald last night ordered an inquest Monday into the death of Arthur J. McMahon, 73, who died in Sibley Hospital Thursday after a fight with a policeman.

Coroner MacDonald said an autopsy showed that McMahon had suffered head injuries and pneumonia. He withheld a death certificate.

McMahon was taken to Casualty Hospital September 29 after an alleged attack on Policeman R. D. McClue, First Precinct, who attempted to arrest the man in a Ninth street dance hall. He suffered cuts to his head, doctors said, but refused to remain at the hospital and signed a release. Four days later he became ill and died the next day at Sibley Hospital.

McClure told his superiors he was called to the night club by the manager. McMahon struck him in the face, the policeman said, adding it was necessary to use his blackjack to maintain the arrest.

McMahon, who lived at 2322 First street northwest, was charged with intoxication and assault on the policeman at the time. Despite his age, police said, the man was active and weighed more than 200 pounds. Private McClure is to appear at the inquest, MacDonald said.

Landon Backs Vote for Capper

Topeka, Kans., Oct. 6 (AP).—Alf M. Landon voiced "wholehearted" approval today of a proposal to give Kansas' votes at the 1940 Republican National Convention to Senator Arthur Capper.

The suggestion was made by William Allen White in his Emporia Gazette.

Brazil Will Replace Sunken Cargo for 1%

New York, Oct. 6 (AP).—If you buy a cargo of Brazil's coffee and somebody torpedoes your ship, Brazil will insure you a duplicate cargo of coffee. The offer, according to W. F. Williamson, secretary-manager of Associated Coffee Industries of America, is made by Brazil's National Coffee Dearment at one-half the quoted rate for regular underwriters and guaranteed never to run above 1 per cent the value of the cargo.

Southern Bishop Proclaims Union Of Methodists

By the Associated Press

Knoxville, Tenn., Oct. 6.—In a declaration, Bishop Paul Kern, of Nashville, today proclaimed the union of the Holston Conference of the Methodist Church, split 95 years ago by the slavery issue.

Nearly 3,000 ministers and laymen heard Bishop Kern read the historic declaration and listened intently while Dr. J. M. M. Gray, chancellor of American University of Washington, told them "there never can be an effective Christianity without a united church."

In its first business session, the conference approved reduction of the number of districts from 13 to 10, elected three ministers and three laymen to the general conference next April in Atlantic City and approved organization of several boards.

Roosevelt Delays Announcement of Shift of Andrews

Hyde Park, N. Y., Oct. 6 (AP).—A press conference held beside a special train which had brought President Roosevelt from Washington, produced a measure of support today for reports that Elmer F. Andrews, wage-hour administrator, would become alien property custodian and be succeeded by Col. Philip Fleming, of the Army Engineers.

The President was asked whether an announcement was being delayed because no nominations were being submitted to the Senate during the neutrality debate. He said that was one of the reasons.

Lawyers Urge Measures To Curb War Profiteers

The National Lawyers Guild last night made known its decision to support measures designed to take profits out of war and aid in keeping the United States at peace. A study to achieve these ends was announced by a committee of the National Executive Board of the Guild.

On the recommendation of its committee on taxation, the guild will ask Congress to enact a specific program for the immediate taxation of excess profits derived by American manufacturers and industrialists from the European struggle.
